They went into the ball-room together, Lady Rosedene watching anxiously. She had seen something in the widow's dark eyes that boded mischief. When Lady Fraser entered the ball-room—which she did an hour later than most of the others—all eyes were turned wonderingly toward her. The beauty of every other woman paled before the fire of hers. Art, elegance and luxury had exhausted themselves in her marvelous costume. She wore a dress of the palest green brocade, so pale as to be almost white; it was elaborately and beautifully trimmed with apple blossoms; and diamonds that shone like dew-drops were scattered over the blossoms. The lovely hues of the flowers were shown to perfection in the wreath on her glossy hair; diamonds shone in it, and a diamond cross sparkled like fire on her breast.

A low cry came from Hyacinth's lips when she saw Lady Fraser's dress. She remembered the scene about the apple blossoms. It seemed to the loving, wounded heart as though her beauty suddenly faded, and the light of her life went out.

Alan evidently understood all that Lady Fraser intended to convey. He laughed when he saw the flowers; he laughed when people teased him; and those who remembered the little scene assured him that he was much honored. He laughed again when Lady Fraser raised her face to his.

"You will dance with the apple blossoms, if you do not with me," she said; and the heart of the girl who loved him stood still with jealous rage, with hot bitter pain.

Once during the evening the two rivals stood together. Lady Fraser said to Hyacinth:

"How well Mr. Branston dances! I am longing for a waltz with him."

"He does not waltz," said Hyacinth, coldly.

"You will see," the widow laughed. "You have forgotten all I told you about lovers' vows. He will waltz with me, I am sure."

Later on he did so; and Lady Rosedene, who was talking to Hyacinth, was startled by the spasm of pain that crossed the fair young face.

When the girl saw that, although the waltz was over, Alan remained talking to Lady Fraser, her jealousy became unbearable.

"Good-night, Lady Rosedene," she said. "I cannot bear it. I shall go home to-morrow, and then I shall suffer no longer. I—I shall kill her if she takes my lover from me!"

The last glimpse that Lady Rosedene and several of the visitors had of her that evening was when she left the ball-room with a pretty blue-and-white shawl thrown round her shoulders. No one knew that she flung the shawl away as she passed through the hall to go to her room.

CHAPTER XIV.

Afterward every detail of that night was remembered—from Hyacinth's passionate cry, "I shall kill her if she takes my lover from me," to the insignificant occurrence that, while the ball wss at its height, a stranger had called and asked if Lady Fraser was staying at the Hall. Hearing that she was there, he had said that he would call on the morrow. Long afterward one of the footmen, who was not quite sober at the time, remembered that this stranger had spoken of the size of the Hall and of the situation of the visitor's rooms.

Alan was the first to miss Hyacinth from the ball-room. He went at once to Lady Rosedene, who told him frankly the cause of her absence.

"If she is really cross," he said, "it is of no use of my sending any message to her."

Lady Rosedene looked gravely at him.

"I think you are to blame," she said. "If I were in your place, I should not spend so much time with Lady Fraser."

He laughed carelessly.

"I shall not be much troubled," he replied, "when Lady Fraser's visit ends. She amuses me almost against my own will; but I love my darling."

"Then why vex her?" asked Lady Rosedene, quickly.

"I do not—that is, she ought not to be vexed. She knows I love her, and she ought to trust me," said Alan. "I shall be glad when Lady Fraser is gone; I have had a presentiment of evil ever since she has been here."

The last they saw of Lady Fraser that evening was when she stood in all the brilliant glow of her beauty, talking to Alan. The light from the great chandelier fell on her beautiful face and imperial figure—on her diamonds, her rich dress, and the lovely apple-blossoms. She was talking to him, and saying to herself that she liked him far better than any one she had seen, and that, if it could be managed, she would be the Lady of Elmsthorpe, instead of the child who showed her jealous pain in her face.

Her dark eyes flashed and her red lips smiled as she bade him good-night. She said good-night also to Lady Rosedene; but the mistress of Dene was not very cordial to her; she could not forget the pain on Hyacinth's face or the despair in her voice.

"Gertrude," she said, somewhat sharply, "do you remember the old saying, 'Do as you would be done by?'"

Lady Fraser laughed a careless, musical laugh.

"I remember many quaint old sayings, but I never apply them to myself," she answered; and, as she hastened away, some of the apple-blossoms that had been fastened to her dress fell to the ground.

"They are all rather cross with me," said Lady Fraser to herself, as she reached her own room. "I do not care. I like him, and I shall win him for myself if I can."

It was long after midnight, and the whole household was wrapt in slumber. There was no sign left of the brilliant ball; the last carriage had driven away, the tired dancers, and the still more tired servants had gladly sought rest. Lady Fraser alone felt no fatigue; she was full of high spirits and exultation: her brain seemed to burn with the different plans that came into her mind. Her maid took the jewels from her hair and her breast, and then she opened her window that the cool air might take the fever from her.

As she leaned her head out in the moonlight, a man standing watching uttered a low cry.

"It is herself!" he exclaimed. "Now I shall see."

She did not remain there many minutes, but quickly closed her window, still smiling to think what she would and could do.

She had been for some time moving quietly about her room when a noise as of some one throwing sand or gravel at the window attracted her attention. At first she thought it was fancy. But it was repeated again and again. Such signals could not have been quite unknown to her, for she suddenly grew deadly pale.

She went to the window and opened it. The man then stood underneath. He looked up, and in the moonlight their eyes met.

"You know me?" he said briefly.

A low cry of wonder and dismay came from her lips.

"Is it you, Andrea?" she asked.

"Yes; I want to speak to you; you must come to me. Do you hear? I make no prayer; I say only you must come to me."

"I cannot," she answered, with a low moan. "I cannot get out of the house."

"You must—I repeat that you must. I have looked half England over to find you, and now I will see you—now—here—to-night."

"I cannot, Andrea. Be reasonable; come to-morrow. I dare not," she moaned.

"I say come. You need not fear; only cowards fear. You think I shall hurt you; on my honor I will not. You know my power over you—do not hesitate. If you come now and speak with me, you shall return to your room unhurt, but I must have speech with you. I am a desperate man. If you refuse, I shall wake up the house and declare before all that which you know and I know. Quick—your choice?"

"I will come," she said.

She did not wait even to gather together the long, dusky hair that lay over her shoulders. She opened the door of her room, which was near the grand staircase, and looked out cautiously. There was no sound, nothing but darkness and silence. She knew of a side door which opened with but little trouble into the grounds. If she could use that, she could get out in silence and no one would hear her.

Cautiously she made her way down stairs. In the hall lay a blue and white shawl. She lifted it and threw it over her head, then noiselessly unfastened the door and went out.

The cool, sweet night air greeted her. Passing round the western end of the house, she met the stranger face to face. He seized her with almost savage force.

"I knew you would come," he said. "I am a desperate man. You lured me on to love you. You laughed at me when I asked you to marry me. I have searched half England to find you; and now I shall never leave you until you promise to be my wife. You may look at me. You think me mad. I may be. I have been mad, they say, since you played with me. But I am sane now, and you must listen to me."

She foresaw that she had a hard battle to fight, and that she must do the best she could.

What took place between them no one ever knew. What was the secret of his power over her no one ever understood. She walked with him for more than an hour, and then she raised a white, tired face to his.

"You will let me go now, Andrea," she said. And he watched her as she re-entered the house.

The beauty and exultation had all left her now. She undressed hurriedly, and flung herself, tired in body and mind, upon the bed.

She drew the blue-and-white shawl from her head, and folded her hands in it. Soon the dark eyes closed, and the beautiful woman slept. Soon dreams gave her back happiness, and she smiled while her hands lay warm and still, and folded in the pretty shawl.

What that night saw only heaven knew; but one thing was quite certain—day never dawned for her.

* * * * * * * * *

It was late the next morning when the household began to stir. Lady Fraser's maid, Julie, waited some time before she knocked at her mistress's door, and then there came no answer. She went away thinking that her mistress slept and did not wish to be disturbed. But the morning wore on, and she grew anxious at last. She could hear no sound, and could get no answer. She went in search of Lady Rosedene, who smiled when she heard the maid's story, but finally shared her anxiety. They went together to the widow's room, but all endeavors to rouse the sleeper were ineffectual.

"We must have the door opened," said Lady Rosedene, with a pale, scared face. "What can be the matter?"

They fetched the butler, an old confidential servant of Lady Rosedene's, and he broke open the door.

Then followed the wailing and shrieking of women, speedily succeeded by the horror and anger of men. For the beautiful Lady Fraser lay dead, stabbed to the heart—stabbed in such a manner that she must have suffered little pain. Her closed hands clutched Hyacinth Vane's shawl, and to the fringe of the shawl was fastened one of the blue cornflowers that she had worn on her dress. The servants tried to remove the shawl, but the dead hands clasped it with the clasp of death.

To one and all the same awful thought came. The young girl who had threatened her rival's life had surely accomplished her end; and there in the dead woman's hand, by the will of heaven, was left the proof of her guilt. Her own words rang in all ears—"I shall kill her if she takes my lover from me!"

CHAPTER XV.

Dene Hall was filled with consternation. Colonel Halle undertook the superintendence; Lady Rosedene was quite incapacitated. All that she could say was: "I knew evil would come of it."

Even in the midst of her sorrow and dismay, she had time to reflect that her prestige was ended—that never again would people speak with satisfaction of her home. A murder had been committed there—a beautiful woman had been cruelly slain in the middle of the night. Instead of being the admiration of the whole county her home would henceforth be shunned as the scene of a most cruel tragedy.

Colonel Halle, by dint of hard words, brought her back to reason.

"It is clearly," he said, "a case of murder, and the laws of the land must be obeyed; no one must touch the body or enter the room."

The last injunction came too late. When the rush of terrified women came, they disturbed the ornaments on the toilet table, and no one remembered whether the window was found open or shut; all that was known was that the dead woman grasped the shawl in her hands as though she had grasped it in her last struggle.

Colonel Halle forbade its removal. He sent away the weeping women, he kept a watch on the chamber of the dead. He was a strong man and a grave soldier, but his eyes filled with tears as he picked up from the ground the beautiful spray of apple-blossom that had been worn on the white breast now stilled for evermore.

Very quickly the detectives came, and the whole ghastly machinery of the law was set in force.

No one ever knew who first uttered the fatal words.

"She must be guilty; her shawl was in the dead woman's hand."

Several guests of her own sex, with some of the women-servants, sought Miss Vane. No one could tell in the afterdays who was the first to enter the room where the girl stood in her white dressing-robe, her hair falling like a veil over her, her face colorless as that of the dead woman's, a terrible fear in her eyes, her white lips dumb. She leaned back against the wall, with her hand held out, as though to ward off some terrible blow. Who entered first, who said first that she was guilty, who revealed that she had said over and over again that she would slay Lady Fraser if she took her lover from her, who repeated the last words that she had uttered in the ball-room, when she had hastened away with the blue-and white shawl round her shoulders, which was now clasped in the dead woman's hand, was never known.

The storm gathered, and the young girl stood there breasting it alone. Her own sex shrunk from her with scorn, with horror in their eyes, with fear in their faces. The room seemed full of whispers.

"She is so young," said one; "could she be so cruel?"

"She looks so fragile," remarked another; "it is a wonder that she possessed the strength."

"Hate is strong," was the answer; "and she hated her rival because she was jealous of her."

And all the time they spoke these words Hyacinth stood dumb and motionless, with unutterable woe in her white face.

She never moved, until attracted by the crowd, Alan entered the room and saw her, the mark for all suspicion. She sprung to him, regardless of who saw or heard her; she flung herself upon his breast; she clasped her arms around his neck.

"Oh, Alan, save me!—help me! Send them away; they say I killed her!" And the words were wailed out in a voice that filled some of them with pain.

He gathered her to him; he kissed the sweet, despairing face.

"No one shall say so, my darling; I will take you away. No one thinks you did it; it is women's foolish talk. You shall go home; I will take you. Leave the room," he said to the ladies and women servants who had gathered there. "Hyacinth, get ready to return to your father. I will stand outside here at the door and see that no one molests you." He raised one white, cold hand to his lips and kissed it. "My darling," he added, "those sweet hands would not knowingly take the life of anything."

But, when she tried to arrange her dress her hands trembled so that one of the women-servants had to help her. She was not long, however, before she was ready; but, when Alan led her from the room, he was stopped by a stern-faced officer of the law.

"That lady cannot leave the house, sir. I have a warrant for her apprehension of the murder of Lady Fraser."

"You are mad," said Alan, "or, rather, those who granted such a warrant are mad."

The officer was immovable.

"I am very sorry, sir; I must obey orders. The lady cannot leave this house. When she does it will be to go to Ulverston jail."

Those who saw the scene that followed will never forget it. The officer produced the warrant for Hyacinth's apprehension—he had ridden to the nearest magistrate for it; and the girl, her fair young face as white as death, clung to her lover, crying out that he must save her. Alan, mad with shame and despair, sent for Lady Rosedene, who came with Col. Halle.

"You cannot allow such an injustice as this," he said; "it is too cruel! This young lady is under your care, Lady Rosedene. They shall trample my dead body under foot before they touch her!"

A voice rose from the crowd of women:

"She killed Lady Fraser because she was jealous of her."

When Alan Branston heard the words, they smote him like a sword. The arm that had gathered her closely to him fell by his side. She raised her despairing eyes to his face.

"Oh, my love, my love!" she cried; "surely, if all the world fails me, you will not?"

Lady Rosedene's words bore fatal witness against her young visitor.

"I never thought you meant it, Hyacinth," she said, "although I believe she drove you mad with jealousy."

"I may have been mad," replied the girl, calmly; "I do not remember what I said; but I take heaven to witness that I never injured Lady Fraser."

"If you are innocent," said Col. Halle, "you will be able to prove it at the right time and in the right place." He, for one, evidently believed in the girl's guilt.

The terrible scene was shortened by Col. Halle. Under some pretext he drew Alan away, and during his absence Hyacinth Vane was removed under the charge of the police officer.

The details of the terrible tragedy at Dene Hall were soon known all over the land. The newspapers discussed it fully; every illustrated paper had a view of Dene Hall; every variety of style was used in describing the tragedy—the pathetic, the sentimental, the monitory; but one and all of the writers agreed that it was the most awful crime of modern times. How greedily people read the story of the handsome young squire, who had so truly loved the young girl, although, man-like, he had thought it no treason to flirt with another woman. How they wondered about the young girl, who was said to have the face of a goddess. How they talked of the brilliant woman who had tried to lure the young lover away.

It was the old story, they said—love, jealousy and madness. No one seemed to doubt Hyacinth's guilt—she must have done the deed. So the public read and talked, while at Dene Hall the dreary tragedy moved on. There was an inquest, and the verdict was "willful murder." Then most of the visitors left Dene Hall. Col. Halle, at Lady Rosedene's request, remained.

The saddest part of the tragedy was to come. Alan Branston determined that Francis Vane should not hear the intelligence from any one but himself, and he went over to see him. He lived out of the world, this scholar who had been so true to one love; but the moment his eyes fell on the young squire's face he cried out:

"There is something wrong with my daughter!"

Alan tried to tell him gently, to break the news to him softly; but from the first moment in which he clearly understood, there was death in his face. He spoke at last, but his words were few.

"My daughter is in prison, you tell me, charged with the murder of the woman of whom you made her jealous?"

"Alas, it is so!" said Alan. "I would rather be dead myself than be telling this to you."

"And were I in your place I would rather be dead than saying it."

* * * * * * * *

The tragedy was deepened when people heard that Francis Vane, scholar and gentleman, was found dead on his wife's grave. There was a smile on his face when they raised him, as though he knew the truth.

CHAPTER XVI.

Hyacinth Vane's trial, while it lasted, occupied the attention of all England; there had not been so much sensation there had been no such sensation for years. There had been cases of poisoning and horrible murders, but nothing like this—a young and beautiful girl in her jealousy had slain the woman she believed to be her rival.

It was a trial that had been expected for many months; but the prisoner had been seriously ill, and it had been delayed until she was well enough to appear at the bar of justice.

The March Assizes at Ulverston were the general subject of conversation; every one was on the alert. The grand jury found a true bill, and Hyacinth Vane was to be tried for her life for the willful murder of Lady Fraser.

Hyacinth's father was dead, and, but for Alan, she would have been alone in the world. He would have lavished his whole wealth in her defense. He employed the cleverest and most eloquent counsel; he left no stone unturned; he wore himself to a shadow in his efforts—but circumstantial evidence was too strong for him.

The day of the trial came, and from all parts of England people went to see the heroine of the Dene Hall tragedy. There had been nothing like the excitement for years.

The evidence against the prisoner was strong. Ladies of unimpeachable veracity came forward and said that they had heard the prisoner threaten that she would slay the deceased if she took her lover from her; and those words, spoken by the girl in the mad frenzy of jealousy, meaning nothing then, had a very different and far more horrible sound when repeated in a court of justice. She had been heard to threaten Lady Fraser. A dozen witnesses could swear to the ill-feeling there was between the two. On the night of the murder they had quarreled; Hyacinth had been heard to say that she would kill her rival if she took her lover from her. It was next proved that after those few sharp words Hyacinth left the ball-room with the blue-and-white shawl round her shoulders; the same shawl was found clinched in the dead woman's hands, and fastened to it was one of the blue cornflowers Miss Vane had worn.

The evidence was strong; no one else had even a faint dislike to the hapless lady. The crime had never been committed for booty; her jewelry was lying about, but not even a ring had been touched. There was no possible motive to be assigned save jealousy; there was no one jealous but Hyacinth Vane. The evidence as to the shawl found in the murdered woman's hands proved that Hyacinth Vane must have been with her when she died; therefore she must have killed her.

So argued the prosecution; so thought the jury; and in defense what was there to be said? Most eloquent appeals were made by the clever counsel employed. They spoke of the prisoner's youth and beauty; they tried to show how impossible it was that a girl so young, so fragile, so weak, could have been guilty of so gross a crime. They made the most of one point—the absence of a weapon; but from the first it was evident that the trial was going against her. Perhaps her youth and beauty, instead of pleading for her, were against her. The jury had to steel themselves.

The evidence has told against her; one could read it in the faces of the jurymen, which grew graver and sadder—in the face of the judge, which was sorrowful with a great sorrow—in the weeping eyes of women and the bent brows of stern men.

The time came when the short sunshine of the March day was over, and a dull, yellow light filled the court—when the jury went out to consider their verdict, and the prisoner, white and cold as death, was led from the dock. The jury were absent for more than an hour, and when they returned it was to a scene no one ever forgot. Through the large windows could be seen the darkening sky, and the hoarse murmur of the crowd surrounding the court could be plainly heard. Tier after tier of eager faces was lifted, all eyes were bent in one direction. The gas had been lighted, and threw a curious livid hue on the hundreds of assembled faces. The one object of interest was Robbed the Grave.

A startling incident, of which Mr. John Oliver of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in my back and sides, no appetite, gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately a friend advised trying Electric Bitters; and to my great joy and surprise the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they saved my life and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50 cts., guaranteed, at W. A. Schreiter, Drug Store.

Many hundreds of physicians depend upon the use of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure in stomach troubles. It digest what you eat, and allows you to eat all the food you need, providing you do not overload your stomach. Gives instant relief and a permanent cure. W. A. Schreiter.

Do not get scared if your heart troubles you. Most likely you suffer from indigestion. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digest what you eat and gives the worn out stomach perfect rest. It is the only preparation known that completely digest all classes of food; that is why it cures the worst cases of indigestion and stomach troubles after everything else has failed. It may be taken in all conditions and cannot help but do good. W. A. Schreiter.

At a recent meeting of arboriculturists in France, the question was debated whether spiders should be suffered to spin their webs on fruit walls. The general opinion seemed to be that the webs were more useful than objectionable. It was remarked that they prevent the incursions of earwigs and similar insects, and also interfere with the operations of noxious flies whose larvae ravage leaves and fruits.

Death of Cockroaches.

One of the bulletins of the Department of Agriculture mentions a simple Australian remedy for cockroaches. It consists in feeding the insects upon a mixture of flour and plaster of Paris which, it is said, they greedily devour. The plaster of Paris "sets" after they have swallowed it, and that is the end of them.

Scientific Jottings.

The Empire State Sugar company, which is building a large sugar plant at Lyons, N. Y., has ordered ten auto-trucks of five tons capacity, which are to be used to cart sugar beets from the farms to the refinery. The company has 5,500 acres of land contracted for. Three electric omnibuses have also been ordered to run between Lyons and Sodus Point, on Lake Ontario, a summer resort, to compete with the steam railroad.

On the Jumna canal, at Delhi, monkeys swarm upon the banks and, being overcrowded and consequently unhealthy, they suffer considerable from various diseases. When one monkey is obviously ill a few of the larger monkeys watch for a favorable opportunity and then push it into the canal. If the poor creature be not drowned at once, it is thrown into the water again after it regains the trees, or else it is forced to keep aloof from the rest of the company.

Loss of human life by lightning in the United States during the year 1899 was greater than any preceding year for which statistics have been collected, says the Scientific American. The number of persons killed outright or who suffered injuries which resulted in their death was 562; the number of those who received injuries varying in severity from slight physical shocks to painful burns and temporary paralysis was 820. The greatest number of fatalities, about 45 per cent, were in the open. The next greatest number occurred in houses, about 34 per cent; 11 per cent occurred under trees and 9 per cent in barns. Fully a dozen persons were killed in the act of stripping clothes from a wire clothes line or coming near to one.

THE STATE CAMPAIGN.

"We've got them," said Tams Bixby, chairman of the republican executive committee, as he comfortably leaned back in his chair at headquarters Friday and lighted a fresh cigar. "Everything is coming our way. You may say for me that if conditions remain as they are now and we get the full republican vote we shall win a handsome victory all along the line. By a full vote I mean one as large or larger than that of 1896. I expect to see it larger, though bad weather may cut it down. With a full vote and conditions remaining unchanged Van Sant will be elected governor by about 20,000 plurality, McKinley will pull out of the state with 40,000 or better, the state ticket will go through with a whoop. Mark my word, John Lind is beaten. We shall elect five congressmen, Tawney, McCleary, Heatwole, Stevens and Fletcher, with the greatest ease. Eddy has a hard and close fight on his hands, but I hope to see him win. Morris has the next hardest fight, but there is no doubt of his re-election.

L. A. Rosing, chairman of the democratic state central committee, said that he was willing to match his prediction against Mr. Bixby's. He said: "Lind will certainly be re-elected governor. I do not consider that open to question. I think the vote will be somewhat smaller than in 1896, but whether large or small Lind will be re-elected by about 20,000. I do not claim the state for Bryan, but I do say that the conditions are such as he may carry it. As sporting men say, "It is in the cards." We shall certainly elect Daly to congress in the seventh and Truelsen in the sixth. The outlook is encouraging in other districts, but I consider that the prospects in the first are more favorable to us. Tawney has the fight of his life on his hands. I should say to day if I had to pick a winner that L. L. Brown would be the next congressman from the first district."

The full vote that Mr. Bixby is counting on should be somewhere between 340,000 and 360,000. In the election of 1896 there were altogether 343.319 voters. Of these all but 2,000 voted for the presidential electors. The total vote for governor was only 4,000 less than the vote for president, being 337,329. On this vote Clough beat Lind by 3,700.

O. T. Tandberg spent Sunday in St. Hilaire and Rocksbury, among his old friends and neighbors, and finds them as strong in his support as ever and anxious that he should continue as treasurer of Red Lake county for at least two years longer. And while this must be gratifying to Mr. Tandberg, still it is only his just due. He has been a competent, courteous, and obliging officer, and these facts are appreciated. Mr. Tandberg is not a politician, and does not claim to carry the votes of other men in his vest pocket, but when it comes to having staunch friends and many of them he is not far behind, and he is equally popular in all parts of the county.

The three cornered fight for Representative in this district is an interesting one. S. A. Swanson, of this city, is developing much strength, and there is little doubt of his election. He is a good man for the place.

Wharton Barker, who is running for president on the Mid-road Populist ticket, says his party will poll a million votes in the coming election.

J. T. Knight, the Father of Red Lake county, is the people's choice for judge of probate.

OLD WHEAT FLOUR.

Yes, we have it. We are still milling old wheat. We had a very large stock in store at our different elevators, and we bought out all that we could find in other elevators, so that we will have old wheat enough to mill on for the next 20 days. So many have asked us within the last three or four weeks if they could get old wheat flour by coming to the mill, and a good many have laid in their year's supply of flour, fearing that the new wheat flour would not be as good as the old. The new wheat flour will be all right in 30 or 60 days, when it is thoroughly cured in the stack. We have not tried milling any of the local wheat yet. Now be sure when you are buying or Exchanging, if you want old wheat flour, to call for "Mascot" or "Favorite" made by the Red Lake Falls Milling Co. Even though your wheat is a little damp or tough we will give you as good a flour for it, although we cannot give you quite as much flour for it as if you had No. 1 Hard. We carry a stock of this old wheat flour at all our elevators. Remember this fact; That we are the only mill to-day in the Northwest that is grinding a strictly all old wheat flour. All the little mills in the country have run out of old wheat long ago, and are offering a premium of 5 cents per bushel for wheat that is suitable to mill.

We have not advanced the price of flour or the rate of Exchange.

Ripe Strawberries in October.

Messrs. Wood and Ganss, of the Union Land Company, were not in business here long when they discovered that Red Lake county is one of the most wonderful sections in the north west, and to prove it they are exhibiting a bottle full of ripe, delicious strawberries that they have just gathered 2½ miles from town. The land on which these berries grew, and much beside, may be bought through these enterprising gentlemen. A section which can produce this phenomenon is entitled to the attention of landseekers.

THE HOUSEKEEPER.

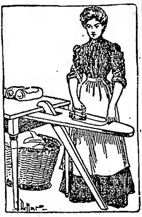
Teaching Household Economics—A New Ironing Board—To Can Peaches.

Household economics are taking a prominent place in the educational movement of today. Marietta college, in Ohio, has a commodious house built expressly for the household economic class, limited to 25 in number, that the course may be thoroughly practical and not overcrowded. It has a normal course of two years for those who wish to be teachers and a shorter course for those who wish the instruction merely for personal reasons.

The summer school of the University of Minnesota has a large class in domestic economy, and, indeed, colleges and public schools all over the country have the household economic course in some form. In many high schools, as well as in the grammar schools, cookery is a recognized study, and in Binghamton, N. Y., household sanitation is added. In Utica, N. Y., cooking is obligatory for girls in the seventh and eighth grades and elective in the High school. The High school at Warren, Pa., has a graded course of three years, which covers marketing, serving and the chemistry of foods, in addition to cooking. In Pueblo, Colo., hygiene and home nursing are taught also, and in the State Normal school at Greeley, Colo., the domestic science work includes sanitation, economic botany and bacteriology as it relates to domestic economy. Denver teaches in the Manual Training High school ventilation, sanitation and general care of the house, as well as cookery. The domestic science department has been for 17 years a conspicuous feature of the Chautauqua scheme.

A New Ironing Board.

The object of this invention is the production of an ironing board which can be detachably secured to the edge of a kitchen table, a window sill, cleat on the wall or other convenient support. The board is of very simple construction, as a glance at the picture will show, there being one leg to rest in a slanting position on the floor, with a pivot pin at one end of the board, in which the upper end of the leg is fastened. The leg projects above the board and is formed into a jaw, which grips the table or window sill, the board extending horizontally from the the underside of the support to form the other side of the grip. It can be readily seen that the jaws will adjust themselves to a board of any thickness and the grip of the jaws will retain the board perfectly rigid. The main advantage of the board, however, is the readiness with which skirts and other circular garments can be placed in position for ironing, the free outer end of the board allowing the skirt to be slipped into position and revolved to smooth all sides without the necessity of lifting the board.



CONVENIENT FOR SKIRTS AND SHIRTS.

Eat Plenty of Vegetables.

The housekeeper who is looking after the health of her family as well as their pleasure should give considerable of her attention in these days to the vegetables. Every one is better for eating plenty of vegetables, and they are so plentiful and look so inviting that it does not require any effort to follow this rule.

If you do not care how much your market bill amounts to, there are all sorts of comparatively high priced delicacies, and then, on the other hand, if you want to be economical you will not find it difficult to do so and still have plenty of good vegetables.

Creamed Green Corn.

A very appetizing way of serving green corn is to cream it. Cut the corn from half a dozen ears, or, rather, scrape it, using the back of the knife for that purpose. Mix with the corn a half cupful of bread crumbs. Beat up one egg and mix it with one tablespoonful of butter, reduced to a cream, and a teaspoonful of sugar. Add a half cupful of milk and salt and pepper for seasoning. Add this mixture to the corn and crumbs, mix well together and put into little baking dishes; add a layer of seasoned crumbs to each and bake 20 minutes.

To Can Peaches.

An easy and wholly satisfactory way to can peaches, according to the woman who describes it, is as follows: The fruit is peeled, halved and pitted. Then, if the peaches are rather sour, glass cans are filled, with a little sugar laid in the bottom and again half way up the can. Afterward the cans are set, uncovered, in a pan of water in the open oven and allowed to heat slowly. When the contents have sunk perhaps an inch, the cans are taken out, filled with hot sirup and at once sealed.

Dated Sept. 11th A. D. 1900.

Sarah Hillgrove,
Mortgagee.

Van R. Brown,
Attorney for Mortgagee,
Red Lake Falls, Minnesota.

To Montague & Wight:—

You are hereby notified that on the 11th day of May, A. D. 1895, in proceedings to enforce the payment of delinquent taxes pursuant to that certain real estate judgment, which was entered in the District Court in and for the County of Polk, in the Fourteenth Judicial District, in the State of Minnesota, on the 21st day of March, A. D., 1895, the following described piece or parcel of land now situated in Red Lake county, (formerly Polk county,) State of Minnesota, to-wit: Nw¼ section 27, town 152, Range 42 was bid in to the State to satisfy the amount for which it was judged liable in said judgment, interests and costs, for the sum of eight dollars and forty-eight cents; that the above described realestate has become and now is the Absolute Property of the State;

That on the 18th day of May, A. D., 1900, the above described realestate was sold by the undersigned county Auditor of Polk county, as directed by the State Auditor, in accordance with Section 101 of Chapter 11 of the general Statutes of 1878, and the several acts amendatory thereto, for the sum of sixty-five dollars and eighty-six cents; that the amount required to redeem said piece or parcel of land from such sale (exclusive of the costs to accrue on this notice) is sixty-five dollars and eighty-six cents; with interest at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum, from said 18th day of May, A. D., 1900, until such redemption is made, and that the time for redemption of said piece or parcel of land from such sale will expire sixty days after the service of this notice, and proof thereof has been filed in the office of the county auditor of said county of Polk.

Witness my hand and official seal this 10th day of August, A. D. 1900.

John Gleason,
County Auditor, Polk County,
Minnesota.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of sixteen hundred fifty one and 53-100 dollars, which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by Pascal Toupin, and Lena Toupin, his wife, mortgagors, to James W. Massey, mortgagee, bearing date the ninth day of June, 1883, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the register of deeds in and for the county of Polk and State of Minnesota, on the 13th day of June, 1883, at two o'clock p. m., in book "O" of Mortgages, on pages 7 to 9.

That at the time of the giving of said mortgage, the premises therein described and thereby conveyed, were situated in Polk county, Minnesota, but that thereafter the lands therein described, together with other lands, were set off and organized into Red Lake county, Minnesota; and that the record of said mortgage was transcribed to page 1 of Book 16 of Mortgages, in the Registry of deeds of said Red Lake County, Minnesota.

Included in the amount above declared to be due upon said mortgage, is $409.53, being for taxes upon said lands paid by the mortgagee, and interest on the amounts paid for such taxes.

And no action or proceeding having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof,

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz:

The West half of the southeast quarter and the west half of the north east quarter of section twenty-seven, in township one hundred and fifty- of range forty-three, in Red Lake county, and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Red Lake county, at the front door of the court house, in the city of Red Lake Falls, in said county and state, on the tenth day of November, 1900, at two o'clock p. m. of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and twenty-five dollars attorney's fees, as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Dated September 1, A. D., 1900.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

THE CRISIS IN CHINA.

A rebellion is threatened in Southern China.

Italy has endorsed the French Chinese proposals.

Russia has approved Germany's latest programme.

French troops assisted Chinese regulars to behead Boxers near Canton.

Emperor William has advised the emperor of China to return to Peking.

American merchants at Tien Tsin protest against the withdrawal of the troops.

The dowager empress of China has ordered a temple built in memory of Baron von Ketteler.

It is reported that the allies will demand an indemnity of China which will aggregate £40,000,000 ($200,000,000).

The concert of the powers with respect to China has been restored by Germany receding from her former position.

The state department is in receipt of a dispatch from Minister Conger formally announcing the withdrawal and departure of the Russian legation from Peking.

A thousand rebels are raiding villages in the Sanon district and are marching on Schamehuen. The Indian troops have been dispatched to prevent an invasion of British territory.

A German force came into collision with 8,000 Chinese, described as Boxers, a few miles south of Tien Tsin. The Germans were attacked and compelled to retire on Tien Tsin.

Li Hung Chang and M. de Giers, the Russian minister to China, had a lengthy conference at Tien Tsin, after which it was announced that Li Hung Chang would depart for Peking at once.

The German column, consisting of 1,700 men under General von Hoopfner, encountered a small Boxer force near Peking Sept. 25, and killed 40 of the Chinese during a fight which followed.

A Shanghai dispatch to the London Times says it is reported on good authority that the fifty-six missionaries in North Shansi, who have hitherto been reported as missing, have all been massacred.

The withdrawal of the United States force from Peking began Oct. 3. The marines, Major William P. Middle commanding, started to Tien Tsin and the Fourth infantry regiment followed them closely.

By an imperial decree issued at Tai Yuen Fu, capital of the province of Shan Shi, dated Sept. 25, Emperor Kwang Su denounces the Boxer movement and designates for punishment nine ringleaders.

The Chinese report that 2,000 Boxers attacked two battalions of Germans at Kaukumen, near Peking. The Boxers, it is added, lost 400 men and the Germans five. The latter are now said to be burning the Boxers' villages around Peking.

The British government has followed in the footsteps of the United States in the Chinese negotiations. It has authorized Sir Claude MacDonald, the British minister at Peking, to enter into relations with the Chinese officials just as our government did in the case of Minister Conger.

POLITICAL NEWS.

South Dakota Midroad Populists have nominated a state ticket.

Georgia Democrats elected their state ticket by 50,000 majority.

Massachusetts Republicans have renominated the present state ticket.

Robert Treat Paine has been nominated for governor by Massachusetts Democrats.

The national convention of Democratic clubs met at Indianapolis last week. Two thousand delegates were in attendance.

The executive committee of the national Democratic committee has issued an address urging Gold Democrats to oppose Bryan.

The National Association of Democratic clubs elected the following officers: W. R. Hearst, president; Max F. Ihmsen, secretary; Marcus Daly, treasurer. The latter succeeds Senator Clark of Montana.

BRITISH-BOER WAR NEWS.

Boers captured a British convoy, killing or capturing all but 12 of the guard of 60.

Lord Roberts reports that Boers are surrendering daily. The British now have about 16,000 prisoners.

Lord Roberts has issued a proclamation offering immunity to the burghers who surrender. He excepts the prominent military and political personages.

Mr. Kruger's grandson, Eloff, will sail from Lourenzo Marques in a few days to prepare a residence in Brussels for the former president of the Transvaal.

All the Boer leaders recognize that the struggle is useless, but they are obstinately determined not to abandon it until they are compelled to. The poorly mounted burghers have been left behind to work their way to their homes or cross the Portuguese border.

FOREIGN NEWS.

President Castro of Venezuela has issued a proclamation convening the congress of Venezuela for Feb. 20 next.

According to semi-official statements the Russian naval estimates for 1901 total 97,097,060 roubles, an increase of upwards of 10,000,000 roubles over those for the current year.

As a result of the British elections the ministerialists have gained 23 seats and the opposition 15, which would give the government an additional 16 votes in the house of commons.

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

A death from bubonic plague has occurred in Wales.

Yellow fever prevails in Havana to greater extent than at any time since 1897.

The bubonic plague has broken out again at Townsville, N. S. W. Five cases are reported, with two fatalities.

Heavy storms throughout France have done much damage to property and live stock. Many of the rivers are overflowing their banks.

Nine persons were killed in a cyclone at Biwabik, Minn., Saturday. The damage to property in the town and vicinity was about $75,000.

A typhoid fever epidemic is raging in the village of Westby, Wis. There are at present 40 cases and half a dozen deaths have already resulted.

Telegraphic advices from Tampico, Mex., state that the Panuco and Tames rivers, which flow into the gulf at that place, are on one of the biggest rises in their history, and great damage has been done.

The Wisconsin river is raging as the result of heavy rains and has exceeded the flood mark of last spring. The damage so far will reach thousands of dollars and a little greater rise, which is expected, will cause more loss.

Two hundred people were more or less injured by the explosion of 7,500 pounds of dynamite at Eveleth, Minn. The force of the explosion was so great that there is not a piece of glass over a foot square remaining in the vicinity for two miles around.

CRIMINAL NEWS.

Colonel Campos-Salles, brother of the president of Brazil, has been assassinated.

Another alleged plot to kill President McKinley is said to have been discovered.

Winfield Townsend, a negro charged with attempted assault, was burned at the stake at Eclectic, Ala.

The body recently found in Cedar lake, near Hammond, Ind., is thought to be that of Nannie Williams, one of H. H. Holmes' numerous victims.

Robbers held up the Burlington train near Council Bluffs, Ia., Wednesday night and blew open the express car with dynamite. Messenger Baxter then opened fire, killing one of the bandits.

Mrs. Lillian Smith of Inwood, borough of Manhattan, while insane, shot her two children, Ethel, aged 12, and Theodore, aged 8, and then committed suicide by shooting herself. Another child lies in Fordham hospital at the point of death.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS ITEMS.

Governor Pingree of Michigan has called an extra session of the legislature to consider tax laws.

It has been decided to make immediate arrangements to enable Jamaica to take part in the exposition at Buffalo.

Two thousand Boers will settle in Northern Minnesota and North Dakota. Three hundred are already on the way from South Africa.

One hundred and thirteen passengers and $500,000 worth of gold were brought to Seattle by the steamship Senator which arrived from Nome Tuesday.

PEOPLE OF THE DAY.

Brigadier General James H. Wilson, who has been sent to China from Cuba, is especially noted as a cavalry leader, but he is an all round good soldier. Besides this, he knows China and the Chinese. General Wilson was born at Shawneetown, Ills., Sept. 2, 1837, and was graduated at West Point in 1860, and assigned to the corps of topographical engineers. He took part in the bombardment of Fort Pulaski, and, as aid-de-camp of General McClellan, was present at the battles of South Mountain and Antietam. He was appointed lieutenant colonel of volunteers in November, 1862, and as chief topographical engineer and inspector general of the Army of the Tennessee took an active part in the siege of Vicksburg.

GENERAL JAMES H. WILSON.

In 1863 he became captain of engineers and brigadier general of volunteers and was engaged in the operations about Chattanooga. In 1864 he was transferred to the Army of the Potomac and had command of a cavalry division under Sheridan during the Shenandoah campaign. Later in the year he was placed in command of a cavalry corps in the department of the Mississippi, where he effectively supported Generals Thomas and Sherman, and especially the latter on his famous march of destruction and occupation toward the sea. It was a part of his force that captured Jefferson Davis.

Wilson was a major general of volunteers at the end of the war, and received a commission as lieutenant colonel in the regular army. He left the army in 1870, and engaged in railroad and engineering operations in the United States and China. At the outbreak of the Spanish war he was appointed a major general of volunteers and took part in the invasion of Porto Rico.

A Boston Joan of Arc.

Miss Lillian Clayton Jewett, who has so stirred the southern states by her antilynching crusade, is a beautiful and wealthy Boston young woman. Miss Jewett formed the Antilynching league more than a year ago, and has attracted to her standard a large number of Boston colored people as well as many of the white race. She is not always conservative in her statements, and it has been some of her quoted utterances which have moved people in the south to threaten her with personal violence. The report that an organization of whites in New Orleans had offered $10,000 for her head turns out to have been more of a hoax than anything else, although Miss Jewett seems to have considered it in a serious light. Her ambition appears to be to pose as a sort of Joan of Arc for the colored people of the south.

MISS LILLIAN CLAYTON JEWETT.

A Coffeepot For Saleza.

Queen Victoria has presented to Saleza, the operatic tenor, a complete silver coffee service in appreciation of his singing for her at Windsor. At the time of the performance he had to leave the palace to take his role in the opera too soon to make his wishes known as to the nature of the customary present and was requested to tell a messenger sent to him. When the queen learned that he wanted a silver coffeepot for his new house in France she was so pleased that she sent him a whole service.

A Lucky Lay.

A farmer in Clay county, In., has a bin containing about 800 bushels of wheat. A little over a month ago he proposed to market the grain, but on going to the bin he discovered that a hen had established her nest on the wheat, was sitting there and that to remove the grain would "break her up." He decided not to disturb her, but wait until she came off with the chicks. In the meantime the price of wheat advanced until the farmer discovered he had gained over $100 by allowing the hen to sit it out.

COUNTY NEWS NOTES.
BY OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENTS.

Garnes.

Mrs. Ed Juneau is very ill.

George Madden visited Garnes this week.

Mr. Haven has accepted a position as clerk in E. K. Gjernes' store.

The Ladies' sewing society met at the home of Iver Gjaldaker, Wednesday.

Four loads of goods were hauled from McIntosh this week for E. K. Gjernes' store.

Mrs. Charles Hawkinson left last week to visit friends and relatives at Alexandria, Minn.

J. H. Hughes hauled a load of goods from McIntosh for Hughes & Nearson's store this week.

Threshing in this vicinity is progressing very slow. Most of it has been shock threshing.

Misses Martha Kolstoe and Annie Fosgard left Garnes last week for Crookston, where they will remain for some time.

Garnes will be found in the column for J. T. Knight for judge of probate. He has many friends here who say that it would be a very ungrateful act for the people of Red Lake county not to re-elect him, as had it not been for him, there would be no Red Lake county today, and he has made one of the best officers the county has had.

It is well to know that DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve will heal a burn and stop the pain at once. It will cure eczema and skin deseases and ugly wounds and sores. t is a sure cure for piles. Counterfeits may be offered you. See that you get the orignal DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. W. A. Schreiter.

Wylie.

John Malmquist was sporting at Bray last Sunday.

A. M. Hanson has broken his Fosston blower all to pieces.

Vote for J. T. Knight for judge of probate. He is a good officer and deserves re-election.

Owing to the bad roads, no wheat to any amount is coming in. Still, the price remains stationary.

Threshing is badly delayed on account of the rains, and stacks are spoiling badly. Hardly any plowing can be done.

Erick Adolphson, who went to Ishpeming, Michigan, some time ago, came back last Friday. He says there's nothing to make there. The uncertainty before the election makes less work in the mines. He says the most to be made was $1.75 a day and pay $17 a month for board. In good or hard times, he says none is better off than the farmer.

Feelings of safety pervude the household that uses One Minute Cough Cure, the only remedy that produces immediate results. It is infallible for coughs; colds, croup and other throat and lung troubles. It will prevent consumption. W. A. Schreiter.

Emardville.

Sina Hagen returned home last Saturday.

Martin Willars is now teaching school at Garnes.

Politics begin to be a little more lively around here now.

We learn that probably wedding bells will soon be heard in this neighborhood.

Martin Willars has returned home from Mankato, where he has been attending the Normal school for a year.

Svere Jacobson has returned home from Keystone farm. At that place they are threshing their wheat for hog feed.

B. Lillemoe, N. Pederson, and B. Bredeson made final proof on their homesteads before the clerk of court in Red Lake Falls last Saturday.

John Sohlberg returned home from Black River last week. He says that the shocks stand in two feet of water over there, and that there will probably not be any more threshing done.

If this weather keeps on farmers will have to stay at home as the roads are now in such a condition that it is almost impossible to either walk or drive.

Peter Huseby has let a grubbing contract of ten acres to John Sohlberg. Notwithstanding this bad weather, farmers as a rule are improving their places to a considerable extent this fall.

River Falls.

Old settlers say this is the wettest fall ever.

Mr. Cunningham has moved out from St. Hilaire to the old Gjerswold farm.

Tollef Thompson, of St. Hilaire, is building a new barn on Rev. Lunde's farm.

The roads are in frightful condition, Very little plowing done, and threshing at a standstill.

L. T. Bergh has put up a new pasture fence, making the pasture as large again as it was before.

Chr. Moe has moved in to his own farm, as the former owner, Mr. Clefgard, has moved to town.

School in Dist. 278 was opened two weeks ago but is closed for a week or more on account of muddy roads. Miss Molly Lonson is the teacher.

The Johnson Evenson and Lundstrom Co. went to St. Hilaire on Monday, to see if their new threshing machine had arrived, but it was not there. They will start on the farm of L. R. Bramsness.

Mr. Clefgard has been busy for some time moving things from his old farm to St. Hilaire. Saturday he took his family along and is now one of St. Hilaire's boomers, having built a fine residence on Water st.

Andrew Johnson, of Wyandotte, had the misfortune a few days ago, of having one of his horses take sick while at St. Hilaire. He left the animal in charge of Carl Johnson, one of the horse doctors, over Sunday, and Monday the horse was well.

Bray.

Mrs. Mary Swanson has lost a valuable young mare.

P. A. Erickson returned home from Grand Forks Thursday.

The heavy rain that fell Saturday laid up both plowing and threshing for a good while.

S. E. Erickson left for the northern part of the county a week ago to make improvements on his claim.

Halvor Hanson, who is building a large new dwelling house, made a business trip to St. Hilaire Friday.

Swan Englund of Numedal looked us over Sunday also renewed old acquaintance among the young folks.

Hill Top.

Threshing is delayed till the ground is frozen enough to carry threshing rigs.

F. Grenier Jr., has taken work with the N. P. bridge crew, and will stay all winter.

A. H. and C. A. Gerlach came up from Red Lake Falls last Sunday, for a short visit.

Some of the wheat threshed this fall was not fit for market, being too wet while in stacks.

The German Lutheran Congregation will initiate their church on the 4th of November, all are invited to attend.

City Teachers' Association.

The teachers of Red Lake Falls public schools have organized a City Teachers Association for the promotion of the general and professional knowledge of its members.

One of the aims of the association is to establish a teacher's library consisting of pedagogical and reference works. As it is designed that the association shall be a permanent one, the library can be added to every year, and it ought in a few years to become a very valuable collection and one which will be very helpful to the teachers.

At the first regular meeting of the Association which was held Saturday, October 6th, the following officers were elected;

President, Mr. Whiteley.
Vice President, Miss VanEtten.
Secretary, Miss Costello.
Treasurer Mrs Doe:
Librarian, Miss Fahy.

The following was the program for the meeting:

General subject: Russia China and the Far East.

I. Introduction—Geography climatic limitations of Asia	Mr. Whiteley.
II. Russia in Siberia.

Blanche Berthiaume was absent Monday, on account of illness.

Monday the Virgil class had their first prose lesson, which, hereafter, will occur every week.

The pupils of the public schools will be given a report card showing their monthly standings.

The Junior Class Club held its usual meeting Friday and made final arrangements for the social.

To prevent the constant babble of tongues, Miss Brown saw fit to seat the boys apart from one another. It proves a success.

Don't forget the Junior Class Club social at City Hall Saturday, Oct. 12, from 5 to 9. Admission only 10 cents. Everybody come.

The H. S. O. decided to purchase song books. They are nicely bound, contain about 450 selections, and will be a great improvement to the school.

An entertainment will be given by the H. S. O. on election night Nov. 6th for the purpose of raising a fund to purchase a piano. The teachers, and pupils are at work preparing an effective program.

The chemistry pupils had an exciting time Tuesday on account of the experiment to obtain nitrogen by means of a compound. Several of the corks of the bottles happened to fly off, causing an uproar. The work in the laboratory is progressing very nicely.

Marjorie Rodgers, Bessie and Willie Hunt and Pauline Neiland resumed their studies the first part of the week.

A meeting of the girls of the H. S. O. was held Monday to arrange for the supper to be given by them at the H. S. A. A. dance, Oct 19. The following committees were appointed: For choosing suitable place for the supper, Della Toupin, Anna Sutter, Etta Garceau, Eva Marchildon: decorating committee, Marjorie Rodgers, Grace Tousley, Henrietta Hennemuth, Rachel Taylor, Katherine Pirath and Maud Findeisen; refreshment committee, Rosie Beautrow, Lillian Belair.

Thomas McNerthney entered the Sophmore Latin course Monday, and Ora Brouillette the Freshman Civic. New pupils are constantly entering the H. S. and we soon hope to have all the empty seats occupied.

The grammar pupils are learning a German song "Das Roslein auf der Heiden." (The Rose on the Heath.) a song with a moral.

A little boy sees a beautiful red rose growing on a heath, he wants to pick it but the rose tells him she will sting him if he does. He does not heed the warning but gathers it and gets stung. The pain never leaves him. Thus in life, if we do a thing that we are advised not to do we sometimes pay dearly for it in after years.

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE ON FILING PETITION TO SELL LAND.

State of Minnesota } ss.
County of Red Lake }

In Probate Court
Special Term
Oct. 11th, 1900.

In the matter of the estate of Ovila Gervais, deceased. On reading and filing the petition of Adele Gervais, executrix of said estate setting forth the amount of personal estate that has come into her hands, the disposition thereof, and how much remains undisposed of; the amount of debts outstanding against said deceased, as far as the same can be ascertained; the legacies unpaid, and a description of all the real estate, (excepting the homestead), of which said deceased died seized, and the condition and value of the respective portions or lots thereof; the persons interested in said estate with their residences, and praying that license be to her granted to sell so much of said real estate as is necessary.

And it appearing by said petition that there is not sufficient personal estate in the hands of said Executrix to pay said debts, legacies and expenses of administration, and that it is necessary, for the payment of said debts, legacies or expenses, to sell so much of said real estate as is necessary to pay said debts.

It is therefore ordered that all persons interested in said estate appear before this court on Monday the 12th day of Nov. A. D. 1900, at ten o'clock, a. m., at the court house in Red Lake Falls, in said county, and then and there to show cause, (if any there be) why license should not be granted to said Adele Gervais to sell so much real estate of said deceased as shall be necessary to pay such debts, legacies and expenses.

And it is further ordered that this order shall be published once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the Gazette, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Red Lake Falls in said county.

Dated at Red Lake Falls, Minn., the 11th day of Oct., A. D. 1900.

FRANK M. EDDY AND FREE HOMES.

More Than 3,400 Settlers on the RedLake Reservation Alone Benefited by His Efforts.

Every One of These Pioneers Saved $200, Making Total of $680,000 Saved to This Section.

More Money Saved for the People of Minnesota Than Was Ever Saved by Any Single Piece of Legislation.

Hon. Frank M. Eddy, the Republican candidate for congress, asks for the support of the people of the district not upon what he says he will do, but upon the record which he has made during the time he has been in congress. It is a case of facts and results, not one of promises and pledges unfulfilled. In securing the passage of the Free Homes bill, which became a law last May under his leadership after two years of hard work for the people of his district, he did more for the people of Minnesota than was ever done before by a single piece of legislation. By the passage of this bill, more than 3,400 settlers on the Red Lake reservation alone are benefited to the extent of $200 each, for it provides that instead of paying $1.25 per acre, they shall receive their homesteads free. This not only means that $680,000 is saved to settlers, but it saves hundreds of them from being obliged to mortgage their homes to pay the government. The political opponents can exhaust all of their efforts to belittle Congressman Eddy, but here are some facts which they cannot rub out. Here is a piece of legislation which is so direct in its benefits that no one can fail to see them. You may not have a reservation claim, but you may have a son, a brother, a daughter, a relative or a friend who has. If so, Frank M. Eddy has saved this man or woman $200. Here is a direct benefit, not an imaginary one—a benefit right here at home, not in Porto Rico nor in the Philippines. We are warranted in stating that there is not a family of any considerable size in the whole northern part of the state, of which some member has not received the blessings of the Free Homes law. In view of these facts his friends feel justified in asking the voters to stand by and re-elect a man who has worked so hard for and been so faithful to their interests. He has been tried and proved a faithful servant of the people. Vote for him; work for him as he has worked for you. Stand by the man who has been your friend and your friend's friend. Show a faithful servant that his efforts for the common people have been appreciated by casting your vote for Frank M. Eddy, the champion of Free Homes.

St. Mary's Church Fair.

The ladies of St. Mary's church announce that their fair will be held at the Pichette building on October 30 and 31 and November 1, which will be Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. Several contests have already been inaugurated, the articles being a lady's gold watch, gentleman's gold watch, cutter, and a fur robe. A canvass of the business houses has resulted in liberal patronage, and the indications are that the fair will be a success. Among the interesting features will be an "Advertising Table," displaying the gifts from business houses; a "Memory Table," with mementos sent by former residents of the city, and a Candy Booth, with only home made confections. It is probable that some special feature will be provided for Hallowe'en.

Athletic Club.

The young men of the city have formed an Athletic Club, and have engaged the Pichette building for the club room. A meeting was held Monday night to further the organization, at which a committee on constitution and by-laws was appointed as follows: E. G. Storeasli, Jos. Koke, Geo. Pepin, Ed. Coenen and Geo. Hennings, whose duty it will be to report at the next meeting, which will be held to-night, and the permanent organization effected, by the election of a full set of officers.

L. C. SIMONS, Republican Nominee for County Attorney.

The nomination of Mr. Simons was one of the best made by any party in this county this year, and his abilities and character are such that the people of this county ought not to hesitate a moment as to whom to vote for for county attorney. Mr. Simons is one of the best-known business men of this city, and his standing in this community is such as any man might well be proud of. Below we give the main points in his career, which has been a steady ascent of the ladder, with personal ability, ambition and hard work as the fulcrum:

Mr. Simons is a native of Minnesota, born at Glencoe Nov. 10, 1866. He graduated from Stevens Seminary, Glencoe, in 1885. Was three years book-keeper in First National Bank, Glencoe. Was three years assistant cashier Bank of Atwater, Minn., which was then owned by Marcus Johnson and J. D. Marshall. Was four years deputy collector of Internal Revenue for Minnesota at St. Paul. Graduated from the Department of Law, University of Minnesota, in June, 1895.

Located at Red Lake Falls Sept. 1st, 1895. Appointed Judge of Probate by Gov. Clough, Jan. 5. 1897.

Mr. Simons is now president of the Merchants State Bank, of this city, and is also president of the Western State Bank, now being organized at Thief River Falls.

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE ON FILING PETITION TO SELL LAND.

State of Minnesota }
County of Red Lake } ss

In Probate Court,
Special Term
Oct. 11th, 1900.

In the matter of the estate of Ovila Gervais, deceased. On reading and filing the petition of Adele Gervais, executrix of said estate setting forth the amount of personal estate that has come into her hands, the disposition thereof, and how much remains undisposed of; the amount of debts outstanding against said deceased, as far as the same can be ascertained; the legacies unpaid, and a description of all the real estate, (excepting the homestead), of which said deceased died seized, and the condition and value of the respective portions or lots thereof; the persons interested in said estate with their residences, and praying that license be to her granted to sell so much of said real estate as is necessary.

And it appearing by said petition that there is not sufficient personal estate in the hands of said Executrix to pay said debts, legacies and expenses of administration, and that it is necessary, for the payment of said debts, legacies or expenses, to sell so much of said real estate as is necessary to pay said debts.

It is therefore ordered that all persons interested in said estate appear before this court on Monday the 12th day of Nov. A. D. 1900, at ten o'clock a. m., at the court house in Red Lake Falls, in said county, then and there to show cause, (if any there be) why license should not be granted to said Adele Gervais to sell so much real estate of said deceased as shall be necessary to pay such debts, legacies and expenses.

And it is further ordered that this order shall be published once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the Gazette, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Red Lake Falls in said county.

Dated at Red Lake Falls, Minn., the 11th day of Oct., A. D. 1900.

By the Court,

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of Seven Hundred Thirty Five and 74-100 dollars, which is claimed to be due and which is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage duly executed and delivered by Patrick Soards and Mary A Soards, his wife, mortgagors to Sarah Hillgrove, mortgagee, bearing date the 27th day of February, A. D. 1894, and with power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the register of deeds in and for the county of Red Lake, state of Minnesota, on the 28th day of February, A. D. 1899, at 10 o'clock a. m. of said day, in book 20 of mortgages on page 123, and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof;

Now therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz:

The Northeast quarter of section twenty-nine (29) in township one hundred and fifty two (152) north of range forty-four west, containing one hundred and sixty acres more or less, according to United States government survey thereof, in Red Lake County, and State of Minnesota with the hereditaments and appurtenances; which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Red Lake county, at the front door of the court house, in the city of Red Lake Falls, in said county and state on the 29th day of October, A. D. 1900, at 2 o'clock p. m. of said day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt and interest and twenty-five dollars attorney's fees as stipulated in said mortgage in case of Foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the date of sale as provided by law.

Dated Sept. 11th A. D. 1900.

Sarah Hillgrove,
Mortgagee.

Van R. Brown,
Attorney for Mortgagee,
Red Lake Falls, Minnesota.

To Montague & Wight:—

You are hereby notified that on the 11th day of May, A. D. 1895, in proceedings to enforce the payment of delinquent taxes pursuant to that certain real estate judgment, which was entered in the District Court in and for the County of Polk, in the Fourteenth Judicial District, in the State of Minnesota, on the 21st day of March, A. D., 1895, the following described piece or parcel of land now situated in Red Lake county, (formerly Polk county,) State of Minnesota, to-wit: NW¼ section 27, town 152, Range 42 was bid in to the State to satisfy the amount for which it was judged liable in said judgment, interests and costs, for the sum of eight dollars and forty-eight cents; that the above described real estate has become and now is the Absolute Property of the State;

That on the 18th day of May, A. D., 1900, the above described real estate was sold by the undersigned county Auditor of Polk county, as directed by the State Auditor, in accordance with Section 101 of Chapter 11 of the general Statutes of 1878, and the several acts amendatory thereto, for the sum of sixty-five dollars and eighty-six cents; that the amount required to redeem said piece or parcel of land from such sale (exclusive of the costs to accrue on this notice) is sixty-five dollars and eighty-six cents; with interest at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum, from said 18th day of May, A. D., 1900, until such redemption is made, and that the time for redemption of said piece or parcel of land from such sale will expire sixty days after the service of this notice, and proof thereof has been filed in the office of the county auditor of said county of Polk.

Witness my hand and official seal this 10th day of August, A. D. 1900.

John Gleason,
County Auditor, Polk County,
Minnesota.

By N. A. Hoffard, deputy.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of sixteen hundred fifty one and 53-100 dollars, which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by Pascal Toupin, and Lena Toupin, his wife, mortgagors, to James W. Massey, mortgagee, bearing date the ninth day of June, 1883, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the register of deeds in and for the county of Polk and State of Minnesota, on the 13th day of June, 1883, at two o'clock p. m., in book "O" of Mortgages, on pages 7 to 9.

That at the time of the giving of said mortgage, the premises therein described and thereby conveyed, were situated in Polk county, Minnesota, but that thereafter the lands therein described, together with other lands, were set off and organized into Red Lake county, Minnesota; and that the record of said mortgage was transcribed to page 1 of Book 16 of Mortgages, in the Registry of Deeds of said Red Lake County, Minnesota.

Included in the amount above declared to be due upon said mortgage, is $109.53, being for taxes upon said lands paid by the mortgagee, and interest on the amounts paid for such taxes.

And no action or proceeding having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof,

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz:

The West half of the southeast quarter and the west half of the north east quarter of section twenty-seven, in township one hundred and fifty, of range forty-three, in Red Lake county, and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Red Lake county, at the front door of the court house, in the city of Red Lake Falls, in said county and state, on the tenth day of November, 1900, at two o'clock p. m. of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and twenty-five dollars attorney's fees, as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Dated September 1, A. D., 1900.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

THE CRISIS IN CHINA.

Earl Li Hung Chang has reached Peking.

The rebellion in Southern China continues to grow.

The first detachments of American and Japanese troops have left China.

American warships have been withdrawn from Northern Chinese waters.

The Paoting-Fu expedition has left Tien Tsin. American troops were not included.

It is reported that Paoting-Fu has been occupied by some of the allies after heavy fighting.

The Chinese imperial court promises to return to Peking as soon as negotiations have reached a favorable turn.

A dispatch from Hong Kong states that the rebels are looting the Sanchuen district. They captured and beheaded 80 Chinese soldiers.

Rioting is going on in Wuchow and Weichow. Five missions have been destroyed at Kaking-Chow. A French gunboat has gone there.

Minister Wu is apprehensive of the results of the proposed expedition to Pao-Ting-Fu. He believes it will cause a renewal of agitation among the Chinese.

The situation in the Wei Chen prefecture of China is serious. In six districts the cities are in the hands of rebels. If an outbreak should occur in Canton its suppression would be difficult.

A dispatch from Tien Tsin says: "The opinion of those knowing Chinese ways is that the order for the punishment of the high officials, contained in the edict of Oct. 1, will not be executed. The edict is insincere."

It is said that the authorities at Hong Kong have received information that a general rising in the Southern provinces has been planned for November. Ten thousand more British troops from India have been requisitioned for Hong Kong.

Sheng, taotai of Shanghai, has received a telegram from General Su reporting that a serious rebellion has broken out in the southwestern part of Kwang Si province, that his 30,000 troops are inadequate and that he needs at least 100,000 to cope with the danger.

BRITISH-BOER WAR NEWS.

President Kruger is said to have sailed for Europe.

The British defeated Dewet's commando after a three days' fight.

Sir Alfred Milner has started for Pretoria to initiate a civil administration for the Transvaal.

Lord Roberts, the London Daily News announces, will leave South Africa during the last week of October.

A small party of British troops fell into a Boer ambush near Kaapmuiden. Two were killed, ten wounded and a number taken prisoners.

The Boers are very active in the Kroonstad district. General Dewet has proclaimed that burghers who refuse to fight will be made prisoners of war.

Driven from the Transvaal by force of British arms, eight American citizens, who recently arrived penniless in New York city, have petitioned the government to present claims for indemnity against Great Britain.

Lord Roberts reports that "the Boers have been making many successful raids and are interfering with railway and telegraphic communications. The damage is quickly repaired and severe punishment inflicted, but the Boers are remarkably persistent."

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

Rural free delivery service has been ordered established Oct. 15 at Kendall, Monroe county, Wis.

Secretary Root has again taken charge of the war department after an absence of several weeks.

The official trial of the battleship Wisconsin proved that vessel to be the fastest of that class in the world.

Government officials profess to be very much concerned over the critical condition of affairs in Southern China.

Albert R. Green of the general land office has been selected as chief of the new division of forestry of the interior department authorized by the last congress.

It is understood that the president has selected Judge George Grey of Delaware to represent the United States, with ex-President Benjamin Harrison, on The Hague permanent arbitration tribunal.

Fifty-one American soldiers belonging to the Twenty-ninth infantry, including Captain Devereaux Shields, who were recently captured by Filipinos on the island of Marindique, have been rescued by the force sent out for that purpose.

FOREIGN NEWS.

A fresh case of the bubonic plague is officially reported at Brisbane, Australia.

Members of the Chilian cabinet have resigned owing to political causes. It is believed that the crisis is of short duration.

The Australian legislative council has rejected the bill of the legislative assembly providing for a referendum on the woman suffrage question.

The South African league has passed a resolution in favor of a preferential tariff on British manufactures and adopted a resolution adverse to the German language being abandoned, which was a suggestion of Cecil Rhodes.

The Venezuelan government has annulled the concession of the Orinoco company, alleging non-execution of contract. The company has headquarters at Faribault, Minn., and is capitalized at $30,000,000. It received in 1888 a concession of 10,000,000 acres in the Orinoco district.

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

An epidemic of typhoid fever is raging in Northern Minnesota.

A. P. Deer, an aeronaut, fell 200 feet at Gays Mill, Wis., and was instantly killed.

It is believed that fully 300 fishermen were lost off the Grand Banks during the storm of Sept. 12.

Forty people were crushed to death by the collapse of a floor at the St. Nikander monastery in the Parkhoff district in Russia.

A railroad wreck at Chicago, caused by an open switch, resulted in the death of two men and the serious injury of several others.

Great damage has been done by high water around Portage, Wis. The breaking of the levee flooded the low lands for five miles west of the city.

An unprecedented drouth is prevailing in the district of Cachar and Sylhet, province of Assam, India, causing the greatest anxiety in regard to the tea and other crops.

A typhoon caused great damage last month on the coasts of Formosa and Southern China. Numerous towns were destroyed. Nineteen hundred houses were washed away or inundated at Taipeh, Formosa, and many lives lost.

POLITICAL NEWS.

Senators Hanna and Frye left Chicago Monday for their tour of the Northwest.

Vice Chairman Payne of the Republican national committee claims 270 electoral votes certain for McKinley.

The result of the first day of registration in Chicago for the presidential election shows that 285,361 voters entered their names on the registration books.

Ex-President Benjamin Harrison has issued a statement defining his position in the campaign. He declares he is loyal to the Republican party but is done with speaking.

The Democratic and Republican anti-Goebel factions on the conference committee appointed by the Kentucky legislature to adjust the disagreement over an election bill to take the place of the Goebel law, failed to agree and the leaders on both sides express the opinion that a new law will never be passed.

FINANCE AND TRADE.

Big deposits of lignite coal have been found in South Dakota.

Rockefeller is said to have cleared $6,000,000 this season on his Minnesota iron properties.

The Pennsylvania company has awarded contracts for 150,000 tons of steel rails. The amount involved is $3,900,000.

The average condition of cotton on Oct. 1 was 67, as compared with 62.2 last month.

Judge Kohlsaat of Chicago has decided that board of trade quotations are property rights.

As the result of monetary disturbance abroad, Austria wants to float a large loan in the United States. It is reported that this loan will be in the neighborhood of $20,000.

NEWS OF NOTED PERSONS.

Archbishop Ireland has sailed for home.

Roland Reed, the actor, has cancelled his engagements owing to sickness.

Washington gossip says Senator Davis of Minnesota will succeed Secretary Hay in the cabinet.

It is asserted that Archbishop Martinelli will be raised to the cardinalate at the next consistory.

Rev. Sam P. Jones, the famous evangelist, is broken down in health, having been compelled to cancel all his dates for lectures in South Carolina and Mississippi.

W. V. Powell, for seven years head of the Order of Railway Telegraphers, has been expelled from that organization for conduct unbecoming a member and officer of the order.

THE DEATH RECORD.

John Patrick Crichton-Stuart, marquis of Bute, is dead.

Charles Wheeler, treasurer of the Colorado Southern railroad, is dead at Denver.

Jay A. Hubbell, a representative in congress for the upper peninsula of Michigan for many years, is dead.

W. C. Harris, the last survivor of the Light Brigade which made the historical charge at Balaklava, is dead in Iowa.

George R. Blanchard, former commissioner of the Joint Traffic association, is dead. He was one of the highest authorities on railway rates in the country.

LABOR NEWS.

Fifteen hundred Philadelphia machinists are on strike.

Twelve hundred members of the Seattle Trades Council are on strike.

Employes of the Terre Haute electric street railway are on strike. The men demand increased pay and shorter hours.

The strike of the Denver woodworkers, which threatened to tie up all the mills in that city, has been settled and the closed mills have resumed work.

CRIMINAL NEWS.

A Chicago woman ended her life upon receipt of a bogus telegram sent by her husband, announcing that he had committed suicide.

Henry E. Youtsey, whose illness has caused a halt in his trial on the charge of being a principal in the shooting of Governor Goebel, is reported somewhat better.

CUBA AND PORTO RICO.

One hundred and thirteen new cases of yellow fever have been officially reported at Havana since Oct. 1.

NEWS IN MINNESOTA

Seven hundred Iowa merchants and farmers visited the Twin Cities Sunday.

The Minnesota conference of Daughters of the American Revolution was held in St. Paul last week.

The state labor commission proposes to ask the next legislature for an inspector to look after the mines on the range.

The second annual convention of the Catholic Total Abstinence Benefit association of Minnesota was held Sunday in St. Paul. About 100 men and women attended.

The plant of the Mora Milling and Electric Light company has been destroyed by fire. The only thing saved was the dynamo. Loss $12,000. The origin of the fire is unknown.

A test of the current transmitted from Apple River, Wis., to St. Paul for the St. Paul Gas Light company, shows that it is the most powerful ever transmitted through an underground cable, 30,200 volts.

Arthur B. Commers, teacher at the Sucker Point Indian school, near Tower, who accidentally killed an Indian pupil named Charles Eagle Sept. 20, has been exonerated by the United States grand jury.

E. L. Williams, a dock laborer employed by the Northern Pacific at Duluth, has received word from Cornwall, Eng., that he has fallen heir to $40,000. Williams is only 21 years of age and came to this country from Cornwall.

Floyd Lundun, a laboring man, was held up near the Milwaukee depot at Appleton by two tramps, and in the struggle to get away was shot in the right hip, the ball penetrating the bowels. He will die. One of his assailants has been arrested.

It is reported that the Ann Arbor railway has purchased the Wisconsin and Michigan from the Chicago creditors and will use it as a connection with the Soo, to take care of the grain traffic from Minneapolis to Eastern points via the Menominee car ferry route.

Frank Sellinger, residing near Spring Valley, had a stick of dynamite which he said he intended to use at a charivari. His wife became scared and ran out of the house, and immediately an explosion occurred, wrecking the house and blowing the man to pieces.

The Duluth school board reduced the tax levy recently made from 11 mills to 6 mills, cutting down the city tax rate to less than 20 mills, as against 24.9 mills last year. As the valuations are reduced below those of last year, the taxes will be very little increased.

Typhoid fever has assumed alarming proportions throughout Northern Minnesota. While Duluth has very little of the disease, her hospitals are crowded with it, most of the cases coming from the woods and the iron range towns where there is an abundance of it.

The $480,000 explorations by the Minnesota Iron company at Minnesota Station, on the Duluth and Iron Range road, have been discontinued, the work not being up to the hopes excited by the first discoveries. Still there is ore there, and some million tons or more have been opened into.

There is a shortage of nearly $5,000 in the public funds that were in the hands of A. H. Wegner, the Cook county commissioner who died suddenly a couple of weeks ago. Of this amount $1,650 is from the county and $3,141.61 is from the Beaver Bay school district, where Wegner lived.

Several Filipino students may soon be enrolled on the books of the Winona normal school. President Millspaugh has received a letter from Superintendent F. W. Atkinson, department of instruction of the Philippines, asking permission to send some of the natives to the Winona institution.

Ground will soon be broken for an underground mine in the village limits of Virginia. The shaft is to be sunk on the Wyoming company's forty, upon which Captain Harry Roberts of Duluth has a lease. The property is also known as the Humphrey forty. The Duluth and Iron Range road is building a spur to the new property.

AN INTERESTING CASE.

Officials Asked to Show Why They Failed to Appoint Populist Judges.

DULUTH, Oct. 12.—An interesting case was inaugurated here when Judge Ensign of the district court issued a writ of mandamus requiring Mayor Hugo and the city council to show why they should not appoint People's party election judges instead of Middle-of-the-Road Populists, as they did do last Monday. The law requires that judges of election shall be selected from the three political parties casting the greatest number of votes last election. The council acted on the theory that the People's party had lost its identity by fusing with the Democrats and that the Middle-of-the-Road Populists should be considered in its place. If the contention of the mid-roaders is upheld they can claim to be the party instead of the dissenting wing of the original organization.

MANY WANT HOMESTEADS.

Rush to File Claims on Dec. 4 Promises to Be Great.

CROOKSTON, Minn., Oct. 13.—The opening of the lands on the east side of the White Earth reservation to homestead filing, that will occur on Dec. 4, following the offering for sale of that portion of the lands that have been classed as pine lands, is already attracting the attention of homeseekers. The tract to be offered contains some of the finest agricultural lands in the Red River valley, and their opening has been anticipated for several years by people who realize their value for agricultural purposes.

THE FATHER OF RED LAKE COUNTY.

There is one contest in Red Lake county to be decided by the voters at the polls on Nov. 6. that is not merely a contest for office, but one where the decision of the voter should be swayed by considerations of the peculiar claims of one of the aspirants, entitling him to recognition in preference to any other candidate before the people of Red Lake county today, no matter on what ticket, or for what office. That man is J. T. Knight. Mr. Knight is a candidate for the office of Judge of Probate, to succeed himself. As to his qualifications, there is no question. All concede that he has discharged the duties of his office in a manner that merits the highest degree of confidence. The importance of the office of judge of probate must not be underestimated. An incompetent, careless or dishonest judge might work untold mischief, and the uncertainty of life does not give any voter assurance that it will not be his dear ones that will have to pay for his folly if he casts his ballot unwisely. Indeed, the opportunities for mischief are limitless, and the gravest feature is that injustice, when it comes, usually falls upon the defenseless heads of widows, orphans, the incompetent and the feeble minded. Mr. Knight's experience has exactly fitted him for the place. A man among men, he has rubbed elbows with the high and with the lowly. His views and his knowledge of men have come from years of broad experience as a legislator in Michigan, as a frontiersman and businessman in the Northwest, in contact with the shrewdest of minds, until he has been trained in the way of clear thinking. For nearly twenty years he has been a resident of this county, and he is affectionately regarded by a host of warm friends.

Aside from his fitness for the position, there is a strong and proper sentiment that Red Lake county owes Mr. Knight a debt of gratitude. As the Father of Red Lake county he should be given first consideration at the polls. If any one man is entitled to an office, it is surely he, for there would be no Red Lake county to-day but for him. To this all willingly testify. Indeed, The Gazette will say without reservation that all citizens, irrespective of party, ought to sweep Mr. Knight into this office as on a tidal wave. His defeat would be an everlasting shame, and a blot on the history of Red Lake county.

Communicated.

Editor Gazette:—

I highly appreciate your remarks made in the last issue of your valuable paper as to my candidacy for treasurer of Red Lake county.

I will simply say this that if I am re-elected I shall undertake to perform the duties of this office honestly and impartially, doing justice to all, and every cent I receive I shall account for.

I appeal to all intelligent voters of Red Lake county for their kind support in the present campaign. I am

Respectfully yours,
O. T. Tandberg.

FRANK. M. EDDY.
Author of the Free Homes Bill.

The Gazette publishes an article this week on the Free Homes bill, with the desire of giving Mr. Eddy his just dues.

Next week we will present the Free Homes law for the perusal of our readers. We believe in fair play, and we want the people of Red Lake county, many of whom are settlers on the ceded Red Lake reservation, and directly interested in this bill, to know the truth of the matter. That Mr. Eddy has made a good representative of this district, that he has worked incessantly, and that he has looked out for the interests of his constituency, can not be truthfully denied. He is one of the plain people, and as one of them, his interests are all with them. The credit for this Free Homes bill is his. It is the bill drafted by him, making a direct saving of $200 to each homesteader on the ceded reservation lands. This is all there is to it, and this $200 saved and the knowledge that he has a faithful friend in Congressman Eddy means a good deal to the homesteader.

Samuel Gibeau, Populist nominee for register of deeds, has been connected with the People's party since its organization, and was a prominent factor in the formation of the Farmers Alliance in Polk county, of which he was secretary for several years. Although an active worker in these parties, Mr. Gibeau has retained to a noticeable degree the friendship and respect of Democrats and Republicans alike, doubtless from the fact that they admire and respect him for his manly, straightforward, and honorable political methods. He has held many public positions of trust, and has always been faithful. A man of character, brains and dignity, he is deserving of the warm support accorded him by his party associates and his personal friends.

O. T. Tandberg is just the man for county treasurer. He is a man for whom it is a pleasure to say a good word. It would be hard to find a better citizen, and he reflects credit upon the party that nominated him. The business of his office is transacted right, because he is a practical book keeper, a man of education, and thoroughly at home in the work. These good points are all in the voter's eye. There is no reason for demanding a change in the incumbency of the treasurer's office, and we think there will be none.

Henry Norland, who ran for sheriff on the Populist ticket in this county last fall, it is said has joined the Social Democratic party, and Thos. H. Lucas, the nominee of that party for Governor, was entertained at his home while in St. Hilaire. The Socialists claim they will cast fifty votes for Debs in Red Lake Falls at the coming election.

Day F. Stacy, who was nominated by the Democrats, as a Democrat, for county surveyor, flopped to the Republican party just in time to get the nomination on that ticket. The Democrats of the county are consequently lining up for P. O. Hagglund, a clean man, for whom it is a credit to vote.

The general opinion prevails that S. A. Swanson will be elected as Representative from this district. Red Lake Falls will have nothing to regret if Mr. Swanson is elected, neither will the people of the district at large. Mr. Swanson will make an able Representative.

OLD WHEAT FLOUR.

Yes, we have it. We are still milling old wheat. We had a very large stock in store at our different elevators, and we bought out all that we could find in other elevators, so that we will have old wheat enough to mill on for the next 26 days. So many have asked us within the last three or four weeks if they could get old wheat flour by coming to the mill, and a good many have laid in their year's supply of flour, fearing that the new wheat flour would not be as good as the old. The new wheat flour will be all right in 30 or 60 days, when it is thoroughly cured in the stack. We have not tried milling any of the local wheat yet. Now be sure when you are buying or Exchanging, if you want old wheat flour, to call for "Mascot" or "Favorite" made by the Red Lake Falls Milling Co. Even though your wheat is a little damp or tough we will give you as good a flour for it, although we cannot give you quite as much flour for it as if you had No. 1 Hard. We carry a stock of this old wheat flour at all our elevators. Remember this fact; That we are the only mill to-day in the Northwest that is grinding a strictly all old wheat flour. All the little mills in the country have run out of old wheat long ago, and are offering a premium of 5 cents per bushel for wheat that is suitable to mill.

We have not advanced the price of flour or the rate of Exchange.

LOCAL ∵ ITEMS.

New stock of candies at Nelson's.

W. C. Smiley, he of the Thief River Falls Press, was down between trains Tuesday.

Eugene Vasseu shipped a carload of cattle for Vassau Bros. today. They are mostly calves and yearlings.

Harry Sterns has decided to locate at Hillsboro, N. D., and will leave shortly for that place with his wife.

Marcellin Thibert, the Terrebonne harnessmaker, was in the city Monday, stocking up at our local shops.

C. A. Brummund was down from St. Hilaire Sunday, presenting the glad hand to his many friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. Urcle LeBlanc came in from Gully Monday to transact business and visit at the home of the lady's mother Mrs. Normandin.

Mrs. Geo. Marchaud and Miss Carrie Pirath, have completed a three-months' nurse's course with Dr Gandron, and are now ready for duty.

Tom Young was up from Crookston Tuesday to move the steel cells from the Great Northern depot to the jail. They are now being put in place.

Mrs. K. M. Hanson, of Thief River Falls, and her niece, Miss Ella Farnsworth, of Chicago, were guests at the home of Mrs. B. Zaiser several days this week.

Jo C. Brown, former business partner of Ed. L. Healy, has not lost his interest in this section, and came up from Morris Tuesday with a party of land-seekers.

Mrs. H. K. Lutz, of Merriam Park, arrived in the city Munday to visit for a few days at the home of her mother, Mrs. B. Zaiser. She is accompanied by her daughter, Miss Lutz.

W. B. Glynn, who has been assisting Agent Thamas during the summer, went to St. Paul, Saturday where he will be assigned to a new place a notch higher. Mr. Glynn deserves promotion.

Miss Theresa Bourque, of Thief River Falls, who is a contestant for a gold watch for the church fair to be held in that city next week, was in attendance at the Firemen's hall in this city Friday night.

Dr. Gendron reports the following cases: On Friday he removed tonsils for Frank Sirois, who is doing nicely since the ordeal. On Saturday a delicate and successful operation was performed on Adele Lecoe for chronic endometritis.

J. A. H. Lemieux returned Sunday from Kansas City, where he went as a delegate to the national convention of the Modern Brotherhood of America. He was one of seven hundred other delegates, and their society is said to be growing at a phenomenal rate.

Chas. C. Ralston, of Crookston, a brother-in-law of J. Q. Adams, of this city, opened the barber shop in the Zaiser building last Thursday, with a view to remaining in business here. Mr. Ralston decided Monday to close the shop, as business here does not warrant three barber shops.

The price of slab wood has suddenly gone up. Heretofore it has sold for 75c. per cord, in ten cords lots, but on Saturday a sale of 500 cords at $1.50 per cord F. O. B. cars at Red Lake Falls was made by our Lumber Company for the city heating plant of Crookston.

E. Strassburger, the Crookston architect, was here Monday to make another examination of the Kans block, which has been settling during the wet weather. He reported to the effect that there is no possible danger, and the trouble may all be avoided by placing a proper drain alongside the south wall. This will be done at once, when there is no doubt that this block will be as secure as the rock of Gibraltar, for all practical purposes.

Thos. H. Lucas, Social Democratic nominee for governor, who is making a tour of the state, addressed a large audience at the opera house in this city last night. Mr. Lucas is a cobbler by trade, but is a sledge hammer orator as well, and both the Democratic and Republican parties were lurruped by turns. It is claimed by the members of his party that the presidential nominee, Eugene V. Debs, will receive over a million votes. While it is doubtful if Mr. Lucas made many converts here on the spot, the local Republicans and Democrats who heard him, know what terrible fellows they are in the eyes of this class of American citizens.

Wm. Hillgrove, who has lived here since the early days, has decided to move to Bemidji. He will be accompanied by his mother and sister. A new house and barn is now under course of construction for him.

Thos. Germo, accompanied by several of the Republican county nominees, went to Lambert Sunday, where people were addressed on the issues of the day. A tour of the adjoining towns, including Garnes and Equality, was also on the tapis.

T. J. Knox, Democratic-Populist nominee for railroad commissioner, will hold a meeting in the city Saturday. Dr. Dumers, of Hallock, an old line Democrat, is scheduled for the same date, and it is likely that a joint meeting will be held.

Rev. and Mrs. H. O. Harvey, evangelists, are guests at the home of the Rev. S. J. S. Moore. Commencing last night, a series of evangelistic services will be held, continuing each night this week and next. At the Presbyterian church.

Editor N. S. Gordon and wife drove over from Crookston Saturday. Mr Gordon has a fine list of subscribers in Red Lake county, which is constantly growing. The Journal issues both a weekly and a daily edition, and has in its employ thirteen hands.

Alberic Chabot, the merchant prince of Crookston, was in the city yesterday, having come up to look after threshing operations on his fine farm five miles west of the city. There are 160 acres under cultivation, which was divided between wheat and oats. The wheat went 24 and the oats 35 bushels to the acre.

The Second Annual Ball of the Red Lake Falls Fire Department, postponed from Oct. 5th on account of bad weather, was held at the Opera house Friday night. Freund's Orchestra furnished the music, and Schmitz' hotel the supper. While the affair was not as large as the first annual ball, yet all those in attendance had a good time.

The marriage of Miss Tillie Thibideau and Elie Duchaine took place last Monday morning at St. John Baptist church in the presence of a large number of friends. Miss Mary Ann Duchorme and Arthur Lessard attended the bride and groom. After the wedding refreshments were served at the home of the bride.—Duluth Herald.

There is one good criterion as to the quality of any article, and that is, the estimation in which it is held by the ladies. It is a well known fact that "Mascot flour" is a prime favorite with them, and that tells the whole story. It's the best. See our ad in another column, telling something about it. A List of Candidates Who Have Filed Certificates, and Will Go on the Official County Ballot.

The time for filing certificates of nomination or petitions, which authorizes the county auditor to place the candidate's name on the official ballot printed by the county, expired Tuesday night at twelve o'clock. The last petition filed was that of Wm. C. L. Demann, for county commissioner of the second district, which went in a little before eleven o'clock, Tuesday night. Following is the list. Those marked with a * in the Democratic or Populist column, have not filed petitions. Demann is the only Republican nominee who has filed a petition, as these nominations were legal, and did not require it:

Grace Tousley, Anton Schusser and Ned Taylor were absent this week.

The Senior Class are now wearing their colors, burnt orange and olive green.

The H. S. A. A. held their usual meeting Tuesday and made final arrangements for the dance Friday.

The J. C. C. social held Saturday was attended by many of the citizens, and the sum netted was $15, which will go toward purchasing song books for the High School.

The H. S. A. A. received their new foot ball Monday. Under the instruction of Prof. Whiteley they are progressing very nicely. A foot ball is a much needed article in every athletic association and the boys greatly appreciate its value.

Last Friday Prof. Whiteley called the attention of the pupils to the phenomena of the cobwebs which seemed to float in a circle about the sun. It was discovered by Miss Rinquist's pupils that the particles floating down with the cobwebs were spiders, and the little ones were engaged in collecting them.

Grand preparations are being made by the H. S. A. A. for the dance Friday evening. We hope that everyone will patronize the boys. A good time is assured to all. Following is the program:

1 Waltz.
2 Two Step.
3 Quadrille.
4 Waltz.

EPIDEMIC OF FEVER

DULUTH HOSPITALS FILLED WITH TYPHOID PATIENTS.

Interesting Case Inaugurated by the Peoples Party—Apple River Power Now Used in St. Paul—Milwaukee Road's New Deal Put Into Effect—Rush For White Earth Lands—State News in General.

DULUTH, Oct. 13.—Typhoid fever has assumed alarming proportions throughout this part of the Northwest. While Duluth has very little of the disease, her hospitals are crowded with it, most of the cases coming from the woods and the iron range towns where there is an abundance of it. West Superior is also said to have a good deal of it.

Every hospital in Duluth has been compelled to turn away patients during the past few weeks, and the same thing is true on the ranges. It is prevalent even up in the Rainy Lake country, and the citizens of Fort Francis recently held a meeting to arrange for a new hospital. Physicians attribute the prevalence of the disease to the excessively damp weather the Northwest has experienced this fall.

AN INTERESTING CASE.

Officials Asked to Show Why They Failed to Appoint Populist Judges.

DULUTH, Oct. 12.—An interesting case was inaugurated here when Judge Ensign of the district court issued a writ of mandamus requiring Mayor Hugo and the city council to show why they should not appoint People's party election judges instead of Middle-of-the-Road Populists, as they did do last Monday. The law requires that judges of election shall be selected from the three political parties casting the greatest number of votes last election. The council acted on the theory that the People's party had lost its identity by fusing with the Democrats and that the Middle-of-the-Road Populists should be considered in its place. If the contention of the mid-roaders is upheld they can claim to be the party instead of the dissenting wing of the original organization.

BEATS NIAGARA FALLS.

Cable From Apple River to St. Paul Carries the Highest Voltage on Record.

ST. PAUL, Oct. 16.—An important experiment in connection with the St. Paul Gas Light Apple River power plant was successfully conducted Sunday morning.

The underground cables, extending from the substation on Cedar street to Margaret street and Atlantic avenue were tested, and a voltage of 30,200 was successfully transmitted. This is important in view of the fact that it is the highest voltage ever transmitted in this manner, the best previous record being that of the Niagara Falls Power company, which has handled 20,000 volts in this way.

The power is transmitted through three copper conductors of a smaller circumference than a man's finger. The conductors are encased in paper tubes, the tubes in lead sheets and the whole encased in clay conduits. Twenty-four miles of overhead wires complete the circuit to the source of power at Apple River, Wis.

TRAFFIC DEAL IN EFFECT

Milwaukee Will Hereafter Use Northern Pacific Tracks to Duluth.

ST. PAUL, Oct. 16.—The traffic agreement between the Milwaukee and Northern Pacific went into effect Monday. Under the agreement the freight traffic to be handled is described as "all freight traffic in either direction between points on or reached by the Milwaukee lines (except St. Paul and Minneapolis) and Duluth, West Superior, Carlton, Cloquet and points north and east thereof." The Milwaukee will use the short line to Duluth as the exclusive route to and from the points mentioned.

MANY WANT HOMESTEADS.

Rush to File Claims on Dec. 4 Promises to Be Great.

CROOKSTON, Minn., Oct. 13.—The opening of the lands on the east side of the White Earth reservation to homestead filing, that will occur on Dec. 4, following the offering for sale of that portion of the lands that have been classed as pine lands, is already attracting the attention of homeseekers. The tract to be offered contains some of the finest agricultural lands in the Red River valley, and their opening has been anticipated for several years by people who realize their value for agricultural purposes.

New Lands For Settlement.

BAGLEY, Minn., Oct. 12.—This village was thrown into a ferment of excitement by the receipt of a telegram from Washington that four townships of ceded Chippewa lands lying just south of the town would be thrown open to settlement this fall. There is said to be about 180,000,000 feet of standing pine in the four towns, but the agricultural lands make up the greater part of the total area of the town.

Mistook a Woman for a Wolf.

STEPHEN, Minn., Oct. 12.—While Nels Fernstrom was hunting about 15 miles east of here he mistook Mrs. Strommer for a wolf and shot her, killing her almost instantly. It seems that Mrs. Strommer had been out looking for some of her stray cattle and not finding them she got on a stack to see if she could find them, and it being slightly dark was taken for a wolf or fox and shot.

Flouring Mill Destroyed.

MORA, Minn., Oct. 16.—Mora's banner industry, the Mora Milling company's flour mill, was reduced to ashes by fire which started in the mill about 4:30 a. m. The loss, at a low estimate, is $15,000, with $7,000 insurance. It is a heavy blow to the village.

DAVIS IN HAY'S PLACE.

Minnesota Senator to Be a Member of McKinley's Cabinet.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—The Star prints a story stating that under the second administration of President McKinley, Senator C. K. Davis will be made secretary of state and John Hay will return to London as our minister at the court of St. James. Mr. Hay, it is said, will not continue as the head of the state department in any event. The Star story further states that Secretary Davis will, in 1904, be a leading candidate for president.

CONCESSION ANNULLED.

Non-Execution of Contract Alleged Against the Orinoco Company.

CARACAS, Venezuela, Oct. 15.—The government has annulled the concession of the Orinoco company, alleging non-execution of contract.

The company, which has headquarters at Faribault, Minn., and which is capitalized at $30,000,000, was granted, in 1883, a concession of 10,000,000 acres of land situated in the Orinoco district.

CONNECTION FOR THE SOO

Wisconsin and Michigan Railway Is Said to Have Been Sold.

MARINETTE, Wis., Oct. 16.—It is reported that the Ann Arbor railway has purchased the Wisconsin and Michigan from the Chicago creditors and will use it as a connection with the Soo, to take care of the grain traffic from Minneapolis to Eastern points via the Menominee car ferry route.

Victim of Tramps Will Die.

APPLETON, Minn., Oct. 13.—Floyd Lundeen, a laboring man, was held up near the Milwaukee depot by two tramps, and in the struggle to get away was shot in the right hip, the ball penetrating the bowels. He will die. One of his assailants has been arrested.

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 16.—Floyd Lundeen died at St. Barnabas' hospital, as the result of being shot by highwaymen at Appleton, Minn. The alleged footpads are now under arrest at Appleton.

Northwestern Flour Output.

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 11.—According to The Northwestern Miller the flour output at Minneapolis last week was 321,355 barrels, against 339,875 barrels for the corresponding week of 1899. Superior-Duluth last week ground 10,000 barrels against 36,335 barrels for the corresponding week of 1899. Flour sales last week equalled about 80 per cent of the output and was chiefly domestic. Foreigners bid very little.

Littlefield at Duluth.

DULUTH, Oct. 11.—The largest and most enthusiastic Republican rally of the campaign took place here, the occasion being speeches by Congressman C. F. Littlefield of Maine and S. R. Van Sant, the Republican candidate for governor. The speeches were preceded by a uniformed parade in which about 1,500 members of political clubs participated.

ANOKA, Minn., Oct. 18.—The grand jury has returned indictments against Elmer Miller and James Hardy for murder in the first degree. The date of trial has not been set. They are charged with the Wise murder.

Lind at Minneapolis.

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 11.—Governor Lind addressed six large audiences in Hennepin county during the day, winding up at West Side Turner hall, where he delivered the principal address of the day.

MISSING SINCE 1883.

William H. Tuthill of Iowa Located in California.

WATERLOO, Ia., Oct. 15.—William H. Tuthill, mourned as dead since 1883, is said to have been located at the soldiers' home in California. Tuthill formerly lived at New Albion, where he became a member of the A. O. U. W. He disappeared at Ottawa, Kan., and several years later his wife, Harriet A. Tuthill of Dubuque, brought suit to recover on a $2,000 policy held in the order. The case was tried twice in the district court, this county, and is now pending in the supreme court. Tuthill was located, it is alleged, by an application his wife made for a pension, a search of the records revealing, it is stated, that a man of the same name, company and regiment, is being paid a pension in the soldiers' home of California.

A Letter from a Cat—What Happened to Jimsey, Being an Account of the Inextricable Plight of a Canary in a Dish of Dough.

A Letter from a Cat.

Dear Editor:
I hereby take
My pen in paw to say,
Can you explain a curious thing
I found the other day?
There is another little cat
Who sits behind a frame,
And looks so very much like me,
You'd think we were the same.
I try to make her play with me;
Yet, when I mew and call,
Though I see her mew in answer,
She makes no sound at all.
And to the dullest kitten
It's plain enough to see
That either I am mocking her
Or she is mocking me.
It makes no difference what I play,
She seems to know the game;
For every time I look around
I see her do the same,
And yet no matter though I creep
On tiptoe lest she hear,
Or quickly dash around the frame
She's sure to disappear.
—Oliver Herford in St. Nicholas.

What Happened to Jimsey.

There was no place where Robbie liked better to visit than at Aunt Mary's house. In the first place, there was dear Aunt Mary herself, who was fond of all boys and particularly fond of Robbie. In the next place, there was the cooky jar, which had a wonderful way of never being empty no matter how often he visited it; and, last of all, there were the birds. Rinkum was a parrot that always made Robbie laugh by exclaiming, in odd imitation of Aunt Mary, "Mercy, how you've grown."

He liked Rinkum, but he liked the mocking bird, Jimsey, too, though Jimsey couldn't talk; but he would hold his head on one side and peer at Robbie with his bright eyes to make sure it was he, and then hop gayly about his cage as if glad that the boy had come again.

Now, one day something happened. Aunt Mary washed the dishes, swept the kitchen, set her bread by the stove to rise, and, telling Jimsey and Rinkum, who had been let out of their cages, to behave themselves, went upstairs, never dreaming that two such well behaved birds would get into trouble while she was gone. But pretty soon she heard Rinkum's loud screeches, which told her something was the matter.

"Fire! fire! throw on water!" cried Polly as she entered.

"Where are you, Rinkum, and where's Jimsey?"

"Mercy, how you've grown! Fire! Fire!" screamed Rinkum from a dark corner of the room under the table, where she had retreated as if in fear. But Jimsey was not with her, and Aunt Mary grew alarmed as she saw, what had escaped her notice when she went upstairs, that the side window was open several inches. "Some cat has got him, or else he has flown away!" She started toward the window to look out, but as she went she noticed a strange heaving of the napkin over her bread. She whisked it off, and there was poor Jimsey up to his neck in the soft sponge, vainly struggling to free himself, but sinking deeper and deeper. Rinkum had watched him fly down to the edge of the pan, pick up a corner of the napkin in his bill, peck at the dough daintily to see if it were good, and then hop down into the sticky stuff, which held him fast. She did all she could by giving the alarm, and Aunt Mary soon had the bird out of his queer bath; but Jimsey's feathers had to be cut, and he was never quite so lively again, so that Robbie, when he came, said:

"Aunt Mary, it seems to me that Jimsey's getting old; he acts like an old man. And I'm getting old, too. Do you know, I'll be six years old tomorrow!"

"Mercy, how you've grown!" said the parrot.

Two Great Men.

April 21, 323 B. C., Alexander the Great, conqueror of the Persian Empire and the most famous military leader of ancient history, died in Babylon of a fever. On the same day in old Corinth died Diogenes, one of the oddest men of ancient times, a Greek law breaker and a professional cynic, whose fame in Athens caused even the great Alexander to visit him. Diogenes was banished from Sinope, the place of his birth (413 B. C.) for making bogus coins, and went to Athens to study philosophy. Soon, by the severity of his views and the rudeness and eccentricity of his manners, he became famous. When walking about the streets he carried a tub on his head. When he paused to rest he sat on the tub or slept inside of it. He was penniless and uncleanly, but when Alexander, the ruler of Greece, visited him and asked if he could do anything to gratify Diogenes, the cynic replied: "Do not stand any longer between me and the sun." Alexander stepped aside. Soon Alexander went away to conquer Western Asia and Diogenes went to sea. Diogenes was taken by pirates and sold into slavery in Corinth, where he died in great misery. Alexander conquered the Persian Empire, making Darius its ruler, a fugitive, and led his vic-the tall, slender figure of the young girl. She stood quite erect, her hands clasped, her fair, sweet face white as snow, her blue eyes lowered and drenched with tears, her lips closed like the bud of a white flower—surely the most pitiful figure ever seen on earth.

A Golden Dawn.

Women told each other afterward of the brave young lover who would not leave her, who watched every movement of the white hands, every expression of the sweet white face, who listened attentively to every word for and against her, who sent little notes to her counsel, and looked as though he could annihilate every witness whose evidence told ever so slightly against her.

The sweet face grew even whiter when the jury returned; the girl's hands trembled, her blue eyes turned with a wistful, helpless look to the squire's handsome face.

"How say you, gentlemen of the jury—do you find the prisoner guilty or not guilty?"

There was a moment's silence; one might have heard a pin drop; in the whole of that crowded court there was not a sound.

"Guilty!" was the word that fell like a death-knell—and the eager expectation gave way to a murmur of dismay.

"Innocent, I say, and I will prove it!" cried the young squire.

And, looking at his troubled face, the judge refrained from rebuke. He passed sentence of death on her, while women wept and men shuddered. Death for that fair young girl, with the angelic face—death for that fair, delicate body—it was too terrible.

It was over at last. The warders carried the prisoner away, as one already senseless or dead. No one interfered when the lover who loved her so well bent down as she was carried past him and kissed the sweet, silent face; no one rebuked him—there was deepest pity for him.

As the audience broke up, different groups witnessed the verdict. Slowly enough they gave their opinion—she must be guilty; no one else could have done it; yet how angelic she looked, and how dearly the squire loved her!

Slowly the miserable March day ended; and the next day it was known all over the country that Hyacinth Vane had been found guilty and sentenced to death.

A petition was drawn up and numerously signed, praying that, because she was so young, and the evidence against her all circumstantial, the sentence might be commuted; but the home secretary, who had not seen the fair face and the blue eyes drowned in tears, saw no cause for interference, and the law was to take its course.

What those days spent in the dreary solitude of the condemned cell were for the hapless girl, no one ever knew. The only grace that she obtained was permission from the governor to have pens, ink and paper. She wrote all that she thought and felt. She kept those papers until she died; and she called them

A Dream of the Scaffold.

Some one has been into my cell and tells me that I may have pens and ink, that I may write all I think and feel; and my thoughts go first of all to my home.

There was a large bed of white hyacinths in the dear old garden at home; they were my mother's pride. When any one came to see her, in the warm, beautiful springtime, she would say to them, "Have you seen my hyacinths?" and then show them with such gentle pride. When she lay dying, with the light of the western sun on her face, they laid me in her arms. She could not see me for the mist before her eyes.

"You would like to kiss the baby?" those about her said: and the sweet son. smiled, and would not tell them that the light had gone from her eyes.

She felt with her white, dying hand for the little face, and then, said, with a smile:

"My dear little baby! Francis, I should like her to be called 'Hyacinth,' after my favorite flowers."

My father promised that it should be so; and I was named Hyacinth Vane.

Yes, I—Hyacinth Vane, condemned to die to-morrow—I was a little baby once, with my golden head nestling on my mother's breast, with my soft pink cheek warmed by my mother's dying kiss.

I am to die to-morrow. To die! Oh, heaven, what do the words mean?

I raise my hands and look at them; they are white and warm. The warm blood courses through them. Is it possible that to-morrow they will be whiter still—cold and motionless? How can I die to-morrow, when to-day I am full of warm life?

The sun rises in the east, and touches the left side of the wall of my cell; at night it touches the right. Now it is between the two. The golden sunlight creeps so slowly along the wall. When it comes round here to-morrow I shall be dead. Oh, stop, golden sun, while I think what it means! I shall be dead—my eyes will see no more, my ears will be closed, my lips dumb. I shall lie cold and still; but where shall I be?—the "I" who thinks, speaks, feels, and suffers? A cold white body will be somewhere within the prison walls, but that will not be I.

I am to die to-morrow. I am nineteen years old—a girl, young and innocent, lying in Ulverson jail, condemned to death—found guilty of murder, and sentenced to be hung by the neck until I am dead. I remember the crowded court, the sea of faces, the hum of voices, the glare of the sun, the stirring of the vast crowd, and the deadly silence that reigned while the judge put on that terrible cap, and said, "hung by the neck until you are dead; and may the Lord have mercy on your soul!"

There was a stir, an excitement. One lady, who had watched the trial intently, suddenly gave an hysterical cry:

"She is so young! Is there no mercy for her?"

I heard murmurs all around me—I saw tears on many faces; but I did not think of myself. It was to me as though another girl stood in the dock, and I was so sorry for her. My mind dwelt on those words, "may the Lord have mercy on your soul." If those wise and learned men wanted me to save my soul, why do they hurry me out of the world? Why not let me live to do it?

Slowly the golden light is changing on the wall; when it reaches the end of the window, the sun will set—when it sets to-morrow night I shall be beyond it. I kneel by the side of the little pallet, and I pray that my fair young mother may never know that her white Hyacinth was accused of murder.

Slowly the sun-rays are creeping along before the terrible darkness of night comes—the darkness that for me knows no second dawn.

Let me describe what my cell is like. It is a square cold bare room, all white; yet it seems to me that the very walls should be black with [illegible]. The window is very small, very narrow. When I stand on the bed I can see just one piece of blue sky. There is a chair and a white deal table. This is the condemned cell at Ulverston jail. Strange tragedies have passed here; unhappy women have moaned their lives away; frantic wretches have knelt and clutched the hands of the chaplains and the warders; soulless, saddened, brutal men have stupified themselves with despair, and have died without a word; cowards have shrieked and raved; good men have prayed; while I—

Strange stories are told of the last night spent by those condemned to die on the morrow. Sometimes a stupor of despair comes over the criminal—a stupor from which nothing can rouse him—and he dies; or, bewildered, a frantic madness seizes him. Men who have to die at eight in the morning have been known, in a paroxysm of this madness, to almost kill the man who watched them. In this cell due precaution has been taken; there is a portion of it enclosed within an iron railing, which has no outlet into the cell. If the warder wants to get near the prisoner, he must go out of his own door and re-enter the cell by the door that belongs to it. The railed-off portion looks like an immense iron cage. The warder's bed is inside it.

I have heard of frantic men clutching those bars, with shrieks that have made the blood run cold in the veins of those who heard. I shall try to die calmly; but I know that I shall be most terribly afraid.

Faster now and faster the light creeps along the wall. Oh, for one face to smile on me, for one hand to touch me, for one word of comfort! I climb to the window and watch the blue sky. What mystery lies beyond it?

There is just a breath of the sweet summer air. I lay my tired head against the cold stone wall, and shut my eyes; then—ah! then I am in the old garden home, where the roses are growing, and sweet old-fashioned flowers are full of perfume. The blossoms fall from the lime-trees, the bees are busy with the carnations, the butterflies woo the lilies, the golden sunlight lies over all. A bird, with bright eyes and smooth plumage, sings on a bough of white pear-blossom. Oh, dear and gracious heaven, how fair it is, this warm, sunlit, fragrant world.

I watch the swallows on the eaves; I watch the blue-and-white pigeons circle in the air. My heart grows light and gay with all this loveliness around me, yet there is a feeling of some impending dread. I hear the wood-pigeons and the shout of children at play. I can see the gray church-spire, and a voice calls, "Hyacinth, where are you?" "I am here, father," I answer in my dream; and I see my father walk down the broad path bordered by white lilies. A sudden sense of security and freedom from all danger warms my heart. I throw my arms around him, and then, with a deadly chill, with a terrible horror, with mortal dread, with keenest anguish, I awake. Ah, dear heaven, it was but a dream! I am miles away from the garden home, and I have looked my last on my father's face.

It was only a dream. My head lay on the stone wall, one sunbeam touched my face; yet so vivid had been the dream that the odor of the lilies seemed to be around me.

I cannot cry. My eyes burn, my heart swells, all my tears have been dried long since; but a great sob comes from my lips. Oh, if I could but escape through the narrow window, were I only to fall dead on the ground beneath! My dream has unnerved me; the song of the bird on the pear tree is with me still. I hear the low ripple of the little brook over the pebbles; I hear the soft, sweet chime of the church bells; I know just now that the sunlight lies on the hills, that the haymakers are leaving work; that the children are wandering through the woods; that the birds are calling to each other; that the cows are returning from the meadow; that the sun is beginning to set amid a great mass of crimson clouds; that the wind is whispering, and the trees stir their great branches in languid answer.

Never again will sun set, or birds sing, or flowers bloom for me. Never again will the reapers, passing me in the green lane, greet me cheerily. All sweet sounds of earth have ceased for me.

If I could but stop the changing light! It is on the right side now, and it is growing fainter. A cold horrible shudder comes over me, my limbs tremble, an unutterable anguish burns my very soul. I give one long, lingering look at the blue sky. Shall I see it to-morrow when they take me out shame stricken to die before the eyes of thousands? Shall I notice either the sky or the sunlight then—I who have loved them all my life?

Then comes another pause. I dream again. This time I am standing in the church-yard at home, with a group of laughing girls around me. The great oak trees and the stately elms line the path that leads to the church, great tendrils of ivy reach the ground, birds sing gayly in the heart of the green trees, the bells are ringing merrily. I stand there laughing as gayly as any of them. Near us is a large white marble cross, with crimson roses growing over it; on that cross I read my mother's name. Suddenly one of the girls turns to me and says, "I do not see your gravestone here." Another answers, "No—Hyacinth Vane was buried in Ulverston jail." And they all fall back from me with a terrible cry.

I wake with great drops of anguish on my face. While I have slept the light has grown dim and the sun has set.

The light men love so well and call the gloaming has set in; strange shadows lie in the corners of my cell, strange sounds fill my ears; every few moments a curious sensation comes over me, a loss of memory and a confusion of thought. Only I fancy that the face I love best on earth is smiling into mine; I fancy I am kneeling, with my head on my lover's breast, and his dear arms around me. I forgive him, my dear love, whose disloyalty has brought me here. I forgive him, and love him with all my heart, as I always have. But, when my senses return to me, my head lies on no lover's breast; I have fallen upon the stone floor, and have barely strength to rise.

Ah, my love, I shall never more know the clasp of your hands! I said hard words, cruel and bitter, in my jealous rage, but I never meant them. I would have given my life for you, not have taken the life of one you loved.

Hyacinth Vane guilty of murder! It seems absurd to [illegible] seems absurd, as though one broke a butterfly on a wheel or racked with torture a feathered songster. My whole heart faints at the sight of pain.

I hated her for her beautiful face, for her proud manner, for her false, sweet words, for her insolence to me; but slay her! Dear heaven, I had neither the strength, the courage nor the will to hurt one hair of her head!

I hated her; she had robbed me of more than my life; but slay her! Ah, me, how foolish the wisest of men are! If I had been a judge and they had brought before me such another girl as myself, it seems to me that I should have looked in the girl's face and said: "That child a murderess? What nonsense!"

Though my judge looked sorry for me, yet he certainly believed I had done that shameful deed.

I shall stand before another judge to-morrow, and he will know; there will be no injustice then—no untruth. I shall find infinite mercy. My earthly judge has failed—on these hands of mine no stain of blood rests.

And now the last faint light must be dying out of the skies at home. My hours grow fewer. I must pray now, while my senses are left me. I must beg heaven to forgive all my sins.

What is my worst sin? I made an idol of my lover. I worshiped him as one should only worship the great Creator. I gave to my lover the love I should have given to heaven. For that sin I must pray for pardon. Again, the sins of hatred against the beautiful woman who stole him from me, of burning jealousy, of bitter words, of longing for vengeance—for those sins and no other, I have to suffer to-morrow a shameful death.

I am sorry for her, lying in her grave, her bright beauty hidden forever from the eyes of men; but I pity myself more. Thousands of curious eyes will look on while I die. There will be no one to prove that I was innocent. My father, my friends, the girls I love, the children I played with, will all believe me guilty; and for fifty years to come they will tell at Dunwold the story of how Hyacinth Vane murdered Gertrude Fraser out of jealousy and revenge. The little ones I have nursed will grow up into men and women, and to their children in their turn they will tell how Hyacinth Vane murdered her beautiful rival, and died in Ulverston jail. There will be no one to tell the truth. I hate to think that Elsie Vane's only child—"the little white Hyacinth," as she was called—shall for all time be branded with the name of murderess.

I kneel down and pray as well as I know how. I remember my sins, and ask pardon for them. And then I ask that I may die bravely; that I may not cry, or shriek, or faint; that I may not cling to the kindly chaplain, whose heart aches for me; that I may not cry out to the seething multitude. I ask—and I never stop to think whether it be right or wrong—with woeful tears that my mother may come and be near me on the scaffold when I am about to die.

It is quite dark; and a strange sound comes to me. It is like the hum of a multitude—a confused, horrible sound. The jail of Ulverston stands facing one of the wide streets, and clearly enough I recognize the sound of an enormous surging mass of people.

They are come to see me die!

I fall upon my knees with a passionate cry of terror and pain. Hundreds and hundreds of people will tell each other how they saw Hyacinth Vane hung. I remember having read with wonder and amazement in the newspapers that to see a fellow creature die men and women will walk for hours, will stand for hours, shouting, singing, jesting, giving no thought to the pain of the doomed one's last moments. Oh, heaven, under the bright blue beautiful sky, can such things be?

Then another sound freezes the blood in my veins. What can it be, this muffled hammering? Oh, I know! At night, with the help of torches, they are erecting the scaffold on which I am to die. I hear the sound plainly, and I cry out with passionate terror and pain—loud, bitter cries; I cannot restrain them. This brings my fate home to me. Who will save me? Who will help me? Oh, heaven—oh, mother—I am so young, and I must die!

I fling myself upon the ground. I am half mad with fear; and the cruel sound of the hammering, the shouting of the crowd, of a vast multitude, seem to grow clearer. How they will rejoice when I stand before them tomorrow to die! For it was a cruel murder, and they all believe me guilty. I could make no defense, except that I had not done it.

My passionate woeful cries ring through the vaulted passages. Some one must have fetched the governor, Capt. Longmore, and the head matron, Mrs. Martyn. I hear the key turn in the lock; my sad, longing eyes gaze out into the corridor, and then the door closes. I am shut up in the condemned cell, and the outer world has gone from me.

It is Mrs. Martyn who raises my head from the cold stone floor, and, looking into the governor's face, says quietly:

"It is very sad for her to hear that noise; it is bad enough without that."

The governor's face darkens.

"It is bad enough altogether," he replies; and I wonder in my own mind whether he thinks me innocent or guilty.

I may mention that this tragedy of mine took place thirty years ago, when it was the custom to hang men and women alike before the scoffing gaze of thousands.

My passion of terror has exhausted me. I feel that my face is white and still as that of a dead woman. I cannot unlock my lips to speak; my eyes are closed.

"I will lay her on the bed," says the matron. "She ought to sleep until the bell tolls."

The governor shudders, strong man though he is. I feel him tremble as he raises me in his arms.

"Hanging men is bad enough," he says; "but a woman, a fair delicate girl like this—I would as soon be hung myself as help in it!"

"Do you really think she did it?" asks the matron in a whisper.

"The law has pronounced her guilty. Surely the judge and the jury must have had pretty good evidence, or she would not be here. I am bound, as governor of this prison, to believe her guilty, and to see that she is punished; but, if you ask my opinion as a man with a judgment of his own in the matter, I should say that she is innocent—that a white dove is far more likely to slay an eagle than she to murder a girl young as herself. I believe another thing, Mrs. Martyn, and it is that, if she does not have either wine or brandy, she will be dead before to-morrow comes." The kindly matron says:

"Let her die, Capt. Longmore. Only think what it would save her, if she could die here, and now!"

"I dare not," he answers slowly. "I must do my best to keep her alive. I shall order some wine."

It is brought to him; and they try to pour it down my throat. I endeavor to open my lips, but I am quite powerless.

"She is dying!" cried the matron. "What shall we do?"

They send for the prison doctor, and he comes in haste.

"Dying? Is she, poor child?" he says. "I wish that I dare let her die."

But he dares not. He does all he can to bring me back from the shadowland, to keep me alive, that to-morrow thousands may look on in the bright sunlight and see me die.

Slowly under his skill and care my eyes open and the blood stirs in my veins. I read the very yearning of pity in the doctor's eyes. The sound of the hammer with its mighty muffled blows is more clear and distinct. I catch his arm.

"Doctor," I cry, "send me where I—Oh, I cannot bear to hear that noise!"

He turns from me with a groan; and the governor says—

"You cannot leave this cell. Try not to hear it, Hyacinth Vane."

Four hours later. The sun has long since set, the birds are surely resting, the flowers all fast asleep; the great beautiful wings of night are spread over the world; the wind is hushed, the trees are still. The noise of the hammer has ceased, and my heart, which seemed to throb painfully with each stroke, beats more regularly.

The moon must be shining, for across the narrow window falls a ray of light, faint, silver light. Ah, me, how often have I watched it lying on the lilies and roses at home! I have seen it on my lover's face, when it has given to it the beauty of a Greek god. I shall never see the sweet silver moonlight again. I can hear the surging, the subdued noises, of the vast crowd; I know that men and women are waiting outside—lying, standing, sitting, through the long hours of the sweet summer night, just to see me die. A hundred memories sweep over me. Again I go over the tragedy of my love—the love that has been my doom, my fate—that has brought me here to die; and I say to myself—may heaven forgive me if I am wrong!—that my love was so dear and so sweet, it made me so unutterably happy, that I would rather have had it, even were it to be followed by the punishment of death, than have been without and have never known it—ten thousand times rather.

I think of every hour I spent with Alan, and my heart grows warm again. Unutterable anguish, the very extreme of sorrow and woe, have followed my love; but it lives in my heart and will never die. They will kill me to-morrow, but they will never slay my love. The best part of us never dies.

I remember her—the tall, dark, brilliant beauty, whose eyes alone would have lured any man to his ruin. There is no stain on my hands; they are white and clean. I hated her, but I would not have hurt a hair of her head. There comes to my mind, as I lie in the darkness and the silence, a horrible story.

We had a fair at Dunwald every year; and when I was about ten years old I was allowed to go to it. The thing that struck me most was not the booths, the stalls, the amusements, the people or the fun, but a man who carried a large board, on which were painted the several scenes of a murder. I remember every detail of it, even the sound of his voice as he shouted out the story.

It was of a mother who had murdered her child by throwing it upon a large blazing kitchen fire. The picture that thrilled me most was a representation of the condemned cell, in which the hapless woman sat staring helplessly at one corner, where the murdered child sat, surrounded by a bright light. The man chanted the mother's words: "By night and by day the child stood always in a corner of my cell, looking at me with such sad eyes." There was no silent figure reproaching me, for on my soul lay no sin of murder.

The darkness increases; and the matron, who has asked to remain with me for the night, sleeps; I can hear her calm, regular breathing, and it seems to me that my pain is increasing. My restless sighs awake her, for she opens her eyes and says:

"Can you not sleep? Would you like to get up?"

I thank her, and try to lie still, so that she may rest.

* * * * * * * *

Oh, the horror of that last night, spent, as it were, under the outstretched hand of death! I cannot tell if I slept; my very senses were steeped in fear and dread; but there came a time when the darkness seemed to enfold me, and I remembered no more.

When I opened my eyes again, a pearly light lay across the window. The sun was rising; it was the last sunrise for me. In my mind I saw it all—the rose-red clouds, the birds actively in quest of food, the flowers with dew on their leaves, the cool, sweet earth; I saw all the beauty and color at home.

A pitying voice asked would I take some tea. My lips were parched, my mouth burned, I longed for a cup of water even, and the cup of tea was most refreshing; yet I could hardly drink it—the recollection that it was my last almost prevented my swallowing it.

Six o'clock—and at eight I had to die. A strange calmness came over me, a stupor that froze all my senses; I could not even pray—and I had been so anxious to pray. The chaplain came in then, and the others stood apart that

A Thousand Tongues

Could not express the rapture of Annie E. Springer, of 1125 Howard st., Philadelphia, Pa., when she found that Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption had completely cured her of a hacking cough that for many years had made life a burden. All other remedies and doctors could give her no help, but she says of this Royal Cure: "It soon removed the pain in my chest and I can now sleep soundly, something I can scarcely remember doing before. I feel like sounding its praises throughout the Universe." So will every one who tries Dr. King's New Discovery for any trouble of the Throat, Chest or Lungs. Price 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottle free at W. A. Schreiter's, Drug Store; every bottle guaranteed.

Robbed the Grave.

A startling incident, of which Mr. John Oliver of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in my back and sides, no appetite, gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately a friend advised trying Electric Bitters; and to my great joy and surprise the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they saved my life and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50 cts., guaranteed, at W. A. Schreiter, Drug Store.

Florida and the South Via Monon Route.

Tourist and Homeseekers rates to nearly all points in the south. Six daily trains from Chicago. Only one night out to Florida. Send stamp for 10 routes to the South. For rates, folders &c., address Frank J. Reed, G. P. A., Chicago or L. E. Sessions, N. W. Passenger Agent, Minneapolis, Minn.

Dr. W. H. Lewis, Lawrenceville, Va., writes, "I am using Kodol Dyspepsia in my practice among severe cases of indigestion and find it an admirable remedy." Many hundreds of physicians depend upon the use of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure in stomach troubles. It digests what you eat, and allows you to eat all the food you need, providing you do not overload your stomach. Gives instant relief and a permanent cure. W. A. Schreiter.

Do not get scared if your heart troubles you. Most likely you suffer from indigestion. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat and gives the worn out stomach perfect rest. It is the only preparation known that completely digests all classes of food; that is why it cures the worst cases of indigestion and stomach troubles after everything else has failed. It may be taken in all conditions and cannot help but do good. W. A. Schreiter.

Experiences of Missionaries.

At the First Baptist church last night a union meeting of Baptists was held to hear addresses on missionary work, says the Indianapolis News. The Rev. Frank H. Levering, who, for six years, has been attached to the Telugu mission in India, spoke of the ravages of the famine. His mission is in the famine district. Great Britain should not be blamed, he said, for the condition in India, for the cause was a natural one, over which there could be no control. The heathen, he said, did nothing to relieve the suffering. Everything that was being done was by Christians. The Rev. Henry Richards, who has for twenty-one years been a missionary in Africa, told of conditions in the Congo valley. He said he worked seven years before making a single convert. Some of the tribes persecute the missionaries, he said, but generally the people are interested in the Bible, if it is presented in a way they can understand.

London Bakers in 1310.

In 1310 we find the following Bow bakeresses accused of selling halfpenny loaves deficit in weight: Sarra Foting, Christina Terrice, Godlyson Foting, Matilda de Ballingtone, Christina Prichet, Isabella Sparling, Alice Pegges, Johanna de Caunterbriggs and Isabella Pouvests. One wonders why the husbands were not summoned, says the Gentleman's Magazine. In a similar case, in 1316, when Agnes Foting's bread was seized, it was "adjudged that her bread should be forfeited and given to the prisoners in Newgate, because her husband did not come to avow (own) the bread." Are we to assume that in the absence of the husbands the bread was merely forfeited without the infliction of a fine? An indication of the importance of the breadmaking business is also found in an enactment of the reign of Henry III., to the effect that "every cart of Bremble (Bromley-by-Bow) or Stevanhethe (Stepney) that comes into the city with bread shall pay each day one halfpenny."

Literally Died of Thirst.

An echo of General Macdonald's march to Koodoosberg is contained in a letter of a private at Modder River to the Pall Mall Gazette. "One poor chap of our regiment," he writes, "staggered during the march, and was found next evening by some cavalry patrol lying on the veldt in a dying condition, piteously moaning for water. As soon as they gave him some he expired. When brought in he was in so emaciated a condition as to be unrecognisable. He died literally of thirst."

Through the Glass Uninjured.

Tuesday, when Fred Gesswein returned to his office from dinner, he found one of the large glasses in his office front broken and pieces scattered over the room. The evenness of the break, which was in circular form, led him to believe that it had been occasioned from the throwing of a rock with great force, but the mystery was soon cleared up when he found a partridge fluttering around in the rear of the room, entirely unhurt. The bird must have gone through the double strength glass at tremendous velocity, and how it could have lived through the experience is a mystery.

Vic's Letter.

Farlic, P. I., Sept. 3, 1900

Editor Gazette:

I will drop you a few lines in the moments that I have to spare. We have been very busy here of late and the men have been doing guard about every third night, and rain, rain, rain every day and night. A person must not leave his home without having swimming clothes on. On the 20th of August we were water bound so that we rowed boats in the streets of this town. We got our share of swimming work for exercise and were compelled to live on short rations during this rain, as there was no possible way of getting to where our rations were stored, as bridges were washed away and railroad beds washed out on all sides of the town. Since the water has gone down we have been busy transferring government stores to the north, from Manilla, as all roads terminate their runs on each side of this town. We are ever on the go. I have for some time been on special duty connected with the subsistance department and am on the meat transferring crew and must say that it is hard work, with long hours.

I would like to ask you a favor. I have made an application for transfer to the Engine Corps of the U. S. Army and some of the officials here have tried in every way to side-track my application at every office it had to go to for endorsement. I have guarded against it, but now it is beyond my reach as it has been sent to Washington, and so far it is all approved and I have passed a very good examination for the engineer corps, so I see very little to stop my being transferred except that it be sidetracked at Washington. Now, if you would write to our senator or representative and ask them, for me, to give me a lift if they can reach me. Thereby you would be helping me to place my foot on the first round of the ladder. I will also enclose a letter from 1st Sargent, B Co., of Eng., which you might send to them.

Nominations not Legal.

It appears that the Republican convention was the only legal convention held in this county in this year of grace, 1900. Both the Democratic and Populist conventions were lame as to the requirement of publishing the convention call twenty days prior to the date of holding the primaries. This fact necessitated the circulation of petitions by those nominees who desired to have their names placed on the ticket. The Populists were the first to get out petitions, and every nominee of that party has filed, Thos. Belair having been the last one to get his paper filled with the requisite ten per cent. of the votes cast at the last election. The time of filing expired Tuesday, the 16th, at twelve p.m. Up to Tuesday morning not a Democratic nominee had stirred in the matter of getting out petitions, but before the expiration of the time limit J. T. Knight, D. Linnihan, Jake Thill and H. W. Leo presented their petitions to the county auditor.

Don't Forget Your Taxes.

All the real estate taxes become due on the first Monday in January of each year. If not paid on or before the 31st day of May following, a penalty of 10 per cent. is added; and if not paid on or before the first Monday of the following January, an additional penalty of 5 per cent. is added and the land will be sold on the first Monday in May. But, if one-half of the taxes due on the first Monday in January in each year, shall be paid on or before the 31st of May following: then no penalty will be added to the remaining one-half. If the said remaining one-half shall be paid before the first day of November. If not so paid a penalty of ten per cent. will be added, and if still unpaid on the first Monday in January, an additional penalty of five per cent. of the original tax remaining unpaid will be charged.

Interest on Tax Sales is one (1) per cent. a month.

A New Bank for Thief River Falls.

L. C. Simons, president of the Merchants State Bank, of this city, after looking the situation over thoroughly, has decided to open a bank at Thief River Falls, under the title of Western State Bank. He will be president, Jas. Meehan Jr., vice-president, and K. M. Hansen, cashier. At present there is but one bank at Thief River Falls, although it is said to be a very good banking town, the deposits running in the neighborhood of a hundred thousand, and business conditions generally are good. The establishing of this bank ought to be another link to bind Red Lake Falls and Thief River Falls closer together, and as the matter is considered our cousins up the river will come more and more to see that the interests of the two towns will be best subserved by pulling together along parallel lines, since our interests do not conflict.

The Big Rally.

The Republicans of the city are bending every effort to make the Bede meeting, to be held in this city on Thursday, October 25, a rouser. Hon. J. Adam Bede, one of the most entertaining political speakers of the day, will be the main attraction, while Hon. W. H. Savary, of Illinois, who has the reputation of being a peerless orator, will address the meeting in French. The Red Lake Falls, Thief River Falls and Crookston brass bands will be in attendance, and a special train will run as follows: Leave Crookston, 4:15, p. m Wylie, 5, p.m.; Thief River Falls, 6:30, p. m.; St. Hilaire, 6:50 p. m., arriving at Red Lake Falls at 7:15, m. The meeting will open at 8 o'clock. A torchlight procession will march from the city hall to the opera house. Songs will be tendered by the Glee Club. The special train, returning, will leave Red Lake Falls at 11 p. m.

To Gervani Orsallno:

You are hereby notified that on the 9th day of May, A. D. 1891, in proceedings to enforce the payment of delinquent taxes pursuant to that certain real estate judgment, which was entered in the District Court in and for the County of Polk, in the Fourteenth Judicial District, in the State of Minnesota, on the 21st day of March, A. D. 1891, the following described piece or parcel of land now situated in Red Lake county (formerly Polk county,) State of Minnesota, to-wit:

W½ NW¼ and W½ SW¼, section 13, town 152; range 44,

was bid in to the State to satisfy the amount for which it was judged liable in said judgment, interests and costs, for the sum of thirty dollars and sixty cents; that the above described real estate has become and now is the Absolute Property of the State;

That on the 12th day of May, A. D., 1900, the above described real estate was sold by the undersigned county Auditor of Polk county, as directed by the State Auditor, in accordance with Section 101 of Chapter 11 of the general Statutes of 1878, and the several acts amendatory thereto, for the sum of one hundred nine dollars and sixty five cents; that the amount required to redeem said piece or parcel of land from such sale (exclusive of the costs to accrue on this notice) is one hundred nine dollars and sixty five cents with interest at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum, from said 12th day of May, A. D., 1900, until such redemption is made, and that the time for redemption of said piece or parcel of land from such sale will expire sixty days after the service of this notice, and proof thereof has been filed in the office of the county auditor of said county of Polk.

Witness my hand and official seal this 20th day of September, A. D. 1900.

MARK YOUR BALLOT.

For Judge of Probate—J. T. KNIGHT.	X

J. T. Knight is making a phenomenal run for judge of probate, and his friends are confident he will be elected. Parties and politics aside, the voters know he is a good man for the office, and that he deserves it. Who would vote to throw down a man who, as the Father of Red Lake county, has merited the gratitude of our people? It would be a shameful thing for the citizens of Red Lake county to do, and we do not believe they will do it. "Ingratitude is the basest of sins" says Shakespeare. Let the people of Red Lake county not be guilty of it.

DISTRICT COURT.

The Calendar Unusually Large. Three Criminal Cases.

The October term of court opened Monday afternoon at 1 o'clock, with Judge Watts presiding, the calendar containing 44 civil and three criminal cases, is the heaviest on record in this county, and it is not probable that the business can be disposed of until next week, notwithstanding Judge Watts' well known propensities for long hours and night work.

There were twelve cases continued from the former calendar. That of P. & J. Mechan vs. Philip and Mary Zeh was settled.

McCormick Harvester Co. vs. Philip Lacoursiere, suit on note. A judgment was secured against defendant in the sum of $400.12, with costs, as a result of the proceedings at the last term, and the case should not have appeared on the calendar.

In the matter of the proceedings to enforce payment of taxes on realestate remaining delinquent on the first Monday in January, 1899, for Red Lake county, on St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Ry. Co. lands, the case is contined, awaiting decision of similar cases now before the United States supreme court.

John Cromb, trustee of B. E. Burkee and John E. Burkee, vs. John E Burkee, et al. Motion for judgment on pleadings. Will go over.

Robinson & Cary Co. vs. Red Lake Falls Lumber Company. The plaintiffs sue for $308.12 on a bill of goods furnished the lumber company. Settled out of court.

John Schlosar vs. H. E. Mussey. Tried at the last term of court, but has not been decided.

Albon Wright vs. P. & J. Meehan. Appealed from justice court, where plaintiff obtained a judgment for $85 for sawing lumber.

F. A. Grady vs. M. O. Sortedahl, is a libel suit for $10,000, arising from articles published in a newspaper, in a controversy over the appointment of Grady as official abstractor.

Fred Gesswein vs. Anna LaBissoniere, plaintiff demands $60 as commission. He had the agency for the sale of the sw¼ sec. 36, township 151, range 44, and had sold it for $1400, when owner refused to execute the deed. Goes over until next term.

There are four suits against Salem Mageau and Henry Johnson for wages.

Myron H. Davis vs. F. A. Grady. Davis claims $80 with interest from Nov. 15, 1897, as an amount collected by Grady for Davis, and which sum Davis alleges has not been turned over to him.

Metropolitan Music Co., vs. Kate Wilmes. This was on a piano deal, and the case was settled without going to trial.

Charles L. Conger vs. Edward J. Hodgson, suit for $300, with interest from Nov. 3, 1897.

J. L. Carey vs. E. M. Evenson, action for wages, $90.

J. A. Bray vs. Philip Kaufer, et al, suit for $1025 damages from falling of fire wall. The case of Philip Chayer vs. same parties is an action for $1350 damages, from same cause.

M. Skala vs. City of Red Lake Falls. Skala alleges $1500 damages resulting from the making of a ditch on the north side of his farm two years ago.

Chas. Noel vs. the Alliance Hail & Cyclone Mutual Insurance company of Minnesota, for $400 hail loss this summer. The company offered $150 in settlement, but this was not accepted.

Gottlieb Gerlach vs. Wm. P. O'Brien, et al, action to clear the title on the Palace hotel property. This case has not yet been reached.

The cases of Theo. LaBissoniere, Groshong & Blake, N. C. Olson & Co. and others, vs Katie Wilmes are actions to realize on liens secured against the Palace hotel property during defendant's ownership. It is not probable that these cases will be reached this week.

Almon Wright vs. F. E. Culver, J. C. Hanson, A. C. Henson, et al. On mechanic's lien, for sawing lumber.

Ed. Hamy vs. Elsie Hamry, action for divorce.

Albert Gray vs. Red Lake Falls Lumber Company, suit for $15,000 damages, on account of injury to the plaintiff's left foot while in the company's employ in the lumber camps in 1898. Ardilla C. Adams and Anna Adams and Susanna Cunningham and Geo. Cunningham, are suing the city of Thief River Falls for personal injury sustained last April, when thrown out of a wagon while crossing the Great Northern track. They ask for an aggregate damage of $40,000.

Louis Hutt vs. Ernest Buse, suit to collect on note.

Several cases have been moved on the calendar since court opened, making a total of about fifty besides the criminal actions.

The only suit decided, up to the time of going to press, is that of Ole O. Olson, who sued J. C. Dahl, of St. Hilaire, for work done on his residence, and for the construction of a cistern. The amount asked for was $105. The jury awarded Olson $67.31.

The Skala case has gone to the jury, who are still out.

The three criminal cases on the calendar are State of Minnesota vs. Joseph Morinville, for selling liquor on the Sabbath day, and same vs. Peter Paradis, continued from former calendar. The bastardy case of State vs Roman Anderson was also continued from last term. It is not known when these will come up.

State vs. George Gervais, for assault on Ovilla Rock, the judgment of thirty days in the Polk County Jail, imposed by Justice Toupin, was confirmed.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Ed Hamry Wants an Injunction.

As a sequence to the excitement that followed the announcement last week of the necessity of the Populist and Democratic nominees filing petitions to enable them getting their names in the official ballot, comes the action of Ed. Hamry, candidate for register of deeds, instituting proceedings before the district court to keep the name of Edonor Pernsse, democratic nominee for register of deeds, off the ticket. The matter came up before Judge Watts Tuesday morning. It was shown that the Democratic call was first published Aug. 9, and the primaries called for the 25th, leaving but 16 days between, when there should have been 20, and that Perusse did not take the precaution of filing a petition. But at the last moment Ed. Hamry failed to put in an appearance, and the name of Edonor Perusse will appear on the official ballot with the other nominees.

Big Immigration.

Hon. Marcus Johnson reports the business in his land department as on the increase. Especially active is the demand for homes in Red Lake county, and he has just concluded a deal with a farmer from the vicinity of Atwater, for the Madden farm in Black River. He estimates that a colony of twenty five families from the same locality will buy homes in this county this fall.

To the Public.

We wish to announce that we are now making flour that is second to none on the market. Try a sack of "Red Lake Falls Best" or "Family Patent," our leading brands and be convinced. We are using old wheat and the new will be fit for milling by the time we are out of old. We pay cash for wheat, oats and barley, and exchange flour for wheat, and sell feed, bran, etc.

We have a first-class feed mill in connection with our mill. We solicit a share of your trade.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

THE CRISIS IN CHINA.

Field Marshal Count von Waldersee has arrived at Peking.

The allied forces are reported to have taken Paoting Fu without opposition.

All the powers have endorsed the French note as a basis for negotiations with China.

Count von Waldersee says he regards the Chinese campaign as ended and expects a recall soon.

Kang Yu Wei, the noted reformer and refugee, is at the head of the revolt in Southern China.

President McKinley has agreed to urge the immediate establishment of peaceful relations with China.

The rebellion is spreading around Canton and the officials of that place are preparing to defend the city.

Germany and England have formed an alliance to maintain the territorial integrity of China and to keep the ports open.

A special dispatch received from Shanghai says that 1,000 French troops have taken Te-Chow on the northern border of Shan-Tung province.

Prince Ching and Li Hung Chang have addressed a joint note to the foreign envoys, naming Oct. 20 for the first meeting to discuss the conditions of peace.

It is rumored that the emperor of China has escaped to Peking and that the empress dowager and Prince Tuan are establishing an opposition court at Sian Fu.

The military mandarin at San Chun reports that Admiral Ho has defeated the rebels, killing 100 of them and driving the survivors into the Northeast river.

The Chinese rebels are concentrating in the district around Canton. An important movement is expected within a week which will either smash or give power to the rebellion.

The rising in the southern provinces promises to surpass the Taiping rebellion. The commander of the Black Flags has been ordered to return to Canton from Shansi with his troops.

It is regarded as certain that the alleged imperial edict ordering the punishment of high officials was forged, and was done with the object of stopping the advance of the allies on Pao Ting. Both Prince Ching and Li Hung Chang deny its authenticity.

The diplomatic corps at Peking has received a joint note from Li Hung Chang and Prince Ching saying that it is time to end the present situation and to treat for peace, and that the princes and ministers who were accomplices of the Boxers will be handed over to the courts to be judged and punished according to Chinese law.

BRITISH-BOER WAR NEWS.

The Boers are daily tearing up portions of the railway and cutting the telephone and telegraph wires.

President Kruger has been secretly placed aboard a Dutch cruiser at Lorenzo Marques. The vessel sailed later for Marseilles.

Lord Methuen has re-occupied Zerust and captured numerous wagons, a large quantity of stores and many cattle and sheep.

Lourenzo Marques railroad authorities have been instructed to turn over to the British all the rolling stock of the Netherlands railroad.

Near Vryheid, a Boer commando was taken in ambuscade by Bethune's mounted infantry, the Boers losing 60 killed, 35 wounded and 65 taken prisoners.

A party of Boers got into Jagersfontein on the night of Oct. 16 and a fight ensued in the morning. The British loss was 11 killed. The Boers lost their commandant and 20 killed.

The London Daily Express publishes a report that General Sir Redvers Buller has been summoned from South Africa to succeed Lord Wolseley as commander-in-chief, Lord Roberts declining the position with a free hand.

THE ANTHRACITE STRIKE.

Striking miners continue to hold out.

Preparations are being made by the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron company, the Mineral Railroad and Mining company and the Union Coal company for an early resumption of work at their collieries.

The general belief is that the present week will see the windup of the coal strike. The strikers do not admit this openly, but it is the feeling that the lockout cannot be continued much longer. Both sides are expected to make concessions.

Representatives of all the big coal mining companies met at Scranton Thursday and decided to insist that a decrease in the price of powder be computed as part of the increase in wages to contract miners. District President Nichols of the United Mine Workers says the mine workers' officers were directed to get a straight advance and that another miners' convention will be necessary before the strike can be declared off.

FINANCE AND TRADE.

Nearly $4,000,000 in gold has arrived at San Francisco from Australia on the steamer Alameda.

A syndicate has just purchased 100,000 acres of agricultural lands in St. Louis county, Minn., and will place it on the market.

The potato crop of the United States approximates 239,000,000 bushels, or nearly 5,000,000 bushels less than last year, and a fairly good yield compared with the average of the past 10 years.

A quarterly return has been issued by Lloyds showing that the United States, at the end of the last quarter, had, next to Great Britain, the largest tonnage in shipping under construction.

A Golden Dawn.

e might talk to me. I raised my dazed, miserable eyes to his face, the kind, good face that in my distress and horror had been to me as that of an angel.

"I have but two hours," I said; and then it must have been the sight of the tears in his eyes that brought mine, for I fell weeping at his knees, crying to him that I had to die—to die!

He turned away his head with a sob.

"She is only a child," I heard him say, "only a child." He recovered himself. "Let us spend the two hours in preparing for heaven," he said; and then told me how much it was to be desired that I should make a full and free confession of my crime, with all its details.

My crime! That had been loving my lover too well, not the murder of my rival. I could only look into his face and cry out:

"I am innocent. Do you not believe that I am innocent? If I had been guilty, I should have told you before. Do you not believe me?"

"The law has found you guilty, my poor child," he said.

"The law is unjust!" I exclaimed.

He laid his hand upon my shoulder.

"Hush, my poor child," he said. "Remember that you are at the threshold of another world; there should be calmness at the gates of death. If you are guilty of the crime for which you are going to die, then accept death as a just punishment of your sin; believe me, child, the scaffold, as well as the cross, has opened for some the gates of heaven. If your are innocent, give your life cheerfully. You can die a martyr's death."

Until just before the terrible hour struck, he prayed for and with me. He told me what I should have to suffer, how great would be the ordeal of stepping out from the dark gloom of the prison walls into the bright sunlight, where thousands of faces would be turned eagerly toward mine. He told me, when deadly fear seized me, to pray "God be merciful to me a sinner."

As he talked I grew calmer, and the thought entered my mind, "If men pay such a man as this with gold, what will his reward be in heaven?" Calmer! I had need to be calm. There was a hush in my cell, a roar from the crowd outside, then a solemn and terrible pause; one voice said, "Poor child!" another, "Lord have mercy on us all." "Hush!!" said the governor, imperatively.

Ah, I knew—I knew!! The cell door opened, and a man came in with a rope in his hands.

"It is time," he said, in a low, harsh voice.

He took hold of my arms to pinion them. I cried out to him:

"Pray let them be free! I will be docile, silent, motionless; only let my arms be free!"—those white, rounded arms that had been clasped round my lover's neck. With a passion of despair, I kissed the little hands that had gathered the lilies in the garden at home. They were warm now; only a few minutes more and they would be dead.

The man turned aside for half a minute when he saw me kiss my hands; and then my arms were pinioned to my side.

The dread moment was drawing terribly near. The bell began to toll, and the warders came. Was I a coward that I cried aloud in my agony for heaven to help me—that woful cries and passionate words came from my lips? Was I a coward that I turned my white, dazed, miserable face to the chaplain, telling him I was so frightened? I was almost dead with fear. I saw strong men turn away with great, tearless sobs, and one woman fell fainting to the ground.

The roars and cries of the crowd were quite audible then, and the solemn tolling of the bell sounded above all. The procession was pitiful enough to make an angel weep. All the stern majesty of the law was arrayed against one poor, white, trembling child, whose hands were bound; grim, stern men—the governor, with his military bearing, the warders, with their impassive faces—were leading me to death.

We were in the corridor then, and the solemn words of the burial service cut my heart in two.

"I am the Resurrection and the Life——"

Hush! Hark! What was wrong! Such a cry rose from hundreds of lips! There was a surging and a rush in the vast crowd; there was a strange sound within the prison walls. The warder halted; the chaplain's words died on his lips; the governor stood still.

"Stop! A reprieve! Stop!"

It was as though a whole nation shouted with a mighty voice, "Stop!" And then men came running up the corridor, one bearing on him the marks of travel. He hastened to the governor.

"A reprieve!" he said. "I ought to have been here two hours ago, but I was delayed by an accident. I am not too late; thank heaven," he added, "that I am not too late!"

"A reprieve!" cried one to another; and from the crowd there arose a mighty cheer that seemed to cleave the bright blue sky.

Some one unpinioned my arms. I could not realize, I could not understand what was passing. When my hands were free, I caught the outstretched arms of the chaplain. I raised my face to his; no sound came from my parched parted lips.

"You are saved!" he said.

And then, heaven in mercy sent a dark mist, a dark cloud that shut out everything; and so my dream of a scaffold ended.

CHAPTER XVII.

While Hyacinth Vane suffered in prison, a long agony began for Alan Branston. He was as sure of her innocence as he was of the truth of heaven, but he was quite powerless, he could do nothing; and the time was drawing near when the last and most terrible act of the tragedy was to take place.

He left no stone unturned; but what could he do? He went to Dene Hall, and sifted all the evidence over and over again. It was of no use; nothing seemed to be of the least avail. He spent whole days in trying to obtain a farewell interview with her, but I could not obtain it.

There were times when his misery almost maddened him, when he blamed himself wildly for his folly, when he cried out that his own weakness had cut short two fair lives, when he would have given his heart's blood to have undone what he had done.

One morning, two days before the day for the execution, there came to him a note, written in a quaint, trembling hand, headed from Mary Street, Leicester Square, and signed "Andrea Fleschi"—a note from a dying man, who begged of him to go without loss of time and see him on a matter of life and death.

Alan was there before three hours had passed, and, on inquiring, was told that the Italian gentleman who was occupying the drawing rooms, was supposed to be dying; he had met with an accident some months before, the landlady said, and had never been well afterward.

"Go to him," cried Alan, eagerly, "and tell him that the gentleman to whom he wrote—Alan Branston, of Elmsthorpe Grange—is waiting to see him.

In a few minutes he stood by the bedside of the dying man—a handsome man, and evidently a patrician—who looked into his face with dim, wistful eyes.

"You are Alan Branston?" he interrogated; and the answer was a quick, almost impatient, "Yes."

"You loved and wished to marry Hyacinth Vane, now in prison for the—the murder of Gertrude Fraser?"

"Yes," said Alan; and the dim eyes looked more keenly at him.

"You have suffered," remarked the stranger. "I see lines on your face, white threads in your hair. I have seen signs of anguish and woe that have known no rest and no cessation. I should not tell you my secret now, but that I know I am going to die, and the telling of it cannot hurt me, while it may save her. Send for a magistrate and what other witnesses you desire; I will tell you my story once, and all may hear it."

* * * * * * * *

Alan Branston, Mr. Barton, one of the keenest London magistrates, and Alton Chevril, one of the barristers who had done his best in defending Hyacinth, were all assembled in the dying man's room. He looked at them with steady eyes and a calm face; he hesitated one-half minute, while Alan's heart beat so strongly with excitement and suspense that it seemed to him every one must hear it.

"I am perhaps quixotic in what I am doing," said Count Fleschi; "but my doctors say that I shall die before forty-eight hours are over my head, and I may as well save that young girl's life, if I can. I have done many bad actions, and a few good ones. I have cheated the law and the scaffold. I may tell you that I murdered Lady Fraser—let me add also that, if ever a woman on earth justly deserved her fate, she did; that, if the time and the opportunity came again, I would repeat the deed. No weak, sickly thought of repentance has urged me to confess all this. I am dying, and that young girl may live."

Mr. Barton caught Alan Branston, as his tall, strong figure swayed to and fro; the wonderful strength that had upheld him so long gave way now that there was a glimmer of hope. Count Fleschi smiled a slow, satirical smile.

"Give him some brandy," he said. "I know what it is. I once loved a woman like that, and she deceived me. Let him listen to me; tell him time is short."

"Time is short," whispered Mr. Barton in Alan's ear; "every moment is worth gold; and we have so much to do."

The words were magical in their effect; Alan stood up again, and again the count smiled.

"I understand it," he said. "I loved a woman just as much as that once. Who teaches women? Not heaven, I am sure—there is no art so cruel but that they understand it; there is nothing they cannot do. The woman I loved and slew knew all that the world of coquetry and cruelty holds. She was one of those cursed with a beautiful face, who used the beauty heaven had given her to work misery and destruction among her fellow creatures.

"Let me tell my own tale—what she did to me. I tried her in my own mind, condemned her—took the law into my own hands and slew her. Let me tell you what she did. Three years ago I was good in heart and soul, devoted to my country. I had great hopes, fiery ambition; I longed to imitate the great men of my native land, and devote my life to her service. Bella Italia—I had no other love.

"I met the siren who has wrecked my life, admired her, and for a time resisted her. I said to myself, 'No love but that of Italy.' I steeled my heart against the warm glances of her eyes, against the lovely smiles of her red lips, against the touch of her white hands; and, when she saw that a few sweet smiles and looks would not move me, she set to work to ruin me.

"She did not love—not in the least; but she had a thirst for conquests. Men's hearts were playthings to her; she loved to torture them. She saw that I had resolved to steel my heart against her, and she resolved to win me. She never gave me any rest until she had made me love her.

"Do you know how we Italians love? We love with a fire such as you cold Englishmen never know. She lighted this fire in my heart solely to gratify her own vain love of conquest. She made me love her; and I loved her as madly as any man ever loved woman. I laid my heart and soul at her feet; and then she was content. I lived in a fool's paradise for a few days; then I asked her to be my wife. She laughed at me; and my hot blood boiled with rage. I said to her:

"You have aroused the love in my heart; you must be my wife.

"She laughed again, and the fire burned more fiercely in my blood. I swore that she should be mine. She was frightened, and tried to temporise by a few soft words and looks. The day came when she spoke of returning to England, still laughing at the notion of being my wife. We had angry words, and I swore that if she did not keep the promise she had made me, I would follow her to the end of the world and kill her.

"Patriotism, country, honor, fidelity, all became less than nothing to me. I bore my pain until I could bear it no longer, and then I followed her to England. I read in a provincial newspaper that she was at Dene Hall. I knew her well. If I had asked after her in the broad daylight she would have evaded me; so I went to her window by night. I gave her a fair chance for her life. I asked her to marry me, and she refused. We talked for an hour. She was beautiful—I could not kill her; I let her go back into the house again. Then I brooded over my wrongs—brooded until I grew mad.

"'She must die!' Under the stars I swore that she should. I climbed to her window and entered the room. She lay fast asleep, her hands wrapped in a small blue-and-white shawl. Ah, heaven, shall I ever forget the sight—the lovely face so placid and still, the ed lips parted in sleep?

"I had no mercy—I stabbed her to the heart. She died instantaneously. She never moved or stirred beyond clinching her hands; and I went as I had come—but I had had my revenge. Open that locked box; here is the key. You will find in it the dagger that I used. It is an old heirloom of the Fleschi family. You will say that heaven was quick to punish me. As I climbed the outer wall of the park my arm caught on a great rusty nail, and my flesh was torn even to the bone. I took little notice of the wound; but my neglect has ended fatally. It is a just punishment, you will say—perhaps it is.

"Now you have little time to lose. Hasten to the home secretary. The girl is quite innocent—he will respite her. Do not trouble about me; I shall soon be dead."

Save that the police were directed to watch, Mr. Barton, Mr. Chevril and Alan did just as he had advised; they went all three together, and the home secretary did all in his power to help them.

When the reprieve was safe in his hands, Alan had even then a hard struggle before him. There was no telegraph wires to Ulverston; he had to engage a special train—and that was delayed by an accident. He was only just in time to save Hyacinth's life.

When she awoke from her long swoon, it was to find his arms round her and his kisses warm on her face.

"Oh, my love," she cried, "the agony of the past weary night!" He looked at her.

"Think no more of it," he said, "this is the golden dawn."

* * * * * * * *

Count Fleschi died that night; and before another day had passed his confession was spread all over England. People read it with wondering eyes. How foolish they had been to think Hyacinth Vane guilty!

* * * * * * * *

Hyacinth stood by the green grave where Francis Vane slept with his wife. The girl's heart still throbbing and beating with the atonement that had been made to her. She and Alan were married; and he had brought her to the spot she loved best.

"It seems to me, Alan," she said, "that the whole country has in some measure tried to atone to me—I have had any number of letters of sympathy; but nothing can give him back to me—the dear father whom that awful shock killed."

"We need not wish him back, my darling," returned Alan; "he lives in the light of the golden dawn."

Again she laid her fair head against the marble cross.

"It seems so strange, Alan," she said, "to begin life again; I had thought it all ended."

"It will be a life that shall be as heaven's blessing and human love can make it," he told her; "and it begins for us, my darling, in a golden dawn."

(The End.)

Curious Will of an English Sport.

In drawing up a will, it is always best to call in the aid of a solicitor. Otherwise your executors may have a lot of trouble, and the bulk of your property be swallowed up in law costs. These consequences are likely to follow in the case of the will of Morris Roberts, the Birmingham prize fighter. It is a very curious document. One annuity is left to a female relation on condition that she is not convicted of theft, drunkenness or immorality. On lery full of portraits of the men who the annuity ceases. To a male relation a legacy is left on condition that he part from the woman with whom he is now living. The bulk of the property is ordered to remain in the Bank of England for twenty years, at the expiration of which time it is to be equally divided among the sorrowing relations.—London Figaro.

How a Sword Fish Can Fight.

Capt. Amery, of the schooner Origin, which has arrived at Plymouth from Labrador with fish, reported that while on the outward voyage from England the vessel was attacked by a swordfish, whose sword penetrated the hull and broke off as the fish attempted to withdraw it. The fish then turned several somersaults and disappeared, as if either stunned or killed by the force of the shock. The sword left in the side of the ship measured eighteen inches. Before Newfoundland was reached the vessel made over a foot of water, and the crew are of the opinion that if the fish had succeeded in withdrawing its sword the vessel would have foundered.—London Daily News.

To Beat the Ferris Wheel.

Edward M. Creene of San Francisco has been in Chicago viewing the wonders of the fair, and has gone back home with the intention of producing a novelty which shall eclipse the Ferris wheel. He proposes to erect for the midwinter fair in San Francisco, a colossal statue of justice, 150 feet high, supporting an immense pair of scales, the extremities of which will be cars holding 50 people each. The beam will be a truss 300 feet long, oscillating like a walking beam, and lifting the cars to a height of 350 feet.

Not Uncommon.

"Bredren," said Parson Black, earnestly, "dere am some folks in which de still, small voice ob conscience keeps a-gettin' stiller and smaller, until at las' 'd hab ter l'arn de deef an' dumb langwidge if it wants ter attrack dir attention."—Puck.

FOUR FIREMEN DEAD

FATAL ACCIDENT AT THE MINNESOTA TRANSFER.

Assistant Chief Irvine of the St. Paul Fire Department and Three of His Men Victims of Falling Walls—Anderson Tax Law Cases Before the Supreme Court—Duluth Lumbermen Convicted of Arson—State News in General.

ST. PAUL, Oct. 22.—Fire at the Minnesota Transfer, supposed to be of incendiary origin, caused the death of four firemen and the serious injury of three others, besides doing about $445,000 worth of damage. Shortly after midnight fire was discovered in the packing plant of A. D. Hinman. A second alarm was sent in in a few minutes and shortly after a special call was made for engines. The packing plant in which the blaze originated covers several acres with buildings and sheds of the most inflammable character, and in a short time the buildings were burned to the ground.

The fire spread to the buildings of the Northwestern Land company and the McCormick Harvester company. The former was stored with farm implements and is a total loss. The large brick warehouse of the harvester company was packed full of machinery and is a total loss.

Were Unable to Escape.

While the firemen were fighting to save the harvester company property and Assistant Chief Irvine and his companions were making their way up the building the walls collapsed. The unfortunate firemen were unable to make their escape and were buried by the mass of falling debris.

The dead are Second Assistant Chief Irvine, Lieutenant Frank M. Eddy, Louis Wagner and Burt Irish.

The injured are Thomas Clarkin, William Field and Andrew Johnson.

The fire spread, after the wall of the warehouse fell, to a row of tenements near the building, and it was with difficulty that they were saved. Twenty-two box cars belonging to the Great Northern railway company were on a side track and caught fire. A switch engine started to haul the cars away, but the flames had made too much headway, and the cars were destroyed. Eight cars, the ownership of which is unknown, were also burned.

ANDERSON TAX LAW.

Minnesota Case Before the United States Supreme Court.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—The Anderson tax law cases, appealed from the Minnesota supreme court, occupied the entire day in the United States supreme court and the argument was not concluded. With the consent of the court the cases of the Duluth and Iron Range road against St. Louis county were consolidated with the original case. The question involved in the cases is the constitutionality of the Anderson tax law, which imposes a tax of 3 per cent of the gross earnings of all the railways in Minnesota.

It was argued last winter before eight judges and when they considered the case at one of their consultations there was an even division, four judges voting to affirm and four to reverse the decision of the Minnesota supreme court, which sustained the law. Judge Brown, who did not sit in the case last term, is present now and paid close attention to the arguments, especially those relating to the constitutional question at issue.

LUMBERMEN CONVICTED.

Found Guilty of Setting Fires in Timber on Indian Reservation.

DULUTH, Oct. 21.—C. H. Selys and Harry Shearer were found guilty in the United States court here of starting fires among the timber on the Chippewa Indian reservation in Itasca county. It was alleged that the defendants set the fires in order to damage the timber on the reservation, which, under the dead and down timber act, the Indians are permitted to sell. The principal witnesses for the prosecution were Chippewa Indians. Both Selye and Shearer are well known in this section, the former having for several years past been a prominent lumberman. This is the first case of its kind that has ever been tried in this district and has created considerable interest among lumbermen. The penalty is three years' imprisonment or a fine of $5,000.

BIG LAND DEAL.

Syndicate After a Hundred Thousand Acres Near Duluth.

DULUTH, Oct. 19.—A deal for 100,000 St. Louis county acres, adapted in large part to agriculture, is in progress which involves from $275,000 to $300,000. The deal is one of the biggest for lands of this kind ever undertaken in this part of the state. The property is situated north of the St. Louis river and east of Flood Wood. The lands were a part of the old St. Paul and Duluth grant. A syndicate of Duluth and Southern Minnesota men is the prospective purchaser. They are satisfied there will be a big demand for farms in the locality described within a year.

Will Meet at Minneapolis.

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 18.—Minneapolis has been selected as the next meeting place for the national convention of the Christian church to be held in 1901. The reading and discussion of reports and addresses touching missionary topics occupied the morning session of the convention.

Lafollette at St. Paul.

ST. PAUL, Oct. 22.—R. N. Lafollette, Republican candidate for governor of Wisconsin, addressed a large audience at the Auditorium on the political issues of the day. The meeting was preceded by a parade in which a number of rough rider clubs participated.

He left no stone unturned: but what could he do? He went ta Dene Hall, and sifted all the evidence aver and aver again. It was of no use; nothing seemed to be of the least avail. He spent whole days in trying to obtain a [illegible] with her, but [illegible] could not obtain it.

There were times when his misery almost maddened him, when he blamed himself wildly for his folly, when he cried out that his own weakness had cut short two fair lives, when he would have given his heart's blood to have undone what he had done.

One morning, two days before the day for the execution, there came to him a note, written in a quaint, trembling hand, headed from Mary Street, Leicester Square, and signed "Andrea Fieschi"—a note from a dying man, who begged of him to go without loss of time and see him on a matter of life and death.

Alan was there before three hours had passed, and, on inquiring, was told that the Italian gentleman who was occupying the drawing rooms, was supposed to be dying; he had met with an accident some months before, the landlady said, and had never been well afterward.

"Go to him," cried Alan, eagerly, "and tell him that the gentleman to whom he wrote—Alan Branston, of Elmsthorpe Grange—is waiting to see him.

In a few minutes he stood by the bedside of the dying man—a handsome man, and evidently a patrician—who looked into his face with dim, wistful eyes.

"You are Alan Branston?" he interrogated; and the answer was a quick, almost impatient, "Yes."

"You loved and wished to marry Hyacinth Vane, now in prison for the—the murder of Gertrude Fraser?"

"Yes," said Alan; and the dim eyes looked more keenly at him.

"You have suffered," remarked the stranger. "I see lines on your face, white threads in your hair. I have seen signs of anguish and woe that have known no rest and no cessation. I should not tell you my secret now, but that I know I am going to die, and the telling of it cannot hurt me, while it may save her. Send for a magistrate and what other witnesses you desire; I will tell you my story once, and all may hear it."

* * * * * * *

Alan Branston, Mr. Barton, one of the keenest London magistrates, and Alton Chevril, one of the barristers who had done his best in defending Hyacinth, were all assembled in the dying man's room. He looked at them with steady eyes and a calm face; he hesitated one-half minute, while Alan's heart beat so strongly with excitement and suspense that it seemed to him every one must hear it.

"I am perhaps quixotic in what I am doing," said Count Fieschi; "but my doctors say that I shall die before forty-eight hours are over my head, and I may as well save that young girl's life, if I can. I have done many bad actions, and a few good ones. I have cheated the law and the scaffold. I may tell you that I murdered Lady Fraser—let me add also that, if ever a woman on earth justly deserved her fate, she did; that, if the time and the opportunity came again, I would repeat the deed. No weak, sickly thought af repentance has urged me to confess all this. I am dying, and that young girl may live."

Mr. Barton caught Alan Branston, as his tall, strong figure swayed to and fro; tha wonderful strength that had upheld him so long gave way now that there was a glimmer of hope. Count Fieschi smiled a slow, satirical smile.

"Give him some brandy," he said. "I know what it is. I once loved a woman like that, and she deceived me. Let him listen to me; tell him time is short."

"Time is short," whispered Mr. Barton in Alan's ear; "every moment is worth gold, and we have so much to do."

The words were magical in their effect; Alan stood up again, and again the count smiled.

"I understand it," he said. "I loved a woman just as much as that once. Who teaches women? Not heaven, I am sure—there is no art so cruel but that they understand it; there is nothing they cannot do. The woman I loved and slew knew all that the world af coquetry and cruelty holds. She was one of those cursed with a beautiful face, who used the beauty heaven had given her to work misery and destruction among her fellow creatures.

"Let me tell my own tale—what she did to me. I tried her in my own mind, condemned her—took the law into my own hands and slew her. Let me tell you what she did. Three years ago I was good in heart and soul, devoted to my country. I had great hopes, fiery ambition; I longed to imitate the great men of my native land, and devote my life to her service. Bella Italia—I had no other love.

"I met the siren who has wrecked my life, admired her, and for a time resisted her. I said to myself, 'Na love but that of Italy.' I steeled my heart against the warm glances of her eyes, against the lovely smiles of her red lips, against the touch of her white hands; and, when she saw that a few sweet smiles and looks would not move me, she set to work to ruin me.

"She did not love—nor in the least; but she had a thirst for conquests. Men's hearts were playthings ta her; she loved to torture them. She saw that I had resolved ta steel my heart against her, and she resolved to win me. She never gave me any rest until she had made me love her.

"Do you know how we Italians love? We love with a fire such as you cold Englishmen never know. She lighted this fire in my heart solely to gratify her own vain love of conquest. She made me love her; and I loved her as madly as any man ever loved woman. I laid my heart and soul at her feet; and then she was content. I lived in a fool's paradise for a few days; then I asked her to be my wife. She laughed at me; and my hot blood boiled with rage. I said to her:

"You have aroused tho love in my heart; you must be my wife.

"Sha laughed again, and the fire burned mora fiercely in my blood. I swore that she should be mine. She was frightened, and tried to temporize by a few soft words and looks. The day came when she spoke of returning ta England, still laughing at the notion of being my wife. We had angry words, and I swore that if she did not keep the promise she had made me, I would follow her to the end of the world and kill her.

"Patriotism, country, honor, fidelity, all became less than nothing to me. I bore my pain until I could bear it no longer, and then I followed her to England. I read in a provincial newspaper that she was at Dene Hall. I knew her well. If I had asked after her in the broad daylight she would have evaded me; so I went to her window by night. I gave her a fair chance for her life. I asked her to marry me, and she refused. We talked for an hour. She was beautiful—I could not kill her; I let her go back into the house again. Then I brooded over my wrongs—brooded until I grew mad.

"'She must die!' Under the stars I swore that she should. I climbed to her window and entered the room. She lay fast asleep, her hands wrapped in a small blue-and-white shawl. Ah, heaven, shall I ever forget the sight—the lovely face so placid and still, tha ed lips parted in sleep?

"I had no mercy—I stabbed her to the heart. She died instantaneously. She never moved or stirred beyond clinching her hands; and I went as I had come—but I had had my revenge. Open that locked box; here is the key. You will find in it the dagger that I used. It is an old heirloom of the Fieschi family. You will say that heaven was quick to punish me. As I climbed the outer wall of the park my arm caught on a great rusty nail, and my flesh was torn even to the bone. I took little notice of the wound; but my neglect has ended fatally. It is a just punishment, you will say—perhaps it is.

"Now you have little time to lose. Hasten to the home secretary. The girl is quite innocent—he will respite her. Do not trouble about me; I shall soon be dead."

Save that the police were directed to watch, Mr. Barton, Mr. Chevril and Alan did just as he had advised; they went all three together, and the home secretary did all in his power to help them.

When the reprieve was safe in his hands, Alan had even then a hard struggle before him. There was no telegraph wires to Ulverston; he had to engage a special train—and that was delayed by an accident. He was only just in time to save Hyacinth's life.

When she awoke from her long swoon, it was to find his arms round her and his kisses warm on her face.

"Oh, my love," she cried, "the agony of the past weary night!" He looked at her.

"Think no more of it," he said, "this is the golden dawn."

* * * * * * *

Count Fieschi died that night; and before another day had passed his confession was spread all over England. People read it with wondering eyes. How foolish they had been to think Hyacinth Vane guilty!

* * * * * * *

Hyacinth stood by the green grave where Francis Vane slept with his wife. The girl's heart still throbbing and beating with the atonement that had been made to her. She and Alan were married; and he had brought her to the spot she loved best.

"It seems to me, Alan," she said, "that the whole country has in some measure tried to atone to me—I have had any number of letters of sympathy; but nothing can give him back to me—the dear father whom that awful shock killed."

"We need not wish him back, my darling," returned Alan; "he lives in the light of the golden dawn."

Again she laid her fair head against tha marble cross.

"It seems so strange, Alan," she said, "to begin life again; I had thought it all ended."

"It will be a life that shall be as heaven's blessing and human love can make it," he told her; "and it begins for us, my darling, in a golden dawn."

(The End.)

Curious Will of an English Sport.

In drawing up a will, it is always best to call in the aid of a solicitor. Otherwise your executors may have a lot of trouble, and the bulk of your property be swallowed up in law costs. These consequences are likely to follow in the case of the will of Morris Roberts, the Birmingham prize fighter. It is a very curious document. One annuity is left to a female relation on condition that she is not convicted of theft, drunkenness or immorality. On [illegible] in the man who the annuity ceases. To a male relation a legacy is left on condition that he part from the woman with whom he is now living. The bulk of the property is ordered to remain in the Bank of England for twenty years, at the expiration of which time it is to be equally divided among the sorrowing relations.—London Figaro.

How a Sword Fish Can Fight.

Capt. Amery, of the schooner Origin, which has arrived at Plymouth from Labrador with fish, reported that while on the outward voyage from England tha vessel was attacked by a swordfish, whose sword penetrated the hull and broke off as the fish attempted to withdraw it. The fish then turned several somersaults and disappeared, as if either stunned or killed by the force of the shock. The sword left in the side of the ship measured eighteen inches. Before Newfoundland was reached the vessel made over a foot of water, and the crew are of the opinion that if the fish had succeeded in withdrawing its sword the vessel would have foundered.—London Daily News.

To Beat the Ferris Wheel.

Edward M. Creene of San Francisco has been in Chicago viewing the wonders of the fair, and has gone back home with the intention of producing a novelty which shall eclipse the Ferris wheel. He proposes to erect for the midwinter fair in San Francisco a colossal statue of justice, 150 feet high, supporting an immense pair of scales, the extremities of which will be cars holding 50 people each. The beam will be a truss 300 feet long, oscillating like a walking beam, and lifting the cars to a height of 350 feet.

Not Uncommon.

"Bredren," said Parson Black, earnestly, "dere am some folks in which da still, small voice oh conscience keeps a-gettin' stiller and smaller, until at las' 'd hab ter l'arn de deef an' dumb langwidge if it wants ter attrack dir attention."—Puck.

FOUR FIREMEN DEAD

FATAL ACCIDENT AT THE MINNESOTA TRANSFER.

Assistant Chief Irvine of the St. Paul Fire Department and Three of His Men Victims of Falling Walls—Anderson Tax Law Cases Before the Supreme Court—Duluth Lumbermen Convicted of Arson—State News in General.

ST PAUL, Oct. 22.—Fire at the Minnesota Transfer, supposed to be of incendiary origin, caused the death of four firemen and the serious injury of three others, besides doing about $445,000 worth of damage. Shortly after midnight fire was discovered in the packing plant of A D Hoiman. A second alarm was sent in in a few minutes and shortly after a special call was made for engines. The packing plant in which the blaze originated covers several acres with buildings and sheds of the most inflammable character, and in a short time the buildings were burned to the ground.

The fire spread to the buildings of the Northwestern Land company and the McCormick Harvester company. The former was stored with farm implements and is a total loss. The large brick warehouse of the harvester company was packed full of machinery and is a total loss.

Were Unable to Escape.

While the firemen were fighting to save the harvester company property and Assistant Chief Irvine and his companions were making their way up the building the walls collapsed. The unfortunate firemen were unable to make their escape and were buried by the mass of falling debris.

The dead are Second Assistant Chief Irvine, Lieutenant Frank M. Eddy, Louis Wagner and Burt Irish.

The injured are Thomas Clarkin, William Field and Andrew Johnson.

The fire spread, after the wall of the warehouse fell, to a row of tenements near the building, and it was with difficulty that they were saved. Twenty-two box cars belonging to the Great Northern railway company were on a side track and caught fire. A switch engine started to haul the cars away, but the flames had made too much headway, and the cars were destroyed. Eight cars, the ownership of which is unknown, were also burned.

ANDERSON TAX LAW.

Minnesota Case Before the United States Supreme Court.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—The Anderson tax law cases, appealed from the Minnesota supreme court, occupied the entire day in the United States supreme court and the argument was not concluded. With the consent of the court the cases of the Duluth and Iron Range road against St. Louis county were consolidated with the original case. The question involved in the cases is the constitutionality of the Anderson tax law, which imposes a tax of 3 per cent of the gross earnings of all the railways in Minnesota.

It was argued last winter before eight judges and when they considered the case at one of their consultations there was an even division, four judges voting to affirm and four to reverse the decision of the Minnesota supreme court, which sustained the law. Judge Brown, who did not sit in the case last term, is present now and paid close attention to the arguments, especially those relating to the constitutional question at issue.

LUMBERMEN CONVICTED.

Found Guilty of Setting Fires in Timber on Indian Reservation.

DULUTH, Oct. 21.—C. E. Selye and Harry Shearer were found guilty in the United States court here of starting fires among the timber on the Chippewa Indian reservation in Itasca county. It was alleged that the defendants set the fires in order to damage the timber on the reservation, which, under the dead and down timber act, the Indians are permitted to sell. The principal witnesses for the prosecution were Chippewa Indians. Both Selye and Shearer are well known in this section, the former having for several years past been a prominent lumberman. This is the first case of its kind that has ever been tried in this district and has created considerable interest among lumbermen. The penalty is three years' imprisonment or a fine of $5,000.

BIG LAND DEAL.

Syndicate After a Hundred Thousand Acres Near Duluth.

DULUTH, Oct. 19.—A deal for 100,000 St. Louis county acres, adapted in large part to agriculture, is in progress which involves from $275,000 to $300,000. The deal is one of the biggest for lands of this kind ever undertaken in this part of the state. The property is situated north of the St. Louis river and east of Flood Wood. The lands were a part of the old St. Paul and Duluth grant. A syndicate of Duluth and Southern Minnesota men is the prospective purchaser. They are satisfied there will be a big demand for farms in the locality described within a year.

Will Meet at Minneapolis.

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 18.—Minneapolis has been selected as the next meeting place for the national convention of the Christian church to be held in 1901. The reading and discussion of reports and addresses touching missionary topics occupied the morning session of the convention.

Lafollette at St. Paul.

ST. PAUL, Oct. 22.—R. N. Lafollette, Republican candidate for governor of Wisconsin, addressed a large audience at the Auditorium on the political issues of the day. The meeting was preceded by a parade in which a number of rough rider clubs participated.

Samuel Gibeau, register of deeds, and candidate for re election, was born April 3, 1868, at Chebanse, a village sixty miles from Chicago. His parents moved to Chicago soon thereafter, where he lived until he attained the age of eight years, when they removed with their family to St. Boniface, opposite Winnipeg, Manitoba. There he entered St. Boniface college and remained in that institution until he attained the age of 11, when the family removed to St. John Baptiste, Manitoba, temporarily, in 1882 coming to Lambert, where they have since resided. In 1889 the subject of this sketch was elected town clerk of Lambert township, which position he occupied for 9 years. In 1890 he established a general merchandise store and was appointed postmaster of Lambert, Minn., where he built up an extensive business. Mr. Gibeau possesses qualities which endear him to his friends, and at an early age he became a factor in local pulitics. In January, 1897, he was called to preside as chairman of the board of county commissioners of the newly organized county of Red Lake. In this capacity his acquaintance and influence was broadened, and two years ago he was elected to the office of register of deeds. He has made a very efficient officer, and his re-nomination was a credit to his party, as his re-election will be a credit to the people of Red Lake county.

O. T. Tandberg, Populist nominee for county treasurer, should be given a good support not only all over the county, but especially here at home. Mr. Tandberg is from Rocksbury township, and is a creditable representative of that thrifty northern portion of Red Lake conuty. That part of the county should be represented, and Mr. Tandberg is the man that the people up there want. Red Lake Falls and vicinity should show its spirit of fairness in county matters by according Mr. Tandberg a hearty support. He is a man who is impartial, fair and honest, taking no arbitrary or unjust stand in any public matter, looking to do the fair thing by all. He should be re-elected.

M. J. Daly, who is a candidate for congress against Frank M. Eddy over in the seventh district, is meeting some adverse currents that he wot not of. When he was county attorney in Otter Tail county, under his advice the Sheriff took fees to the amount of $5,000 that did not belong to him. The county attorney that succeeded Daly compelled the Sheriff to return the amount. Daly is also called upon to explain why he failed to sue the water company and a Detroit Banker who refused to pay taxes to the amout of $2,000, but he is dumb like a sheep before the shearer. The people will not be likely to approve of such a man for their representative in congress.—Todd County Argus.

S. A. Swanson, Populist nominee for representative from this district, is an example of what a young man may make of himself if he starts out with the proper ideals, and backs them with energy and thrift. He will undoubtedly be elected. But whether elected or not, he is bound to make his mark and will be heard from in the future. A vote for Swanson is more than an expression of political preferment. It is giving your moral support and encouragement to right thinking young men.

Talking about loyalty, when does the Courier intend to show its loyalty to the county nominees, before or after election? As to "how much", one of the Courier editors will remember he tried to find out, two years ago.

FRANK. M. EDDY,
Author of the Free Homes Bill.

Here is the law which was passed by the efforts of hardworking Frank M. Eddy, the man of the people, who represents the Seventh district in congress. It is the law which has put two hundred dollars into the pocket of every homesteader on the ceded reservations. What he has done for the homesteader he is willing to do for all other classes of citizens—giving them his best efforts. He is a man of deeds, not promises. Vote for him.

Be it enacted by the senate and the House of Representatives of the United States of America in congress assembled, that all settlers, under the homestead laws of the United States upon the agricultural public lands, which have already been opened to settlement, acquired prior to the passage of this act by treaty or agreement from the various Indian tribes, who have resided or shall hereafter reside upon the tract entered for good faith for the period required by existing law, shall be entitled to a patent for the land so entered upon payment to the local land officers of the usual and customary fees, and no other or further charge of any kind whatsoever shall be required from such settlers to entitle him to a patent for the land covered by his entry; provided, that the right to commute any such entry and pay for said lands in the option of any such settlers, and in the time and at prices now fixed by existing laws shall remain in full force and effect. however, that all sums of money so released which, if not released, would belong to any Indian tribe shall be paid to such Indian tribe by the United States, and that in the event that the proceeds of the annual sales of the public lands shall not be sufficient to meet the payments heretofore provided for agricultural colleges and experimental stations by an act of congress, approved August 30, 1890, for the more complete endowment and support of the colleges for the benefit of agriculture and mechanic arts, established under the provisions of an act of congress, approved July 2, 1862, such deficiency shall be paid by the United States; and, provided further, that no lands shall be herein included on which the United States government had made valuable improvements, or lands that have been sold at public auction by said government.

Section 2. That all acts or parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed.

KEPT HIS PROMISE.

Two years ago Congressman Eddy promised to use his efforts to secure an appropriation for the improvement of the Red Lake river. Eddy is a hard worker, and went after this appropriation, and got it. The following letter explains why it was not used:

Wilmar, Minn., October 16, 1900.
Hon. Marcus Johnson.

Dear Sir:—I understand, that Major Abbott has not made use of the appropriation secured by Mr. Eddy for the improvement of Red Lake River. I am surprised at this action and unable to account for it. I understand that Major Abbott has been or soon will be transferred to another station. As soon as his successor has been settled in the work in this district, I will see him in company with Mr. Eddy and we will both of us urge him to the best of our ability to proceed with the work contemplated in and provided for by said appropriation. Yours,

Knute Nelson.

L. C. Simons, who last week announced his intention of making the fight for county attorney, says he is in it to stay, and that he is meeting with encouragement from all parts of the county. It would appear to The Gazette that the fight is now between Simons and Lee, whereas before his candidacy was announced the concensus of opinion was that Grady would have won out.

OLD WHEAT FLOUR.

Yes, we have it. We are still milling old wheat. We had a very large stock in store at our different elevators, and we bought out all that we could find in other elevators, so that we will have old wheat enough to mill on for the next 20 days. So many have asked us within the last three or four weeks if they could get old wheat flour by coming to the mill, and a good many have laid in their year's supply of flour, fearing that the new wheat flour would not be as good as the old. The new wheat flour will be all right in 30 or 60 days, when it is thoroughly cured in the stack. We have not tried milling any of the local wheat yet. Now be sure when you are buying or Exchanging, if you want old wheat flour, to call for "Mascot" or "Favorite" made by the Red Lake Falls Milling Co. Even though your wheat is a little damp or tough we will give you as good a flour for it, although we cannot give you quite as much flour for it as if you had No. 1 Hard. We carry a stock of this old wheat flour at all our elevators. Remember this fact; That we are the only mill to-day in the Northwest that is grinding a strictly all old wheat flour. All the little mills in the country have run out of old wheat long ago, and are offering a premium of 5 cents per bushel for wheat that is suitable to mill.

We have not advanced the price of flour or the rate of Exchange.

Evangelistic Services at the Presbyterian Church.

The members and friends of the First Presbyterian church, of this city, have had the opportunity of enjoying a religious and literary treat for the past week.

As already announced in the Gazette, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey came to our city and commenced their two weeks' mission on Wednesday of last week. Those who have heard Mrs. Harvy in her addresses can not but feel that she is an artist in her profession. Being a student of the famous Moody school, she with her husband have been spending the past year in the work of helping pastors, and doing mission work in the new fields of our rapidly growing state. Last Sabbath evening was one of the best in the history of their work. The audience which filled the church nearly to its utmost capacity, hung on the words of truth as they came from the speaker's lips. The meetings will be continued this week except on Saturday night.

Next Sabbath morning the pastor will address his people on "Fallow Plowing" and will be assisted in the morning and evening services by the Evangelists.

A special feature of the Sunday services will be the meeting, for men only, at 2:30 on Sunday afternoon. While special admission cards will be issued yet all who come will be able to receive cards at the door if they have not received them before. It is expected that this will be one of the best services of the series. The evening service will also be conducted by Mrs. Harvey.

Whether the meetings will continue another week will depend on the interest manifested.

Helmer Berg, a boy sixteen years of age, was brought down by his stepfather, E. Aus, from Norden township, to be examined as to his sanity. The examination of the physicians resulted in his discharge, as no evidences of insanity were adduced. The only charge brought is that he does not work well, and runs away in the evening, seeking the companionship of other young people.

A Thousand Tongues

Could not express the rapture of Annie E. Springer, of 1125 Howard st., Philadelphia, Pa., when she found that Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption had completely cured her of a hacking cough that for many years had made life a burden. All other remedies and doctors could give her no help, but she says of this Royal Cure: "It soon removed the pain in my chest and I can now sleep soundly, something I can scarcely remember doing before. I feel like sounding its praises throughout the Universe." So will every one who tries Dr. King's New Discovery for any trouble of the Throat, Chest or Lungs. Price 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottle free at W. A. Schreiter's, Drug Store; every bottle guaranteed.

Robbed the Grave.

A startling incident, of which Mr. John Oliver of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in my back and sides, no appetite, gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately a friend advised trying Electric Bitters; and to my great joy and surprise the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they saved my life and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50 cts., guaranteed, at W. A. Schreiter, Drug Store.

NEW ERA FOR AMERICA.

Archbishop Ireland Gives His Impressions of Our Showing in Paris.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—Archbishop Ireland of St. Paul, who has just returned from an extended trip abroad, has given out a statement of his impressions of the showing made by this country at the Paris exposition. The efforts of Americans, accentuated by the work of Mr. Peck, more than compensated, he said, for the appropriation made by congress. The exhibits in the American section put the country in a more worthy light than it has occupied heretofore.

"A new era," said the archbishop, "has set in for us in commercial and diplomatic relations and with the opening of the Twentieth century America steps into the front rank of nations."

REMOVE HEADQUARTERS.

Duluth, South Shore and Atlantic Prefers Duluth to Marquette.

DULUTH, Oct. 21.—In well informed railroad circles here it is said that the Duluth, South Shore and Atlantic railroad may remove its headquarters from Marquette, Mich., to Duluth. The road has been reported as dissatisfied with the treatment it has received in Marquette, and it is authoritatively given out that it has contemplated a change for some time. Duluth's growing through traffic and other considerations have long commended themselves in making Duluth the road's logical headquarters. Vice President Fitch was in the city and his visit is believed to be of special significance in this matter although nothing would be given out for publication.

SEVEN BOYS ESCAPED.

Inmates of the Red Wing (Minn) Reformatory Get Away.

RED WING, Minn., Oct. 18.—A wholesale delivery has occurred at the state reformatory here, seven boys making their escape. They are believed to be headed towards La Crosse and the police of that city have been asked to keep a lookout for them. The ringleader was a colored boy 17 years old, who planned and executed the escape.

Northwestern Flour Output.

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 18.—According to The Northwestern Miller the flour output at Minneapolis last week was 220,870 barrels, against 321,355 barrels for the corresponding week of 1899. Superior-Duluth last week ground 11,220 barrels against 10,000 barrels for the corresponding week of 1899. As a rule mills last week sold output, it again going practically all to domestic markets. Foreigners were virtually out of the market.

To Manufacture Automobiles.

ST. PAUL, Oct. 23.—Articles of incorporation have been filed with the secretary of state by the Blood-Mills Vehicle Motor company of Minneapolis, with capital of $500,000. The officers are: President, J. D. Anderson; vice president, H. D. Benton; secretary and treasurer, Bernard Tochman. The entire business of the firm will be the manufacture of automobiles.

Attempted Murder and Suicide.

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 20.—Peter Armor of Sandstone, Minn., cut his wife's throat about noon in a lodging house in this city and then hacked away at his own neck in a futile effort to strike the jugular vein. The woman will live, but Armor will probably die. Both are at the Minneapolis city hospital.

Mistaken for a Thief.

DULUTH, Oct. 19.—While in pursuit of two thieves Detective Charles Mork was mistaken for one of them and shot by Charles Harvey, a watchman. The bullet entered his stomach, and though it is in a dangerous place he is resting well and will probably recover.

DUEL WITH BURGLARS.

Citizens of Wisconsin Town Fight on the Streets.

KENOSHA, Wis., Oct. 22.—A pitched battle was fought between burglars and citizens on the streets of the town of Salem, in this county. The burglars were discovered breaking into a store and the farmers armed themselves and started to exterminate the housebreakers. The men escaped after the people of the town had fired 20 shots at them. The fire was returned by the escaping robbers, and many windows in buildings on the main street of the town were broken, but none of the citizens were hurt. One of the robbers was wounded but he was not captured.

BLAZE AT OSHKOSH.

Fire in the Wisconsin Town Causes a Loss of $300,000.

OSHKOSH, Wis., Oct. 17.—Fire broke out in the saw mill district during the day and in three hours it destroyed nearly $300,000 worth of property, mostly lumber stock. The fire spread over an area of nine acres, the district burned being between Black Hawk, Osceola, Pearl streets and the river. The Diamond Match company is the heaviest loser, its loss being placed at $175,000. The company had between 5,000,000 and 6,000,000 feet of match splint lumber, valued at from $25 to $35 per 1,000. This was nearly all destroyed.

GREAT PULP MILL.

Wisconsin Capital Interested in a Plant in the Rainy River Region.

APPLETON, Wis., Oct. 20.—A project, backed by Wisconsin capital, is on foot for the establishment at the great undeveloped water power in the Rainy lake region of Western Canada of the largest pulp mill in the world. Spruce wood and water power are practically inexhaustible in the region mentioned, and with the coming of the Ontario and Rainy Lake railway into that section, as anticipated, pulp cheaper and more steadily than anywhere else in the world is unquestioned.

WOMAN'S WORLD.

AN AMERICAN WOMAN WHO INFLUENCES GERMANY'S EMPEROR.

What Two Women Saw—Social Functions For Women—The Ruling Passion—Needs No Chaperon—Does Coeducation Educate?

In his telegram to President McKinley the German kaiser said that the Countess Waldersee, wife of the field marshal who has gone to China to command the allied forces, is an American woman.

As a little girl Mary Esther Lea played among the flour barrels and currant boxes of her father's grocery store on Front street, New York. But that was many years ago. Now the little girl is a white haired and regal lady, with the title of princess. More than that she it is who is the power behind the German throne, who is known as the "female Bismarck," and who, it is believed, brought about the kaiser's marriage. Her title is Princess von Noer, and she is a powerful influence in the great palace at Berlin.

Her history is most interesting and unusual. Her father left Connecticut in 1810 and began a small grocery business in New York. Though he was financially successful, when he died in 1853 he left but a very small fortune to his family. Mrs. Lea, unable to afford the expensive living in New York, bundled up her little family and went to Stuttgart. Here the eldest daughter married Baron von Waechter. He soon became embassador from Wurtemberg to Paris, and in due course of time Mrs. Lea and her other daughters found themselves in the social set of the great French capitol. Other important marriages came about. Mary Esther, the youngest girl, found a fast and affectionate friend in Princess Louise of Sleswick-Holstein. Through her she formed the acquaintance of the father of the princess, an old widower, who immediately fell desperately in love with the beautiful and bright little American girl. To compensate for marrying the daughter of a grocer the prince gave up his title and accepted the simpler designation of Count von Noer, which was given to him by the Austrian emperor. The groom was 64 years old, the bride 24. Six months later the venerable husband died, and his rich and youthful widow settled down in Vienna. There she won the esteem of the Austrian emperor, and he created her princess of Noer in her own right.

A few years after being made a princess the one time daughter of a grocer met Count von Waldersee. A marriage between them took place in [illegible]. These two brilliant and rare people went to Berlin, and in a few months the countess was a social power.

Her particular ambition was to marry her grandniece by her first marriage, Princess Augusta Victoria of Sleswick-Holstein, to Prince William of Prussia, the present emperor of Germany. The mother of the prince raised great objections, but the Princess von Noer was persistent and tactful and planning, and the wedding was celebrated. Prince William and his bride were both devoted to the one who helped along the rough way of their courtship, and their gratitude has been unceasing. When Princess Augusta Victoria became empress, she was more than ever under the sway of her American aunt.—Boston Herald.

Mumps.

Onct I took the mumps, and, my,
Didn't I look funny! I
Made the people laugh and roar
When they peeked in through the door.
But ma didn't laugh, and she
Was jes' awful nice to me,
Even though I had the "grumps,"
For that always goes with mumps.

And I couldn't swaller good;
So she fed me all she could
With a spoon on soupy stuff.
Jiminy! I got enough
Of that sort of thing, you bet!
Soup's too watery and wet.
And pa had to do the chores,
'Cause I dassent go outdoors.

I was down in bed three days,
Sick in lots and lots of ways,
And they promised me some figs
And new boots and guinea pigs
And some more that I forget,
But I haven't got 'em yet!
And I foun'—jes' think of it—
Two whole loads of wood to split!

NEWS IN MINNESOTA

The supreme court holds that the Duluth charter is valid.

S. G. Whiting, one of the earliest settlers of Rochester, is dead, aged 82.

Matthew M. Gregson, an old and highly respected citizen of Austin, is dead.

The reports received from Northern Minnesota indicate that big game is unusually plentiful.

The attorney general holds that foreign corporations that do not comply with the Somerville law cannot bid at state timber sales.

August Frederick, the 3-year-old child of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Veldt of Anoka, was drowned by falling into a well containing 15 feet of water.

Otter Tail county's oldest inhabitant died recently at Leaf Lake. His name was Abraham Putas and he had lived to the age of 100 years and 6 months.

Arthur Furtney, a young man from Lansing, who was hunting at Geneva Lake, and was accidentally shot in the bowels, died Thursday. He was 21 years of age and the fatal shot was from his own gun.

The Winona button factory, which has been closed for some time, will soon reopen and will be run for several months. Some Winona capital is now interested and it is intended to make this a big industry.

Articles of incorporation have been filed with the secretary of state by the Blood-Mills Vehicle Motor company of Minneapolis, with a capital of $500,000. The entire business of the firm will be the manufacture of automobiles.

A deal for 100,000 St. Louis county acres, adapted in large part to agriculture, is in progress which involves from $275,000 to $300,000. The deal is one of the biggest for lands of this kind ever undertaken in this part of the state.

A freight wreck occurred at Ortonville Saturday, exactly where the wreck of two weeks ago took place. The second section of the regular freight going east jumped the track and piled up 30 cars, mostly loaded with grain.

Peter Armor of Sandstone, cut his wife's throat in a Minneapolis lodging house and then hacked away at his own neck in a futile effort to strike the jugular vein. The woman will live, but Armor will probably die. Both are at the Minneapolis city hospital.

With one exception, all of the Minneapolis flour mills which were closed a week ago are in full operation. The demand for domestic consumption and for export is on the mend and the mills of that city will undoubtedly grind at their full capacity for some time to come.

Surveyors are at work north of Alden surveying a railroad line from New Ulm, Mankato, through Freeborn to Albert Lea. They are working under the name of another road, but it is supposed to be the extension of the Illinois Central, which has made its way into Albert Lea.

The state department of public instruction is preparing to introduce into the rural schools of the state a course in practical farming. Such subjects will be included as are best calculated to make the pupils expert farmers an will make farm life attractive to the children of the rural districts.

One of the two concrete piers of the new government canal work at Duluth, a solid monolith of substance harder and more enduring than stone, 1,700 feet long, is complete. It is one of the most prominent engineering works that have been undertaken in the United States of recent years, and is attracting attention everywhere.

C. E. Seelye and Harry Shearer were found guilty in the United States court at Duluth of starting fires among the timber on the Chippewa Indian reservation in Itasca county. It was alleged that the defendants set the fires in order to damage the timber on the reservation, which, under the dead and down timber act, the Indians are permitted to sell. Both Seelye and Shearer are well known in this section, the former having for several years past been a prominent lumberman.

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE ON FILING PETITION TO SELL LAND.

State of Minnesota } ss
County of Red Lake }

In Probate Court
Special Term
Oct. 11th, 1900.

In the matter of the estate of Ovila Gervais, deceased. On reading and filing the petition of Adele Gervais, executrix of said estate setting forth the amount of personal estate that has come into her hands, the disposition thereof, and how much remains undisposed of; the amount of debts outstanding against said deceased, as far as the same can be ascertained; the legacies unpaid, and a description of all the real estate (excepting the homestead), of which said deceased died seized, and the condition and value of the respective portions or lots thereof; the persons interested in said estate with their residences, and praying that license be to her granted to sell so much of said real estate as is necessary.

And it appearing by said petition, that there is not sufficient personal estate in the hands of said Executrix to pay said debts, legacies and expenses of administration, and that it is necessary, for the payment of said debts, legacies or expenses, to sell so much of said real estate as is necessary to pay said debts.

It is therefore ordered that all persons interested in said estate appear before this court on Monday the 13th day of Nov. A. D. 1900, at ten o'clock a. m., at the court house in Red Lake Falls, in said county, then and there to show cause, (if any there be) why license should not be granted to said Adele Gervais to sell so much real estate of said deceased as shall be necessary to pay such debts, legacies and expenses.

And it is further ordered that this order shall be published once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the Gazette, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Red Lake Falls in said county.

Dated at Red Lake Falls, Minn., the 11th day of Oct., A. D. 1900.

By the Court,

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of Seven Hundred Thirty Five and 74-100 dollars, which is claimed to be due and which is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage duly executed and delivered by Patrick Soards and Mary A. Soards, his wife, mortgagors to Sarah Hillgrove, mortgagee, bearing date the 27th day of February, A. D. 1894, and with power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the register of deeds in and for the county of Red Lake, state of Minnesota, on the 28th day of February, A. D. 1899, at 10 o'clock a. m. of said day, in book 20 of mortgages on page 123, and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof:

Now therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz:

The Northeast quarter of section twenty-nine (29) in township one hundred and fifty two (152) north of range forty-four west, containing one hundred and sixty acres more or less, according to United States government survey thereof, in Red Lake County, and State of Minnesota with the hereditaments and appurtenances: which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Red Lake county, at the front door of the court house, in the city of Red Lake Falls, in said county and state on the 29th day of October, A. D. 1900, at 2 o'clock p. m. of said day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt and interest and twenty-five dollars attorney's fees as stipulated in said mortgage in case of Foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law: subject to redemption at any time within one year from the date of sale as provided by law.

Dated Sept. 11th A. D. 1900.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of sixteen hundred fifty one and 53-100 dollars, which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by Pascal Toupin, and Lena Toupin, his wife, mortgagors, to James W. Massey, mortgagee, bearing date the ninth day of June, 1883, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the register of deeds in and for the county of Polk and State of Minnesota, on the 13th day of June, 1883, at two o'clock p. m., in book "O" of Mortgages, on pages 7 to 9.

That at the time of the giving of said mortgage, the premises therein described and thereby conveyed, were situated in Polk county, Minnesota, but that thereafter the lands therein described, together with other lands, were set off and organized into Red Lake county, Minnesota: and that the record of said mortgage was transcribed to page 1 of Book 16 of Mortgages, in the Registry of deeds of said Red Lake County, Minnesota.

Included in the amount above declared to be due upon said mortgage, is $400.53, being for taxes upon said lands paid by the mortgagee, and interest on the amounts paid for such taxes.

And no action or proceeding having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof,

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz:

The West half of the southeast quarter and the west half of the north east quarter of section twenty-seven, in township one hundred and fifty, of range forty-three, in Red Lake county, and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances: which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Red Lake county, at the front door of the court house, in the city of Red Lake Falls, in said county and state, on the tenth day of November, 1900, at two o'clock p. m. of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and twenty-five dollars attorney's fees, as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Dated September 1, A. D., 1900.

COUNTY NEWS NOTES.

BY OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENTS.

Wylie.

Charles J. Larson is teaching school in District 180.

A turkey raffle was held at Andrew Letvig's Saturday night.

J. P. Larson got one of his fingers cut off, on Chas. Eklund's blower.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Johnson entertained a large number of friends last Sunday.

Movers with many head of cattle are seen coming from the West and going to the reservation.

M. O. Sortedahl, of Red Lake Falls, was here the other day showing some land seekers around.

Miss Alfrida Swenson, of Minneapolis, who teaches school in Red Lake Falls, is visiting at J. P. Larson's.

S. A. Swanson, F. A. Grady, Frank Jeffers and I. L. Johnson were around on a political errand the first of last week.

It seems to be the wish of the people around here that Frank Jeffers be re-elected Superintendent of schools.

A. M. Hanson, who has been laying up with his machine for sometime, waiting for better moving, begun threshing last Friday.

The residence of Chas. Zutz burned down last Friday. It is said to be covered by an insurance of about $900 in Bray Mutual Insurance Co.

There was a populist rally here last Wednesday evening. Speeches were made by Frank Jeffers, S. A. Swanson and F. A. Grady, some others made a few remarks.

Feelings of safety pervade the household that uses One Minute Cough Cure, the only remedy that produces immediate results. It is infallible for coughs; colds, croup and other throat and lung troubles. It will prevent consumption. W. A. Schreitor.

During the nice weather before the recent rains much threshing was done. The previous rains had not much effect on some well put up stacks, but the moving part was always bad. A regiment of poles was kept active at each machine, which sometimes made it dangerous to be around. In the beginning these regiments were said to be all volunteers, but later the others were drafted.

Not for many years has Black river risen so high in the fall as this year. We have good reasons to believe that even the land for miles along it sides has been rising, not above its former height, but in value. Our belief we base on this, that last summer while our fields were getting brown in the drought, travelers came with the consolation that we were well off up here, that it looked better around here by far than in many other places. We all expected that the high sandy land would give nothing, but later we expected a better crop this year than last. Just before harvest men came around looking for work, and said this part had the best crop they had seen for more that 200 miles around. The rains in harvest made it bad for the farmers, but that was not the fault of the land itself.

"When in the course of human events it becomes necessary for a hard working and fatigued young man to deprive himself of required rest and sleep, is not when the Christmas bells sound their holiday music through the frosty air, not when the fire-bells stir the tranquil atmosphere with its hustling warning and command, not when the cow-bell in its irregular pitch makes its disturbance in the bosom of the night or morning; but, when a fair Belle has a chance to play the mischievous notes her vivid thoughts dicatate." Thus declared a young man, not one who feeds chickens, hogs or cattle, but a threshing machine, son of a farmer who feeds the rich, workers and the poor. As the awning was yet down over his eyes disclosing the approach of morning, the young man not aware of worldly troubles, himself a nephew of a leading necktie manufacturer of Chicago, and he himself has neckties by the wholesale, was subject to a game by that young lady, wittier than Whittier; in the admiration of each young man taller than Longfellow, and more mentioned than Dickens. Thus he awoke on a Saturday morning tied with a necktie to the bedstead as the wind whistled round that historical dwelling in the town of Bray.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Yahnke spent last week at Tabor, visiting their cousin.

Miss Emma Sutter has purchased a fine parlor organ from Montgomery, Ward & Co.

The potato crop is very poor this fall, farmers have hardly enough for themselves.

The boys from here all went to Wylie last Saturday evening and all got a big turkey from O. A. Letvig.

A big fire occurred last Saturday morning at Chas. Lutz, leaving nothing but the ashes. Insurance $900. Loss $1,500.

Big rain showers last Sunday morning.

Haying and plowing has kept our farmers very busy last week.

Peder Pederson, father of Andreas Pederson is seriously ill, he is not expected to live.

Mrs. Odelon Gouthiere and Mrs. H. Reendan took a trip to Terrebonne Monday of last week.

Children have been picking strawberries around here lately. Strawberry flowers are plentiful.

Anatole Bachand, Republican candidate for judge of probate, was around last Saturday distributing his cards.

Pit Pederson, of Grand Forks, is the guest of Miss Hanna Nilson and Paul Benjaminson. Interesting news may soon be expected from there.

River Falls.

The rain on Saturday night and Sunday makes the roads soft again. They were just beginning to be in a fair condition.

This is the season when mothers are alarmed on account of croup. It is quickly cured by One Minute Cough Cure, which children like to take. W. A. Schreiter.

Mike Johnson has moved his threshing rig over to the West side, and is now pounding out the No. 1 hard on the river farms south of St. Hilaire at a lively rate.

Our eastern neighbors, judging from the lively rate at which lumber goes by every day, are doing considerable building. Many of the people are new settlers and unknown to us.

The Wyandotte threshers, Johnson Evenson and Lundstrom, had a slight breakdown Thursday, when moving from L. R. Bramsnesa to Aug Swenson's and this necessitated shutting down until Monday.

The new threshing rig of Johnson, Evenson & Lundstrom that was started on Tuesday on the Bramsness farm did good work in every line. Messrs. Johnson & Evenson are two of the old threshers of this part of the Red River Valley.

John Sherdahl and Albert Seyre have been out on a three days' hunting trip and report game as very scarce.

The Ladies Society, of Lanstad's church, will hold an auction sale at R. Aaseboe's, on all the fine articles they have made up during the summer.

The board of supervisors held a meeting at the town clerk's office on the 16th inst., and registered seventy three voters for the coming election.

Ernest Swenson, having been on the sick list all summer, has sold out his personal property and rented out his farm, and it now going to the western coast in hopes of benefiting his health.

Nels Hoiberg, Republican candidate for register of deeds, was canvassing the town Saturday, shaking hands with old friends and making new ones. He is feeling pretty well pleased over the prospects of the campaign.

Charles Sampson, our honorable sheriff, and whom I think will succeed himself, made a short but pleasant call on Nels K. Anderson last Wednesday. He was out subpoening O. L. Larson, Rudolph Restuc and A. W. Lind as jurora for the fall term of court.

Frank Jeffers, F. A. Grady, Samuel Giheau and P. O. Hagglund, candidates for superintendent, attorney, register of deeds and surveyor respectively, have all been here ascertaining the feeling of the voters as to the next set of officers. I trust that they all went home with a satisfactory feeling as to their prospects of election.

News very scarce this weeek.

Victor Sandstrom, of Numedal, passed through here Friday, enroute for business at Wylie.

Several of our county nominees were around last week talking politics, looking over fields and shaking hands with the boys.

The threshing machines were in operation last week, but were laid up again by the heavy rain that fell Saturday night. It may stop the fall plowing.

Dr. W. H. Lewis, Lawrenceville, Va., writes, "I am using Kodal Dyspepsia in my practice among severe cases of indigestion and find it an admirable remedy. Many hundreds of physicians depend upon the use of Kodal Dyspepsia Cure in stomach troubles. It digests what you eat, and allows you to eat all the food you need, providing you do not overload your stomach. Gives instant relief and a permanent cure. W. A. Schreiter.

Lambert.

Antoine Boucher has finished a deal with the Security Trust Co. for a quarter section of land on Lost river.

Thos. Stolmo threshed eighteen bushels of wheat to the acre, and fifty bushels of oats. Good enough for this year.

A good many farms of Company land have been sold this summer and some of the purchasers are making preparations for winter quarters. Among these are the Keinast brothers, who are about to build two big barns for the accommodation of their stock.

The year nineteen hundred will be remembered for its very peculiar weather. First the drouth damaged the crop to a great extent, and next the rain, which has fallen so abundantly of late, has put the fields is such a condition that plowing is impossible, and it is very difficult to reach the grain to thresh it.

Brooks.

Joe. L. Cyr has gone to Red Lake Falls to serve on the jury.

The attendance at school in Poplar River is reported very small this fall on account of rain and bad roads.

Misses Ellen Sandine and Mary Lusser, in company with Frank Oben, drove to McIntosh Sunday. Being water proof birds, they did not get wet, though the rain was pouring down.

Do not get scared if your heart troubles you. Most likely you suffer from indigestion. Kodal Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat and gives the worn out stomach perfect rest. It is the only preparation known that completely digests all classes of food; that is why it cures the worst cases of indigestion and stomach troubles after everything else has failed. It may be taken in all conditions and cannot help but do good. W. A. Schreiter.

To Gervani Orsaline:

You are hereby notified that on the 9th day of May, A. D. 1891, in proceedings to enforce the payment of delinquent taxes pursuant to that certain real estate judgment, which was entered in the District Court in and for the County of Polk, in the Fourteenth Judicial District, in the State of Minnesota, on the 21st day of March, A. D. 1891, the following described piece or parcel of land now situated in Red Lake county, (formerly Polk county,) State of Minnesota to-wit:

W½ NW¼ and W½ SW¼, section 13, town 152, range 44,

was bid in to the State to satisfy the amount for which it was judged liable in said judgment, interests and costs, for the sum of thirty dollars and sixty cents; that the above described real estate has become and now is the Absolute Property of the State;

That on the 12th day of May, A. D., 1900, the above described realestate was sold by the undersigned county Auditor of Polk county, as directed by the State Auditor, in accordance with Section 101 of Chapter 11 of the general statutes of 1878, and the several acts amendatory thereto, for the sum of one hundred nine dollars and sixty five cents; that the amount required to redeem said piece or parcel of land from such sale (exclusive of the costs to accrue on this notice) is one hundred nine dollars and sixty five cents with interest at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum, from said 12th day of May, A. D., 1900, until such redemption is made, and that the time for redemption of said piece or parcel of land from such sale will expire sixty days after the service of this notice, and proof thereof has been filed in the office of the county auditor of said county of Polk.

Witness my hand and official seal this 20th day of September, A. D. 1900.

Tomorrow is the day set by the house of representatives for taking up the Free Homestead Bill for Indian reservation lands. If she passes, Eddy will stand a show of being re-elected, otherwise he is a dead duck for all time to come.

EDDY AND DALY IN RED LAKE CO.

Eddy Helps the Taxpayers, While Daly Turns to Them a Cold Shoulder.

Eddy's Re-election a Matter of Personal Concern to Every Taxpayer.

Hon. Frank M. Eddy, by his work in passing the Free Homes bill, has saved 3,400 settlers on the Red Lake reservation the magaificent sum of $680,000—more than was ever saved to tne people of this stute by any one piece of legislation. During his six years in congress, Frank M. Eddy has always stood with the common people, as against class interests, and is recognized as one of tha hardest working members of congress. If you, reader, have a son, or daughter, brother, or sister, or other relative or friend, who has taken a claim on the Red Lake reservation, you know Frank M. Eddy has saved this person $200. If you have ever written or appealed to Frank M. Eddy for his services, you know that there has been a quick response, and a ready effort to assist you. Is not this a grand thing for the people of the Seventh district to know that at Washington their interests are being looked after, and that it is not necessary to watch your servant? Stand up for this man of the peopla then, at the polls, next Tuesday.

Now comes State Senator Daly, looking for a chance to secure Eddy's seat in congress. What has he to offer? Nothing but promises, promises, and a record that ought to cost him the vote of every taxpayer in Red Lake county who has the interests of his county and home at heart above mere partisanship. The Gazette has been a partisan paper. It has supported tha Populist nominaes year after year. It is supporting Populist nominees today, but we have to come to a halt on congressman. And why? Becausa wa helleva it is the plain duty of a citizen of Red Lake county, and as an editor of a newspaper in Red Lake county to stand up for tha interests of this county, and we say, it is to the intarests of this county to re-elect Frank M. Eddy, and to defeat M. J. Daly. In 1899, as a member of the state senate from Ottertail county, M. J. Daly assisted in defeating, with his vote, with his oratory, and with all the influence at his command, a bill known as Senata File No. 533, a bill for an act to amend S. 634 G. S. 1894, relating to a division of the property, and a settlement of indebtedness between the counties of Polk and Red Lake. The vote on this bill was yeas, 23, nays 26, and Daly voted against this bill. At the time it was claimed that Red Lake county would receive from Polk $33,000 as her share of the assests of the old county had this bill become a law. Two votes taken from the negative side, and placed with us, would have carried the bill, and it was in Daly's hands to secure these two. But instead, he turned his back on Red Lake county, and the Crookston influence prevailed. If he is elected to congress what little he can do will be in the interests of Crookston, and Red Lake county will not be in it. We have too long been tied down to Crookston, and in 1897 we declared our independence. Is the good work to be set at naught by sending a man to congress who will not recognize us, and the demands of Red Lake county? If our taxes in Red Lake county aro a littla high now, we have to thank M. J. Daly somewhat for it, because if this bill had passed, it suraly would have helped to lower them.

After this, Red Lake county will not expect anything from Daly, and he can expect little from Red Lake county, because in going back on this bill he went back on the people of the whola county. What he has dona once he will do again.

Vote for Hon. Frank M. Eddy, who will faithfully represent tha people of this county and district.

Red Lake Falls, Minn.

Sir,—

You are informed that under the provisions of the act of May 17, 1900, commonly called the "Free Homes" bill, the settlers on the Red Lake reservation are relieved from the payment of $1.25 per acre required by the provisions of the act of January 14, 1889, providing for the cession of the said lands.

I enclose you herewith a circular issued by the department of the Interior dated June 5, 1900, relative to this act and containing a copy thereof.

Very respectfully,
Sylvester Peterson,
Register.

Board of Trade Meeting.

A meeting of the Board of Trade was held last night at the office of the Union Land and Investment company. The by laws were read and ratified. Meetings are fixed for the first and third Monday of each month. The matter of passing a resolution favoring the national park of Minnesota, was brought up, and it was decided to postpone action until Monday night, Nov. 12, when a discussion of the matter will be held, following a joint debate, as to the feasibility or non-feasibility.

Following are the resolutions as passed by the St. Paul Commercial Club, and the discussions will terminate in a vote as to our Board of Trade adopting or rejecting same:

Whereas, the great majority of the people of the Northwest are in favor of preserving intact the Leech Lake, Cass Lake and Winnibigoshish Lake Indiaa Reservations, situated in the northera part of the State of Minnesota, as a forest reserve and National Park, comprising 611,292 acres of land aad 218,470 acres of water surface.

Whereas, these reservations contain the last remnant belonging to the United States Government of the once magnificent pine forest of Minnesota, situated at the head waters of the Mississippi, and, with the system of lakes embraced within it, form the chief reservoir for the Father of Waters.

Whereas, it is now an undisputed fact, that denuding the country of its woodlands, greatly lessens the rainfall and tends to diminish and dry up the rivers and streams.

Whereas, said lands now are and must ever remain of little value for agricultural purposes.

Whereas, it is entended to conduct this reserve on forestry principles, and it may thus be preserved as a Park and health resort, and at the same time save the Government large sums, which would otherwise be required for river improvements.

Therefore be it resolved: That we urge Congress to provide the necessary legislation to obtain this Natioaal Park.

VERY SEVERE STORM

RAIN CAUSES WASHOUTS AND DELAYS TRAFFIC.

Orinoco Company to Protest Against Venezuela's Action—Death of P. H. Kelly—Disastrous Fire at Minneiska. Score of Horses Burned at St. Paul. State News in General.

WINONA, Minn., Oct. 29.—Saturday night and Sunday morning this city and vicinity was visited by the worst storm in many years at this season of the year. Lightning did considerable damage in the city, striking in a number of places. All the railroads entering the city suffered considerable loss on account of washouts and high water. The Northwestern and the Milwaukee were the principal losers. The Northwestern had 1,000 feet of track washed out near Rockland, Wis., and about 1,000 near West Salem, Wis. They also suffered slight damage between Winona and Stockton, Minn., on account of high water. The Milwaukee has two washouts near here, one at King's Cooley and another at Lamoille. All passenger trains on the river division of the Milwaukee were abandoned.

LA CROSSE, Wis., Oct. 30.—Traffic on the various railroads entering La Crosse, which was suspended all day Sunday, has been resumed, and now, save for the delays which are due to the soft condition of the track, all trains are running.

The storm was the worst that has occurred since the flood of two years ago, when not a train entered the city for a week. The damage cannot yet be estimated with any degree of correctness, but it is believed that it will reach $100,000. La Crosse seemed to be the center of the storm, which extended over the entire Northwest. The Southern Minnesota division of the Milwaukee railroad reports very heavy rain and numerous small washouts.

ORINOCO PROTEST.

Venezuela May Revoke Her Cancellation of Company's Concession.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—Complications with the government of Venezuela may result from the persistent efforts of English capitalists against the Orinoco company, in which T. B. Clement, Donald Grant and other citizens of Faribault, and Moses E. Clapp of St. Paul are interested.

It is learned on unquestionable authority that the Orinoco company, through its president, has entered formal complaint to Secretary of State Hay, asking that its rights and privileges as American citizens be protected. The company has valuable concessions for the construction of railroads,

Improvements of Waterways

and developments of mines and forests. Recently it was stated that the government of Venezuela had annulled these concessions, but the vigorous fight that is being made by the company, and the fact that the United States will undoubtedly see to it that the Orinoco people are duly protected, has thus far held matters in abeyance.

A very strong letter is on file in the state department from the Orinoco company. Senator Davis and Congressman Heatwole have also interested themselves in the matter, and during the past week there has been one or more representatives of the company in Washington.

P. H. KELLY DEAD.

Pioneer Business Man of the Northwest Expires Very Suddenly.

ST. PAUL, Oct. 24.—Patrick H. Kelly, one of the leading business men in the state for almost a quarter of a century, has joined the great silent majority.

Mr. Kelly died at 8:30 p. m. at his home, 489 Holly avenue, and there was no sign of approaching death up to the last minute. His two daughters were in the house at the time of his death. He was sitting in his easy chair resting and just before his death he asked for something to eat. This was being prepared when he gasped and fell back dead.

For several days Mr. Kelly had felt a little indisposed, though not enough to keep him from his work. It was said by his relatives that he looked better during the day than he had for a long time, and the death came as a great shock.

Physicians were called for but they came after Mr. Kelly was dead.

Mr. Kelly was born in the county of Mayo, Ireland, Feb. 2, 1831. He received his education in his native land. At the age of 16 years he came to America with his parents, locating first near Montreal. In 1857 he with a younger brother located in St. Paul and since that time has been fully identified with the growth of the Northwest.

Seven Years for Manslaughter.

LAKE BENTON, Minn., Oct. 29.—Walter Warren has been convicted of manslaughter in the first degree and sentenced to seven years at hard labor at Stillwater. A motion by Warren's attorneys for a new trial is now under consideration. Warren is a young farmer who killed his hired man in a quarrel last year over wages.

Killed by a Careless Driver.

ST. PAUL, Oct. 25.—Albert Rosen, a 12-year-old boy, was run down by a careless driver on Robert, near Fourth street. The left side of the boy's face was horribly crushed. He was removed to St. Joseph's hospital, but death resulted in a few hours. The driver of the rig has been arrested.

Big Game Is Plentiful.

BEMIDJI, Minn., Oct. 26.—The deer and moose hunters will find their game quite plentiful in this vicinity this season. The heavy rains have flooded the big marshes north of here and driven the deer from their former fastnesses. Deer have been seen within a few miles of this village.

TOTAL LOSS $50,000.

Minnesota Town Experiences a Disastrous Fire.

MINNEISKA, Minn., Oct. 27.—The two elevators of the American Malting company here were destroyed by fire during the afternoon, causing a loss, with the grain, of from $12,000 to $15,000, pretty well insured. The Farmers' elevator was burned, causing a loss of from $6,000 to $8,000. The stores of Messrs. Peshon and Gentzkow also suffered and the boatyard was damaged. Everything east of the depot was burned. The total loss may reach $50,000.

The fire is believed to have started from a spark from a passing engine, as it was first discovered in a barn owned by Brooks Bros. The only fire protection the town had was a hand pump and surrounding towns sent aid and assistance.

TWENTY HORSES PERISH.

Barns of John B. Cook & Son, St. Paul, Destroyed by Fire.

ST. PAUL, Oct. 25.—The barns of John B. Cook & Son were destroyed by fire at 3:20 a. m. Twenty horses that were in the basement of the building were burned and all of the vehicles, harnesses, feed and other property of the owners that were on the first and second floors are, with the structure, a total loss.

The stable was a 2-story frame structure, 50x100 feet, and the loss on it with the hay and feed that it contained is estimated at $8,000. The loss on the vehicles is estimated at $7,000 and on the horses at $2,000.

NEW BASE BALL LEAGUE.

Will Take in Minnesota and Wisconsin Towns if Organized.

DULUTH, Oct. 24.—Ted Sullivan, the veteran base ball manager, who is now endeavoring to establish a Northwestern league, has been in this city to note the outlook in Duluth and Superior as to their having a league nine. The towns thought of by Mr. Sullivan are Duluth, Superior, St. Paul, Ashland, Eau Claire and La Crosse. Two more clubs may be added. He has received much encouragement in this city, he says, and in all probability the Northwest will have a chance to see league base ball next season.

Liabilities, $403,091; Assets, $143,401.

DULUTH, Oct. 26.—William C. Sherwood, senior member of the firm of W. C. Sherwood & Co., real estate and loans, has began proceedings in bankruptcy. His liabilities are given as $403,091.44 and assets estimated at $143,401.47. Mr. Sherwood has been for many years one of the most prominent real estate men in this city. His principal creditors are the First National bank of this city and Amelia Sherwood, a relative. Mr. Sherwood is also secretary of the Northern Land and Loan company.

Northwestern Flour Output.

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 25.—According to The Northwestern Miller the flour output at Minneapolis last week was 299,130 barrels, against 220,870 barrels for the corresponding week of 1890. Superior-Duluth last week ground 11,200 barrels against 11,200 barrels for the corresponding week of 1890. Again the milling trade has witnessed a dull and almost featureless week, so far as transactions in flour were concerned, but with the mills of the country generally running at full capacity.

Fatally Shot His Sweetheart.

HALSTED, Minn., Oct. 25.—Percy Baker, once a railroad conductor, shot his sweetheart, Miss Nettie Larsen, just above the heart. Recovery is doubtful. Baker was captured. He is married and wanted to marry the girl when he could get a divorce. She, however, had wearied of his attentions.

Aged Woman Killed by a Bull.

ANOKA, Minn., Oct. 30.—Mrs. Kohler aged 72 was killed by a bull while crossing the yard in which the animal was confined. The animal had been dehorned, but attacked the aged woman with its hoofs, crushing her face, and inflicting internal injuries from which she died soon afterwards.

Killed While Hunting.

ROYALTON, Minn., Oct. 30.—Henry Pippin 15 years old son, of Oliver Pippin of this place, was killed while hunting. The gun a 22 rifle, was accidentally discharged, the bullet taking effect in the throat directly under the chin, penetrating the windpipe. He died instantly.

Lilley Sentenced for Five Years.

ST. PAUL, Oct. 24.—Fred W. Lilley, convicted of assault upon his wife, was sentenced to five years at Stillwater by Judge Bunn. Lilley attempted to kill his wife and Miss Della Feige at the California Wine House. He shot both women, but neither was severely injured.

Bridges Washed Out.

HOKAH, Minn., Oct. 30.—There was a heavy rainfall here during the night. The Weber mill head-gates and flume were washed out, causing great damage. Lake fishing will suffer severely. Railroad bridges and roadbeds in all directions are in bad shape.

Died From His Injuries.

ST. PAUL, Oct. 27.—A. J. Johnson, pipeman of Engine Company No. 9, died at Bethesda hospital at 3 o'clock, from injuries received Sunday morning in the Midway fire. Johnson is the fifth victim.

Cracked the Safe and Secured $600.

BALATON, Minn., Oct. 30.—The store of J. N. Westbee was broken into and the safe blown open. Between $500 and $600 was taken. There is no clue to the burglars.

Cloudburst in Wisconsin.

NEW RICHMOND, Wis., Oct. 30.—At New Richmond Center a cloudburst of rain fell for over three hours steadily, entirely unaccompanied by wind. Lightning kept up a constant cannonading, and for half an hour previous to the rain seemed to come from a perfectly clear sky.

TOO MUCH ZEAL.

BY BARRY PAIN.

The two tramps reclined on the hay that they had pulled out of the new made stack and spread in the shade. Roused from somnolence by the slipping of his clay pipe from his mouth, the younger man sat up. He tightened his leather belt, relit his pipe and supposed that he must be off. He was a strong, gypsy looking man.

"What for?" asked his companion.

"Because I want to get took on for tomorrow, and if I don't go now it will be too late."

"Ah!" said the old man. "Hard graft, middling pay and bad swipes—and that's haymaking. You wouldn't catch me running after it. That's no proper work for a man."

"Well," said the old man, "the last job I had was a good un."

"Chucked it?"

"Sacked!"

"Booze?"

"No; zeal; doing too much."

The younger man said that he thought that was a hot one. His companion said that he would tell him how it was, and it might be a lesson to him.

"It were a big place down in Kent and of the nature of a chemical works. It were owned by a limited company. There was several buildings in the factory, and one of them buildings was extra special. Not a soul was let to go into it without a red ticket, what were got from the manager. Trade secrets maybe or perhaps explosives. I never worried about it. My job was to set in a sort of sentry box and take them tickets and keep anybody out what hadn't got one. It were the manager's secretary took me on, and it were work that suited me. Well, the very first day I was there up walked the manager, though I didn't know it was him, never having seen him.

" 'Show your ticket, please,' I says.

" 'That's all right,' he says, 'I'm the manager.'

"I told him that wouldn't do for me. It was my duty to see his ticket, and he wouldn't pass until I had. My idea was that it was a stranger with reasons of his own for wanting to get in, and if he'd offered me half a crown instead of a ticket it wouldn't have staggered me. But he just pulled out a pack of those tickets from his pocket and showed me he really was the manager. Then, of course, I was all for begging his pardon. But he wouldn't hear of it. He said that I'd acted right, and he shouldn't forget it. I'd showed I could be depended upon. I felt rather pleased with myself about that. I thought that would be good enough to do twice if I got the chance.

"One day I seed a fierce looking gent in the yard talking as if he'd bought the world. I asked somebody who that was, and I were told it were Sir George Gunn, one of the directors. I thought to myself that if it were brought under his notice what a hot 'un I was on strict duty and such that might do me a bit of all right. As luck would have it he went sailing past my box to get into that particular building. I were after him like a knife. I caught him by the coattails and swung him round.

" 'Come out of it!' I says. 'You don't go in there without a ticket.'

" 'What are you doing?' he said. 'I'm a director.'

" 'Director be hanged!' I says. 'Ticket or outside. That's all I've got to think about.'

" 'I won't have such language here,' he said.

" 'Very sorry, Sir George,' I said, losing my head. And then, of course, I saw I'd given the whole thing away, and so did he. He wanted to know how it was that I knew his name if I didn't know he was a director. I said what I could, but it didn't satisfy. In one short half hour I was turned off and told not to show my face there again. That's what comes of zeal; that's what comes of doing one's strict duty. I've been told that a railway porter once kept the Prince of Wales off the platform that had been specially reserved for him and was made head gardener or something at Sandringham for his pains, but you can't depend on it. I was thrown out of my employment for doing too much, and since then I've had to make my living how I could. Just you think about that. Don't you overdo it."

The young tramp said that he had been engaged as a haymaker for some years, and he had never been told yet that he was doing too much. He had been told that he was not doing enough at times.

"Ah!" said the old man. "Well, I don't defend laziness." He drew the battered felt over his eyes and composed himself to sleep again.

"I say, mate," said the younger man after a pause. "Here's a old chap has spotted us and is coming down the field."

"Any dog?"

"Yuss."

The victim of his own zeal pulled himself to his feet. "It's likely," he said, "he might not care about what we've done to his stack. And I hate dogs."

He went off at a slouching trot.—Black and White.

TWO FRIENDS AND TWO COATS

Not alone were Maurice and Paul friends from childhood, not alone had they followed the same studies in the same colleges, not alone had they married two cousins in the same year, but they also possessed a brown overcoat each of the very same make and very same shade.

On a certain morning as Maurice, after an affectionate goodby to Marthe, went along to business a messenger boy, who evidently had been watching for him, slipped a note securely and quickly into his hand.

Quite mystified, Maurice opened it. Written in rather bad handwriting were the lines:

My Dear Old Friend—Come and dine with me tomorrow evening. You know the address.
FIFI.

"Fifi, Fifi!" He could not recall the name.

Then suddenly light broke on him. He remembered now—an actress who had a big share of his boyish devotion. But of what could she be thinking to imagine he, a sensible married man, with the most charming wife in Paris, would accept such an invitation? With a gesture of contempt he stuffed the billet into his coat pocket and tore the envelope into little pieces as he threw it to the wind. Shrugging his shoulders, he continued his journey.

When he arrived at his office, Paul was already there. But so busy were the two friends that, except the moment taken to arrange to make a party for the theater that evening, there was no opportunity of speaking all day. Paul left first in the evening, and as Maurice was finishing up business for the day he began to think of his billet.

After all, what harm would it be if he went to see an old friend? He could easily, he was sure, learn through her of the destinies of youthful friends whom he had not seen for years, perhaps meet them at her home. He could easily make a pretext of business to Marthe. Surely he would love his wife none the less because he had a few hearty laughs with old friends about old times.

And, standing up, he reached for his coat and hat. When putting on the coat, he felt the sleeves a trifle narrow.

"Paul," thought he, "has taken mine. We'll exchange this evening at the theater."

Some hours later the young couples were in a box at the Vaudeville. The piece was well acted and was of captivating interest. Seated behind Marthe, who had never looked prettier, Maurice forgot all about the adventure of the morning.

Seated in the carriage which was to take them home, the door had hardly closed when Marthe turned to her husband.

"Look at that! Isn't it disgraceful!" exclaimed she, with indignation, holding out with a trembling hand the billet of Fifi.

"Atrocious!" answered he energetically and sincerely.

There was a moment of silence.

"Poor Valentine!" sighed Marthe.

"Valentine! Why, Valentine?"

"Oh, that is a man all over! Her husband invited to dinner with Mlle. Fifi, and I'm asked, 'Why, Valentine?' "

"Paul?"

"Yes, Paul, your bosom friend. It was during the last entr'acte we made the discovery. Valentine had scratched her finger fixing her brooch, and, not liking to soil her handkerchief, she asked me to get her Paul's from his pocket. Instead I pulled out this note. Do my best, I could not help an exclamation of surprise."

"Valentine came over hastily. 'What is it? What is the matter?' and she read the billet too. It was horrible, was it not, for the poor creature? In an instant it struck me there was only one way of helping her. But—tell me you'll forgive me—I told her a lie. I remembered that you and Paul had the same sort of coat, so I said: 'This is Maurice's coat.' "

"And then?"

"Then, most extraordinary, she believed it at once. Women are such fools. Each thinks every one can be deceived but herself."

Maurice tried to suppress a smile, while Marthe said in the most tender of voices:

"Tell me you are not angry with me for telling the lie?"

"Not at all, my darling. You acted splendidly. Besides, it was a very little deception."

"That wretched Paul! Do you think he'll go?"

"No, my dear child. You need not make yourself uneasy. I can swear to you Paul will not go."

"Then all is for the best. Faith alone can save, and it is sometimes a good thing to have a bandage over the eyes. Poor Valentine! After all, if she knew the truth!"

"But she would pardon him, perhaps."

Marthe gave a spring.

"Pardon him. Oh, no!"

"Then, if instead of your friend, let us suppose it was you. You would not forgive it?"

"Never!" replied she, with such earnestness that the young man became pale. "But," continued she, with her most winning air, "such a thing could not have happened to me. If I were to see it even with my eyes, as did Valentine, I would not have believed it."

Maurice kissed the pretty, earnest face so close to him and thought what a rascal he was.

A little later, as Marthe was undoing her hair before her boudoir glass:

"Well, Maurice," said she, with a gay laugh, "wasn't it very lucky that you and Paul had the same colored coats?"

"Oh, yes—very lucky indeed," replied the young husband in a voice which came from the heart.—Chicago Times-Herald.

An Adventure.

Three smart young men and three nice girls—
All lovers true as steel—
Decided in a friendly way
To spend the day awheel.
They started in the early morn,
And nothing seemed amiss;
And when they reached the leafy lane
They in like rode twos this!

They wandered by the verdant dale,
Beside the rippling rill;
The sun shone brightly all the while;
They heard the song bird's trill.
They sped through many a woodland glade,
The world was full of bliss—
And when they rested in the shade
Theysat intwos likethis!

The sun went down and evening came,
A lot too soon, they said:
Too long they tarried on the way.
The clouds grew black o'erhead;
Down dashed the rain! They homeward flew,
Till one unlucky miss slipped sideways—Crash! Great Scot!

Spoons for Cooking.

Wooden spoons are best and cheapest for stirring and mixing nearly all cookery. A metal spoon—and there are perfectly plain and inexpensive silver-plated ones—being kept for basting and tasting. The average maid, I fear, does not observe the cooking lecturer's dainty way of testing the food to see if it is properly seasoned; but if not otherwise instructed, carries the spoon directly from the pot of soup or sauce to her mouth. Two spoons, one to go into the sauce and one to the mouth, would seem a more cleanly arrangement.—New York Evening Post.

"Er—oh—do you like sugar and cream in your coffee?"—Indianapolis Journal.

Otters Play in the Snow.

It seems strange to think that any full-grown four-footed animal should indulge in play like a child, and yet this is what the otter does. His amusement is tobogganing, and his playground is a slope covered with ice or snow, that goes down grade into a pool of water. Here he takes his recreation; and no little boy with a new sled ever enjoyed a coast down an ice-bound hill more than this beautiful creature from the frozen north.

The otter is perhaps the most interesting of the furbearing animals. He is quite large, sometimes weighing as much as twenty-five pounds. He resembles the seal and the mink, being, however, of heavier build, and is both supple and strong. Living for the most part in water, he preys on fish, which his swimming and diving ability enables him to catch easily. The entrance to his home, which is a burrow in the bank of a stream, is under the water.

In the early spring, when the ice begins to thaw, these animals start on their travels from one stream to another, sometimes spending months on the journey. If they happen to see an inviting hill by the wayside they immediately stop their pilgrimage and prepare for some sport. One of the number leaves the water and slowly climbs the slope, making a smooth hollow in the ice with his wet body. When the slide is prepared, he lies flat down, thrusts his nose forward, and, turning his fore paws under his soft sides goes sailing swiftly down. His speed steadily increases until he reaches the water. Silently he parts the surface and is lost from sight for a few seconds, then his head appears above the surface, and you can hear him give a call which sounds like a whistle. This is a signal. The next otter assumes the position and shoots down to the bottom to join his companion, who has meanwhile crawled out on the ice. Then another whistle, and the next in order slides and plunges, and the performance is kept up until each one has several trips to his credit.

The first makers of a slide will keep this up for an indefinite time, speeding down hill and then trudging up again to their positions at the top, where they wait for the whistle from below, in the meantime playfully biting each other or rolling in the snow. Finally, though, when, like children, they begin to tire of their amusement, they go back to the water and fish.

Saved by a Cool Head.

Dr. Siddale, the well-known London physician, during his vacation a few years ago, was fishing one evening in a Scotch loch when a man approached, caught him by the shoulders and shook him violently. A glance told the doctor that the man was insane. He was a huge fellow; the doctor was small and had little physical strength. No one was in sight.

"What are you going to do?" asked the doctor, calmly.

"Throw you into that water?" shouted the man.

"Certainly," said the doctor; "but I'll have to go home and put on a dress suit. Dead men always wear evening dress."

The madman stopped, looked at him doubtfully, and said: "So they do. Make haste. I'll wait."

Dr. Siddale walked slowly up the bank, and then ran for his life.

Moliere, the great French dramatist, was ill, and had retired to his villa at Auteuil for rest and quiet. One day Boileau, Lulli and another friend came to visit him. Monsieur La Chapelle did the honors for Moliere. By the time supper was over, the guests were in so exalted a state that they resolved to set an example to France by dying philosophically together, to prove their contempt of the world. They determined to drown themselves in the Seine, but first went to bid their host an eternal farewell.

Moliere cast a hasty glance at the flushed faces around his bed. "But you have forgotten me!" he cried. "I, too, must share in this glorious act."

"True, true!" they shouted. "He is our brother! He shall die with us. Come on!"

"Not tonight," said Moliere, calmly, "or France will say we were ashamed of the deed. Wait until morning, and then if we die, nobody can doubt our motives."

They consented, and crept away to bed. When they rose sober in the morning, not one of them spoke of suicide.

As Others See Us.

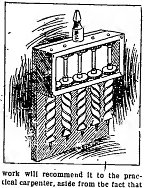
We have a way of generalizing in the most superior fashion in regard to more ancient races. This, however, is a boot for the other foot—a quotation from a certain Chinese essayist who thus describes the American people: They live months without eating a mouthful of rice. They eat bullocks and sheep in enormous quantities. They have to bathe frequently. The men dress all alike, and to judge from their appearance, they are all coolies; neither are they ever to be seen carrying a fan or an umbrella, for they manifest their ignorant contempt of these insignia of gentlemen by leaving them entirely to women. None of them have finger-nails more than an eighth of an inch long. They eat meat with knives and prongs. They never enjoy themselves by sitting quietly on their ancestors' graves, but jump around and kick balls as if paid to do it. They have no dignity, for they may be found walking with women.—Youth's Companion.

Hotel Attractions.

"Yes, he started a hotel, and he's made a hit, too. You know the old-established place across the street advertised itself as 'a hotel without the discomforts of home.'"—Philadelphia Press.

TOOL FOR CUTTING MORTISES.

The cutting of mortises in timbers for frame buildings has hitherto been a laborious task, even with the aid of the boring machine in common use for this purpose, and without the machine it is almost impossible to cut the series of holes in the straight line necessary to form the mortise. Isaac Schurmen of Danvers, Mass., has designed the tool shown in the cut to re[illegible] the machine now in use, and the [illegible]dity with which it will perform the work will recommend it to the practical carpenter, aside from the fact that its cost is no more than the old machine. At one side of the frame which supports the bits is a guiding plate, attached in such a manner that the turn of several thumb screws will move it toward or away from the bits, thus adjusting the tool for cutting the mortise at the proper distance from the edge of the timber, and as the bits are removable from the frame the mortise can be made of the desired length by taking off one or more of the end bits.



Largest of Animals.

Mr. Beddard, in his new book on whales, reminds readers that although the imagination is apt to picture the giant reptiles of the Jurassic and Cretaceous periods as having exceeded in size all modern animals, yet in fact there is no evidence that the earth has ever contained, either on land or in the sea, creatures exceeding the whale in bulk. The mammoth was larger than the elephant, but the ichthyosaurus could not match the whale for size, although with its terrible jaws it would doubtless have been the whale's master.

TEXAS SOLOMON.

How the Ownership of a Hen Was Judicially Determined.

Texas has always been noted for the remarkable decisions of some of its minor judiciaries, which, while often showing ignorance of the letter of the law, contained a good deal of rude equity and appreciation of what was right between man and man, says the Mexican Herald. Some of Justice I. P. Franklin's decisions at Brownsville, would have done credit to the wise cadi in "The Arabian Nights." One case I recollect in particular. Two women came to him one morning claiming the ownership of a hen, valued perhaps at 25 cents. Each had a crowd of witnesses, who swore point blank up and down, one lot that the hen was the property of one of the women and the other gang that it was the property of the other. Here was a quandary. Franklin thought awhile and then ordered that the hen be left with the court, and said he would render his decision later. Just about sunset that afternoon "Jip," accompanied by the constable, who carried the hen in a soap box, a couple of policemen and two or three of the court hangers-on, appeared in front of the dwellings of the rival claimants who lived just across the street from each other. The police and the hangers-on were ordered to clear the street and to keep all passers-by and curious urchins back, while the rival occupants of the residences were ordered to stay within doors. Then the constable put the box containing the hen at the point in the roadway midway between the two houses, and as the setting sun was tinging the clouds in the west with its last rays he removed the cover of the box and retired on tiptoe. Biddy jumped up on the side of the box, shook her feathers, hopped into the street, picked in the dust for a moment and then, calmly marched into the yard of one of the claimants, proceeded to fly up into a tree to go to roost. Calling the woman of that house to the door, Franklin told her that he had decided that the hen was hers, and, in turning to the other, who had come out, said: "And if you give me any more trouble about that hen I will assess you $2.50 for costs." All the neighbors were well satisfied as to the justice of the decision, and Franklin's reputation as a judge was much enhanced thereby among the native population. He had very shrewdly thought that if no one else knew to whom the hen belonged probably Biddy herself would be the most certain witness in the case.

BOEN'S CANDIDACY.

Haldor E. Boen, who was elected to congress by the Populist party of this district eight years ago, and is now one of the prominent members of the Mid Roaders of this state, which is composed of those Populists who are opposed to fusion with the Democrats. Mr. Boen is a candidate for congress on the Mid-road Populist, or Referendum ticket, and has issued the following address:

FOR DIRECT LEGISLATION.

I was nominated without my knowledge or consent and I have made no canvass for election. But I am a candidate just the same, and hope to be elected.

If I am elected it will be a triumph for the referendum. Every vote cast for me is a vote cast for the referendum and against King Caucus. It is a vote for direct legislation and against the assumed power of the courts to declare unconstitutional all laws that interfere with the rich. I may fail to be elected, but I will receive a vote sufficiently large to stagger the politicians and to teach the people how they may manage politices without the aid of the politicians.

If I am elected I shall serve the people as loyally as I served them during my former term in congress.

Faithfully yours,
Haldor E. Boen,
Referendum Candidate for Congress,
Seventh District.

TO THE VOTERS OF RED LAKE COUNTY.

Day F. Stacy would be an expensive man to put into the office of county surveyor. When he was my deputy he unfolded a scheme to compel the county to put in iron posts at every section corner in the county, which, he stated, would profit me from $800 to $900. I do not approve of any method of bleeding the people, and refused to listen to his scheme. A man who would use such methods is not the right kind of a man to elect to any office. For myself, I claim to give the people the best possible service, and the cost to them is as low as can be made. I respectfully solicit the support of all voters who believe that decency of character ought to be a prerequisite of every public servant.

Yours,
P. O. Hagglund.

O. T. Tandberg is strong with the people not without reason. Two years ago he was practically unknown in this section of Red Lake county, but he has today many warm friends who admire him for his sterling qualities. The fact that he is not a politician, has not hurt him any with the people. It will be remembered that he was nominated by acclamation by the Populist county convention. He is a creditable representative of the north end of Red Lake county, and as that portion of the county wants him to continue as their representative, the people in this vicinity, in a spirit of fairness, should give him a good support.

Adam Zeh has made a first class county auditor; during the two years of his incumbency in that important office, he has demonstrated his abitities to such an extent that there is very little doubt of his re-election. Two years ago the voters of the county placed sufficient confidence in him to elect him to the most important office in the court house. He has been tried, and found a good and faithful public servant, and the people will do well to re-elect him

Samuel Gibean, the Peoples Party candidate for register of deeds, as a public man, is well and favorably known. He was identified with the alliance and later with the People's party since he attained his majority, and was secretary of the Polk county alliance central committee for several years. He served as town clerk of Lambert township in this county from 1888 until 1898. At the organization of Red Lake county, he served as chairman of its board of commissioners and continued as a member of the board until his election as register of deeds in 1898; which office he now holds. Mr. Gibeau has proven himself to be a faithful, competent and obliging official, experienced in the duties of his office, and especially careful in allowing no defective instrument to go on record. His knowledge of the laws of conveyancing and his experience enables him to put this important office on a high plane of excellence. His party has recognized his worth by nominating him for re-election, and the voters of Red Lake county, appreciating the importance of this office, and the necessity of reliable records of title, will make no mistake by voting to retain Samuel Gibean as register of deeds of Red Lake county. Mr. Gibeau is the only candidate from the southeastern portion of Red Lake county who stands any show of election, and he is therefore entitled to the consideration of those voters who believe in a fair distribution of the offices, and a fair representation of the different sections of the county.

BURKEE SUPPORTS ZEH.

W. A. Case is making the statement that B. E. Burkee, the Democratic nominee for County Auditor, has withdrawn in his favor. County Auditor Zeh has received the following letter from Mr. Burkee, which explains itself:

St. Hilaire, Minn., Oct. 26, 1900.
Adam Zeh,
Red Lake Falls, Minn.

Dear Sir:

As you know, I am out of the race for county auditor, so after this it will be between you and Mr. Case. If you wish you may have my authority to publish in the Red Lake Falls paper that I have withdrawn, and next that I have not withdrawn in favor of Mr. Case, as I understand it has been rumored.

Yours truly,
B. E. Burkee.

Vote for S. A. Swanson for Representative. He will be the right man in the right place.

THE BEDE RALLY.

GREATEST POLITICAL DEMONSTRATION IN HISTORY OF RED LAKE COUNTY.

SPECIAL TRAIN BRINGS MANY ENTHUSIASTS.—MUSIC BY FOUR BANDS.

Thursday night last witnessed the largest political rally in the history of Red Lake county, and this inspite of the inclement weather and impassable roads, which kept many farmers away. The special train arrived at 7:30, and although the light service was at its best, the foggy night mystified everything so that the hundreds crept around the depot in a muddled maze, and only the outlines of a great throng could be seen making its way along the platform and out to Main street. Enthusiasm was not lacking, however. The Crookston, St. Hilaire and Thief River Falls bands had kept the crowd in an enthusiastic mood. The Red Lake Falls band, surrounded by torches, and many interesting transparancies, played a welcome as the train pulled in. After assembling in front of the city hall, the march was at once begun toward the opera house, and this spacious hall was soon filled, with the largest audience that had ever confronted a speaker in Red Lake county. It was a brilliant scene and one long to be remembered.

Dr. Watson, chairman of the Republican county central committee, presided, and first introduced Hon. W. H. Suvary, of Illinois, who spoke in French for 20 minutes. It is said that Mr. Savary delivered the best political argument of the campaign. He is a finished orator, and an inoffensive speaker, who does not antagonize his hearers of opposite political faith.

Mr. Montague followed, and in the five minutes allowed to him, demonstrated his ability as a campaign orator. J. Adam Bede then opened his address, and he had hardly commenced to speak when the audience was in an uproar of merriment. Mr. Bede's audience was not all in sympathy with him, for it must be remembered that this is a mixed community. One would not have suspected it, however, Thursday night. As a public speaker, J. Adam Bede has few superiors, combining the most original humor with philosophy and fact, in a manner that keeps an audience spellbound. While his arguments are general and a recital of deductions, rather than the presentation of theories, they are subtle and effective, and wear long after the effects of a demagugic appeal to the emotions, jealousies and bitterness of weak human nature have been forgotten. It was absolutely refreshing to have the brighter phrases of life pointed out, and although this is not what the opposition of the Republican party likes, still it is wholesome and enjoyable to those not too much wrapped up by political prejudices to admit that the sun still shines. Mr. Bede was a Democrat four years ago, and opposed his party on the silver issue. Like Micheel Doran, Don M. Dickinson, John G. Carlisle, and other old line Democrats, he opposes Bryanism in the expectation that the Democratic party will be rehabilitated after his defeat, and reorganized on the old lines. In the meantime these Democrats are supporting McKinley. Of course their dream of this reorganization will never be realized, and the chances are that they are with the Republicans to stay.

When the audience assembled, on every chair was found a circular headed "Attention Voters!" This contained a lot of clippings from Bede's Budget, published by J. Adam Bede. The action of the sneak who so surreptitously deposited these slips was condemned, not because the matter in itself was of any great harm or importance, but because the bounds of decency were overstepped. The Republicans were paying for the use of the opera house, and it was clearly an infringment on fairness, which should be, and always is conceded by respectable political opponents. This act, however, was not respectable.

Vic's Letter.

Ferloc, P. I., Sept. 16, 1900.

Editor Gazette:

It is with pleasure that I will take a moment to drop you a few lines from this part of the world.

There is nothing very newsy here. The civil commission is getting at the work of organizing a government and making laws, besides the military government and laws. There is much to be done by this body. One does not realize the amount of work to be done by them until he stops to figure that they have to do about the same as all nations do at the close of a war. Upon them falls the duty of establishing the taxes, which on this island is a very hard thing to get at and do properly, as the people have nothing very great to tax, and therefore the tax must be light, but, at the same time, the country is in such ruins that a lot revenue is necessary to rebuild the roads and bridges and other public property.

The new regular regiments, to relieve the volunteers, are beginning to arrive, and then you will hear of the great work done by these men (so to hear them tell it) but some of them have hardly left Manilla. They will have accomplished things that the regulars could not. The rainy season is getting pretty well at an end, and to ride along the roads here, at this time, reminds one of a late spring in Northern Minnesota. The roads are drying fastly, little brooklets flowing here and there, everything looks greener than ever, the air is somewhat cooler than during the rainy season, and in about two months from now we will see the natives all at work harvesting their rice.

An attack was made a few days ago on every town along the railroad from Malohas to Celorcan and the road was badly wrecked in several places. There is a strong rumor of an attack on this place in a few nights. We expected it would come last night, as several natives were about during the day, which looked rather suspicious. I think it cannot go far before we either get into it or arrest some of these most suspicious characters. It seems that although the insurrection is considered at an end that there are quite a few of the brigenders still out, but very little reaches the states.

I will get a pass in a few days and go to Passay, Manilla, San Woolio and several other places, and if I can get 15 days I will try to go to China, but that is nothing sure and it is likely that my application will be turned down, and I will only go to places on this island for ten days. It is a two and a half days' run to China and I can go on a government boat. The only cost will be the difference in rations, but I would be willing to pay $25 for such a trip.

Sergeant Samuel Bardelson, formerly Lieutenant Bardelson, L Co., 14th Minnesota, of Thief River Falls, now of I Co., 34th Infantry, U. S. V., was wounded in the thigh on July 4. At the last news from him he was doing nicely.

I think this is all for this time. I am as ever,

"Vic."

To the Public.

We wish to announce that we are now making flour that is second to none on the market. Try a sack of "Red Lake Falls Best" or "Family Patent," our leading brands and be convinced. We are using old wheat and the new will be fit for milling by the time we are out of old. We pay cash for wheat, oats and barley, and exchange flour for wheat, and sell feed, bran, etc.

We have a first-class feed mill in connection with our mill. We solicit a share of your trade.

I, the undersigned have lived in this county for 22 years, and have used flour from all the mills, but none of it has proven to be as good, or even a grade as the Terrebanne flour. My wife is an experienced baker, and pronounces it the only flour for her. I recommend it to be the best flour on the market, and it is made of this year's crop.

OLD WHEAT FLOUR.

Yes, we have it. We are still milling old wheat. We had a very large stock in store at our different elevators, and we bought out all that we could find in other elevators, so that we will have old wheat enough to mill on for the next 20 days. So many have asked us within the last three or four weeks if they could get old wheat flour by coming to the mill, and a good many have laid in their year's supply of flour, fearing that the new wheat flour would not be as good as the old. The new wheat flour will be all right in 30 or 60 days, when it is thoroughly cured in the stack. We have not tried milling any of the local wheat yet. Now be sure when you are buying or Exchanging, if you want old wheat flour, to call for "Mascot" or "Favorite" made by the Red Lake Falls Milling Co. Even though your wheat is a little damp or tough we will give you as good a flour for it, although we cannot give you quite as much flour for it as if you had No. 1 Hard. We carry a stock of this old wheat flour at all our elevators. Remember this fact; That we are the only mill to-day in the Northwest that is grinding a strictly all old wheat flour. All the little mills in the country have run out of old wheat long ago, and are offering a premium of 5 cents per bushel for wheat that is suitable to mill.

We have not advanced the price of flour or the rate of Exchange.

Robbed the Grave.

A startling incident, of which Mr. John Oliver of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in my back and sides, no appetite, gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately a friend advised trying Electric Bitters; and to my great joy and surprise the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they saved my life and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50 cts., guaranteed, at W. A. Schreiter, Drug Store.

ORINOCO PROTEST.

Venezuela May Revoke Her Cancellation of Company's Concession.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—Complications with the government of Venezuela may result from the persistent efforts of English capitalists against the Orinoco company, in which T. B. Clement, Donald Grant and other citizens of Faribault, and Moses E. Clapp of St. Paul are interested.

It is learned on unquestionable authority that the Orinoco company, through its president, has entered formal complaint to Secretary of State Hay, asking that its rights and privileges as American citizens be protected. The company has valuable concessions for the construction of railroads, and developments of mines and forests. Recently it was stated that the government of Venezuela had annulled these concessions, but the vigorous fight that is being made by the company, and the fact that the United States will undoubtedly see to it that the Orinoco people are duly protected, has thus far held matters in abeyance.

Improvements of Waterways

A very strong letter is on file in the state department from the Orinoco company. Senator Davis and Congressman Heatwole have also interested themselves in the matter, and during the past week there has been one or more representatives of the company in Washington.

A GORILLA'S COURTSHIP.

Battle Between Apes In an African Forest

THE STORY OF A WITNESS.

The Fierce Foes Were Fighting for a Mate, and the Muscles of the Younger Proved Too Much for the Experience of the Older.

"After the adjustment of our little unpleasantness with the South," said Capt. Jack Benton, in the New York Sun, "I drifted back into civil life. It seemed monotonous, however, after the excitement of campaigning, and, receiving an offer to go to Africa and collect animals for menageries, I jumped at it. My work took me into the interior of upper Guinea, which was then about as wild a country as there was in the world.

"One morning I left camp to make a circuit of some traps we had set in the night, and, as I wasn't on the lookout for big game, I took only a light rifle with me. Trudging through the woods, I came on a little clearing, and there, not fifty feet away, I saw a big male gorilla. He was on all fours, half-squatting on the ground.

"Equipped with only a light rifle, I had no ambition to meddle with the beast. I slipped back into the underbrush, and was about to make off as quietly as possible when the peculiarity of the gorilla's actions attracted me. He seemed to be trying to look as amiable as was possible for such a monster and a second glance showed me the reason for this. At the right of the clearing was a second gorilla, smaller but equally ferocious looking, a fitting mate for the first big brute. I had evidently discovered a gorilla courtship.

"The male gorilla, trying to attract the attention of the female by uncouth actions, was beginning to advance clumsily toward her, when suddenly a 'hi! boom! boom!' sounded from far away in the forest. Up to that instant the male gorilla, while savage-looking, had given no sign of being angry, but now all was changed. His huge jaws shut together with a snap. Then through the silence which had fallen on the jungle when the first sullen challenge was heard came a sharp bark, followed by a deep humming sound. It was the terrible battle call of a full-grown gorilla, the cry sent out when he is about to fight to the death for a mate. At the end of each echoing challenge the hairy giant beat with his big hands on his chest, while at the other end of the clearing, waiting to bestow her hand on the victor, sat the female gorilla whose charms had inspired such jealous rage.

"Neither of the big animals wasted time in preliminaries; they had worked themselves up into such an insanity of rage that only killing would satisfy. Each advanced on his hind legs until within six feet of the other. Then the younger gorilla began to fight. Stepping forward with marvelous quickness for such an ungainly animal, he struck a flail-like blow with his huge paws. Had the blow gone home, no mere flesh and blood, not even the big-boned frame of his antagonist, could have withstood it. But the old gorilla had been in too many death grapples to be caught so early in the fight. When they had approached almost within striking distance the younger of the fighters made a rush. He received a blow on the head that would have crushed a man's skull. It scarcely staggered him. Then his long arms wrapped themselves about his opponent's neck and holding his antagonist tightly clasped, he began biting with fierce energy, not a steady gripping bite, but furious, tearing gnashings, which ripped skin and flesh from face and shoulders and chest.

"The older gorilla was taken by surprise at this sudden rush and change of tactics by his opponent. But though at a disadvantage, he was too old a fighter to be easily dismayed. First he secured a grip on his opponent's throat, and straining every muscle, tried to tear himself free from the infuriated grasp of the younger beast. He might as easily have broken a steel cable as the strangling hold of his enraged opponent. Then the older fighter relaxed his grip on the other's throat, and placing both his big human-like paws on the younger's face tried to force his head back.

"For what was probably half a minute, but seemed an hour, the two semi-human shapes stood there putting forth every energy. At last the younger fighter's face was within two inches of his opponent's head. The younger gorilla made a supreme effort, twisted his head suddenly and before his opponent could dodge had fastened his teeth in a death grip on the throat of the veteran fighter.

"Up to this time the battle had been fought in silence, but as the old gorilla gave up the contest and felt the teeth of his antagonist sinking deeper and deeper into his throat, the pain was greater than he could bear. He broke into a wailing cry that echoed through the jungle. I have heard the death cry of many animals, but never a call like that of the dying gorilla. For it was not like an animal, but the wail of a man in overmastering pain, a choking half sob, half shriek. Again and again it rose up. I lifted my rifle and then lowered it, for I could not help the old gorilla, and to meddle in that fight with only my light rifle meant my own death. The half human wail broke out again, but while I was standing irresolute it ceased. The fierce hard fighting, hard-biting younger gorilla had been working his way through his antagonist's throat and had at last bitten through the wind pipe. The great fight was over, and the veteran of many similar contests had met the fate he had meted out to others.

"I watched the younger ape, as if fascinated, while he wreaked his revenge on the body of his dead enemy. Then with a start, it occurred to me that I would suffer a similar fate if I stayed in that vicinity. But I had no real cause of anxiety. The gorilla had other matters to think of. The last glimpse I had of the conqueror was as, with the glare of battle still in his eyes and covered from head to foot with his own blood and that of his enemy, he marched off in triumph toward her for whom he had fought so desperately and so well."

Story of a Slave.

To be bound hand and foot for years by the chain of disease is the worst form of slavery. George D. Williams, of Manchester, Mich., tells how such a slave was made free. He says "My wife has been so helpless for five years that she could not turn over in bed alone. After using two bottles of Electric Bitters she is wonderfully improved and able to do her own work." This remedy for female diseases quickly cures nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, headache, backache, fainting and dizzy spells. This miracle working medicine is a godsend to weak, sickly, run down people. Every bottle guaranteed. Only 50 cents. Sold by W. A. Schrieter, Druggist.

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE ON FILING PETITION TO SELL LAND.

State of Minnesota }
} SS
County of Red Lake }

In Probate Court
Special Term
Oct. 11th, 1900.

In the matter of the estate of Ovila Gervais, deceased. On reading and filing the petition of Adela Gervais, executrix of said estate setting forth the amount of personal estate that has come into her hands, the disposition thereof, and how much remains undisposed of; the amount of debts outstanding against said deceased, as far as the same can be ascertained; the legacies unpaid, and a description of all the real estate, (excepting the homestead), of which said deceased died seized, and the condition and value of the respective portions or lots thereof; the persons interested in said estate with their residences, and praying that license be to her granted to sell so much of said real estate as is necessary.

And it appearing by said petition that there is not sufficient personal estate in the hands of said Executrix to pay said debts, legacies and expenses of administration, and that it is necessary, for the payment of said debts, legacies or expenses, to sell so much of said real estate as is necessary to pay said debts.

It is therefore ordered that all persons interested in said estate appear before this court on Monday the 12th day of Nov. A. D. 1900, at ten o'clock a. m., at the court house in Red Lake Falls, in said county, then and there to show cause, (if any there be) why license should not be granted to said Adela Gervais to sell so much real estate of said deceased as shall be necessary to pay such debts, legacies and expenses.

And it is further ordered that this order shall be published once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the Gazette, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Red Lake Falls in said county.

Dated at Red Lake Falls, Minn., the 11th day of Oct., A. D. 1900.

By the Court,
(Seal) J. T. KNIGHT,
o11-n1 Judge of Probate.

To Gervanl Orsalíne:

You are hereby notified that on the 9th day of May, A. D. 1891, in proceedings to enforce the payment of delinquent taxes pursuant to that certain real estate judgment, which was entered in the District Court in and for the County of Polk, in the Fourteenth Judicial District, in the State of Minnesota, on the 21st day of March, A. D., 1891, the following described piece or parcel of land now situated in Red Lake county, (formerly Polk county,) State of Minnesota to-wit:

W½ NW¼ and W½ SW¼, section 13, town 152, range 44,

was bid in to the State to satisfy the amount for which it was judged liable in said judgment, interests and costs, for the sum of thirty dollars and sixty cents; that the above described real estate has become and now is the Absolute Property of the State;

That on the 12th day of May, A. D., 1900, the above described real estate was sold by the undersigned County Auditor of Polk county, as directed by the State Auditor, in accordance with Section 101 of Chapter 11 of the general Statutes of 1878, and the several acts amendatory thereto, for the sum of one hundred nine dollars and sixty five cents; that the amount required to redeem said piece or parcel of land from such sale (exclusive of the costs to accrue on this notice) is one hundred nine dollars and sixty five cents with interest at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum, from said 12th day of May, A. D., 1900, until such redemption is made, and that the time for redemption of said piece or parcel of land from such sale will expire sixty days after the service of this notice, and proof thereof has been filed in the office of the county auditor of said county of Polk.

Witness my hand and official seal this 20th day of September, A. D. 1900.

John Gleason,
County Auditor, Polk County,
Minnesota.

By N. A. Hoffard, deputy.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of sixteen hundred fifty one and 53-100 dollars, which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by Pascal Toupin, and Lena Toupin, his wife, mortgagors, to James W. Massey, mortgagee, bearing date the ninth day of June, 1883, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the register of deeds in and for the county of Polk and State of Minnesota, on the 13th day of June, 1883, at two o'clock p. m., in book "O" of Mortgages, on pages 7 to 9.

That at the time of the giving of said mortgage, the premises therein described and thereby conveyed, were situated in Polk county, Minnesota, but that thereafter the lands therein described, together with other lands, were set off and organized into Red Lake county, Minnesota; and that the record of said mortgage was transcribed to page 1 of Book 18 of Mortgages, in the Registry of Deeds of said Red Lake County, Minnesota.

Included in the amount above declared to be due upon said mortgage, is $109.53, being for taxes upon said lands paid by the mortgagee, and interest on the amounts paid for such taxes.

And no action or proceeding having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof,

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz:

Swan Larson came home last week from Gentilly, where he has been threshing.

Magus Johnson and wife left Monday for their old home, in Olmstead county, southern part of this state.

Frank Jeffers was here last Saturday, speaking in Green's schoolhouse in the evening. Mr. Jeffers will get most all the votes cast for that office, from this township.

Samuel Gibeau, Frank Jeffers and L. J. Johnson were here Saturday and Sunday, stiring up politics, which can now be heard every where.

Do not get scared if your heart troubles you. Most likely you suffer from indigestion. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat and gives the worn out stomach perfect rest. It is the only preparation known that completely digests all classes of food; that is why it cures the worst cases of indigestion and stomach troubles after everything else has failed. It may be taken in all conditions and cannot help but do good. W. A. Schreiter.

Garnes.

J. Sells, of Wyandotte, was in Garnes Saturday.

S. Gibeau, of Red Lake Falls, passed through here Saturday.

Michael Phalen and A. LaComb drove to St. Hilaire Munday, on business.

Two teams started Saturday for McIntosh, for goods for E. J. Gjeroe's store.

George Ethier was doing business in Wyandotte Monday.

Frank Jeffers, J. L. Johnson, Samuel Gibeau were in Garnes Friday. Mr. Jeffers delivered a speech in the evening. Mr. Johnson also made a few remarks. There was a good crowd turned out to hear them and every body was well pleased. They left Saturday for Equality, where Mr. Jeffers will speak in the Lynch schoolhouse.

River Falls.

L. R. Bramsness came home from Red Lake Falls on Saturday.

Mr. Mue went to St. Hilaire on Sunday to attend the service held there in the United Norwegian Lutheran church.

Barney Madden, of Wyandotte, went to St. Hilaire Monday, to take the train for the county seat.

Erick Larson went to St. Hilaire on Saturday. On his return he was accompanied by four ladies, giving him a fair load in these muddy roads.

N. Halvorson and P. Anderson, of Wyandotte, went to St. Hilaire Monday.

Mr. Bramsness left for the county seat on Monday to take his place as juror in the Cunningham case.

C. Christianson, of Wyandotte, went to St. Hilaire on Monday.

Several teams from the east went to St. Hilaire for lumber, Monday.

Mr. Felander, of Wyandotte, has been seen on the road nearly every second day all fall, with a load of lumber.

Mr. Bramsness Jr. is running the woodcutting business at home with circular saw and engine, while his father is absent at Red Lake Falls as a juror.

Aug. Swenson has not got his grain threshed on account of the last days' rain.

Mr. Roy went over to the East side Monday to take a look at his grain on the Haugen farm. He brought with him a fine fanning mill upon his return.

This is the season when mothers are alarmed on account of croup. It is quickly cured by One Minute Cough Cure, which children like to take. W. A. Schreiter.

It Saved His Leg.

P. A. Danforth, of LaGrange, Ga., suffered intensely for six months with a frightful running sore on his leg, but writes that Bucklen's Arnica Salve wholly cured it in ten days. For Ulcers Wounds, Burns, Boils Pains, or Piles it's the best salve in the world. Cure guaranteed. Only 25c. Sold by W. A. Schrieter, Druggist.

Bismarck's Iron Nerve

Was the result of his splendid health. Indomitable will and tremendous energy are not found where Stomach, Liver, Kidneys and Bowels are out of order. If you want these qualities and the success they bring, use Dr. King's New Life Pills. They develop every power of brain and body. Only 25c at W. A. Schrioter's drug store.

Emardville.

The members of Imamuels Scandinavian Lutheran congregation had a meeting Monday and decided to have their church finished at once.

The members of Imamuels Scandinavian Lutheran congregation have donated five per cent. of their wheat crop toward finishing up their church, which, when finished will be a credit to this community.

Peder Anderson died Wednesday morning at 3 o'clock at a ripe old age, having reach the age of 85 years.

Supervisors Andrew Johnson and A. E. Sorensen drove to Red Lake Falls last Thursday to take part in that big Republican rally there that evening. They are very enthusiastic over the result and say that J. Adam Bede is one of the best campaign speakers they ever heard. The music by the bands, and especially the Crookston band, was fine, also the singing of the Glee Club. All in all, it was a time not soon to be forgotten.

Peter A. Iverson closed a two months' term of school in district No. 228 Thursday and left for McIntosh, where he is to teach a term of 6 months.

Nels Holberg, candidate for register of deeds, will no doubt receive all the votes in this vicinity. He is the right man for the office. Vote for him!

J. B. O'Brien, republican nominee for superintendent of schools; is the best qualified man on the ticket for that office. Remember him at the polls.

Odsion Gonthiera is now fixing up his trot power, and intends to start threshing right away with it.

To Erick Nelson.
No. 1450

You are hereby notified that on the 9th day of May, A. D. 1891, in proceedings to enforce the payment of delinquent taxes pursuant to that certain real estate tax judgment which was entered in the District Court in and for the county of Polk in the 14th Judicial District of the State of Minnesota, on the 21st day of March A. D. 1891, the following described piece and parcel of land which is now situated in Red Lake County, formerly Polk County in the state of Minnesota, to wit: S. W. ¼, Section 4, Town 152, Range 44, was sold to the state to satisfy the amount for which it was adjudged liable in said judgment, interests and costs, for the sum of Thirty one Dollars and one cent, and that on the 11th day of May, 1891 the right of the state acquired by said sale was assigned for the sum of Thirty one Dollars and one cent; that the amount required to redeem said piece and parcel of land from such sale (exclusive of the costs to accrue upon this notice) is Thirty one Dollars and one cent, and interest on said amount at the rate of 12 per cent per annum from said 11th day of May A. D. 1891, until such redemption is made, and that the time for redemption of such piece and parcel of land from such sale will expire sixty days after the service of this notice, and proof thereof has been filed in the office of the County Auditer of said Polk County.

Witness my hand and official seal this 15th day of October A. D. 1900.

Has Voted For President Nineteen Times.

In the third ward in this city on election day, was cast a ballot, which possesses a peculiar interest. It was the intelligent vote of, Nelson Bourdon, aged 93 years, who went into the booth, without spectacles, without aid from any one, and cast his ballot, which registered the nineteenth consecutive vote he has cast for president of the United States, every one of which has been for the Republican nominee. He was just twenty-one when he voted for the first time. Mr. Bourdon is in many ways a remarkable man, and his interest in affairs of mankind continue unabated. Daily he reads the newspapers, and is well informed on current events. His faculties remain unimpaired, his hearing is good, and he does not use spectacles. His ambition is to live to be one hundred years old, and there is every reason to believe he will exceed that age, as his general health is perfect.

Thief River Falls and the Diminished Reservation.

As per his agreement prior to election, Congressman Eddy met the business men of Thief River Falls Monday night to discuss ways and means looking towards the opening of the Red Lake reservation lying adjacent to that city, and comprising about thirty townships, eleven of which are within the borders of Red Lake county. A hot fight was made at Thief River Falls on Eddy. The News says that everything else was lost sight of, and the congressional fight was the centre of interest. The result was that Daly received 185 to Eddy's 147, whereas two years ago the votes stood Eddy 131, Ringdal 74. This increase of 111 votes for the fusion nominee accounts largely for the increase of Daly's vote over Ringdal's, nevertheless Congressman Eddy is ready to carry out his ante-election pledges and use his influence to assist in securing what the people up there want. It is generally conceded that when this reservation is opened, Thief River Falls will be so located as to make feasible the gratification of her ambition to become a county seat. The people of Red Lake Falls stands ready to work hand in hand with Thief River Falls, if she will curb her ambition sufficiently not to ask for too big a slice of Red Lake county as she is now constituted, when the time for conference comes. The Gazette believes it would be the part of wisdom for the Board of Trade of this city and the Commercial Club of Thief River Falls to get together and agree upon lines that will be mutually satisfactory. This can be easily done, for from what we learn of the situation, the interests of the two cities are identical.

Has Voted For President Nineteen Times.

In the third ward in this city on election day, was cast a ballot, which possesses a peculiar interest. It was the intelligent vote of, Nelson Bourdon, aged 93 years, who went into the booth, without spectacles, without aid from any one, and cast his ballot, which registered the nineteenth consecutive vote he has cast for president of the United States, every one of which has been for the Republican nominee. He was just twenty-one when he voted for the first time. Mr. Bourdon is in many ways a remarkable man, and his interest in affairs of mankind continue unabated. Daily he reads the newspapers, and is well informed on current events. His faculties remain unimpaired, his hearing is good, and he does not use spectacles. His ambition is to live to be one hundred years old, and there is every reason to believe he will exceed that age, as his general health is perfect.

Thief River Falls and the Diminished Reservation.

As per his agreement prior to election, Congressman Eddy met the business men of Thief River Falls Monday night to discuss ways and means looking towards the opening of the Red Lake reservation lying adjacent to that city, and comprising about thirty townships, eleven of which are within the borders of Red Lake county. A hot fight was made at Thief River Falls on Eddy. The News says that everything else was lost sight of, and the congressional fight was the centre of interest. The result was that Daly received 185 to Eddy's 147, whereas two years ago the vote stood Eddy 151, Ringdal 74. This increase of 111 votes for the fusion nominee accounts largely for the increase of Daly's vote over Ringdal's. Nevertheless Congressman Eddy is ready to carry out his ante-election pledges and use his influence to assist in securing what the people up there want. It is generally conceded that when this reservation is opened, Thief River Falls will be so located as to make feasible the gratification of her ambition to become a county seat. The people of Red Lake Falls stands ready to work hand in hand with Thief River Falls if she will curb her ambition sufficiently not to ask for too big a slice of Red Lake county as she is now constituted, when the time for conference comes. The Gazette believes it would be the part of wisdom for the Board of Trade of this city and the Commercial Club of Thief River Falls to get together and agree upon lines that will be mutually satisfactory. This can be easily done, for from what we learn of the situation, the interests of the two cities are identical.

NEWS IN MINNESOTA

The condition of Senator Davis continues to improve.

John Conrad, aged 74, a pioneer of Faribault county, is dead.

The condition of Senator C. K. Davis is more favorable than it has been for a long time.

Minnesota university defeated Illinois university in a football game at Minneapolis Saturday.

Charles H. Williams, one of the pioneers who came to St. Paul in the territorial days and assisted largely in the development of the city, is dead.

A coroner's jury at Royalton has found three Christian Scientists guilty of criminal negligence for not calling a physician to visit a sick child who subsequently died.

Senator Davis is greatly improved. It is now confidently believed by the physicians that he has passed the danger point and that his complete recovery is but a matter of time

The secretary of the interior has ordered patented to the Northern Pacific Railroad company the list of lands selected under its grant, embracing 2,219 acres in the Duluth district.

Corrigan, McKinney & Co., the big mining and vessel firm of Cleveland, has secured control of the newly discovered iron ore property on the eastern edge of the Mesaba range.

Captain W. A. Thompson, who is in charge of Mississippi river improvement work between Fountain City and Cassville, reports an expenditure during the season now closing of $242,500.

Shipments of lumber from the Duluth market for two weeks have been 41,000,000 feet, the largest record ever made in a similar period. One cargo of 1,250,000 feet and many of 1,000,000 or over were taken.

A bank book holding between its leaves $250 in cash and $50 in checks, belonging to the Russell Coffee House, Minneapolis, was stolen from Miss Carrie Dexter, the cashier of that restaurant, while she stood in the Security bank.

Dr. John Wright, the well known Episcopal rector and Biblical scholar of St. Paul, was seriously injured last Wednesday in a railroad wreck near Pipestone. He will probably recover, unless his internal injuries prove more severe than they are supposed to be.

Eddie and Norman Wartenburg, aged 13 and 8 years, respectively, sons of a prominent farmer residing near New Paynesville, were alighting from a wagon with a loaded gun, when it was accidentally discharged, hitting the younger and instantly killing him.

The largest cargo of hard coal ever brought up the lakes is on the way to Duluth on the steamship Edsborn; 7,680 net tons. This is the way coal companies feel about the winter's supply, and receipts will probably be quite large during November and possibly early December.

The official close of navigation on the Mississippi occurs this week when the government lights will be extinguished. Though there was low water for a time, the season on the whole has been a good one. The number of boats passing Winona to date has been 4,082; barges, 1,893, and rafts, 1,147.

Betters on a 5,000 majority for Congressman James A. Tawney in the First district are still on the uneasy seat. With official reports received from five out of the ten counties in the district the Republicans claim a majority of 5,029, while the Democrats insist it will be only 4,997.

Logs for the Duluth mills that operate on railroad timber are coming in as fast as ever, the lateness of the season having no effect on business. The Duluth and Iron Range is bringing in most of them. Alger, Smith & Co. and the Scott-Graff Lumber company mills have been running steadily since last January.

Five years ago, while hunting, Alexander Samnan of Akron accidentally discharged a shotgun, inflicting a wound that necessitated the amputation of his left arm. Wednesday last, while operating a corn shredder, his remaining hand was caught in the machinery and crushed so badly that it was amputated above the wrist.

The season just closing has been the banner year in St. Paul as far as public improvements are concerned. Approximately $844,000 have been expended by the citizens towards beautifying and adorning the streets and boulevards, laying sewers and water mains, opening, grading and paving streets, and increasing the system of pleasure grounds.

Soren Johnson, a farmer living in the country about 20 miles south of Willmar, was found dead by the roadside. Johnson was driving home from Willmar, when his team ran away, throwing him from the wagon and inflicting injuries which caused his death. He was a veteran in the First Minnesota and was one of the original settlers in Kandiyohi county.

BIG SUM MISSING.

Wisconsin Express Agent Gets From $18,000 to $25,000.

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 10.—John A. Burr, Jr., night transfer agent of the United States Express company at Green Bay, Wis., is missing. Burr is accused by General Superintendent E. S. Averill of the express company of having appropriated between $14,000 and $25,000. Superintendent Averill has been investigating Burr's accounts for the past two days and what was at first thought to be a comparatively small shortage, turns out to reach the amount named above. The United States Express company has announced that a reward of $500 and 10 per cent of all money recovered will be paid for Burr's apprehension.

WHALEBACK BARGES

TRAINS OF NEW BOATS FOR THE MISSISSIPPI RIVER.

Floating Giants That Draw Only 26 Inches of Water When Carrying 300 Tons of Grain—Maximum of Speed and Strength.

A train going down the Mississippi at the rate of ten miles an hour is the novel sight which will be presented to the admiring gaze of the dwellers along the banks. If the Indians could have seen this strange craft, they would have thought the spirit of evil himself was on board, but we of the nineteenth century are becoming used to such wonders. When Alexander McDougall announced that he would run a river train on the Mississippi 730 feet long with a powerful engine in front and two great cars behind, people were astonished, but they did not doubt for an instant his ability to do as he said. McDougall is the man who gave the whaleback to the great lakes and revolutionized the traffic in that part of the country. He has therefore all the experience necessary to carry out his latest plan.

ALEXANDER M'DOUGALL

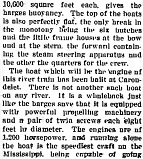
Though it looks so much like a railroad train, this wonder of the great river is a fleet of boats. It is indestructible. It cannot strike a rock and sink. It can carry 7,000 tons of freight, and when loaded to the fullness of its capacity it will draw but 26 inches of water, less than the draft of a steamboat flying light.

This new invention is expected to make St. Louis one of the greatest grain ports in the world. It will increase the growth of the cities along the banks of the river, and its effects will be widespread as far as the development of the country is concerned.

The new whalebacks of the river are great steel hulls. Their length is 265 feet, their beam 40 feet, and their hulls are 14 feet deep. Flying light they draw 16 inches of water, and with every 300 tons added to their cargo they displace an additional inch, making the draft 26 inches when the barge is carrying 3,000 tons of grain. A small fleet of steamboats could not carry so much in the same time.

Their distinctive feature is their excessive flatness. They are, in fact, toboggans which run on the surface of the water. The great area of the hulls, 10,600 square feet each, gives the barges buoyancy. The top of the boats is also perfectly flat, the only break in the monotony being the six hatches and the little frame houses at the bow and at the stern, the forward containing the steam steering apparatus and the other the quarters for the crew.

The boat which will be the engine of this river train has been built at Carondelet. There is not another such boat on any river. It is a whaleback just like the barges save that it is equipped with powerful propelling machinery and a pair of twin screws each eight feet in diameter. The engines are of 1,200 horsepower, and running alone the boat is the speediest craft on the Mississippi, being capable of going down stream at the rate of 20 miles an hour. The pilot of the engine will steer his own boat only. At the stern of the first barge behind there is another pilothouse and a second pilot and so on the third boat, each pilot steering his own craft and adding to the unique detail of this new plan of utilizing the Mississippi.



WHALEBACK BARGE.

Captain McDougall himself is no theorist, but a hard worker. He spends most of his time among his men clad in overalls or in shirt sleeves, and every detail of his new invention has been made under his own eyes. In this way he has insured the maximum of speed and strength.

Dropsy

starting in the feet or ankles comes from a weak or diseased heart—a heart that cannot keep up the circulation. The blood then settles in the lower limbs where the watery portions ooze out into surrounding tissues causing bloat and swelling. The heart must be strengthened and built up before the dropsy can be cured to stay; and the best of all heart medicines is Dr. Miles' Heart Cure.

"My heart was weak, and it caused my limbs to bloat so that I could not get into my clothes. Six bottles of Dr. Miles' Heart Cure made my heart strong and the bloat all went away."

NEWS OF THE WEEK

POLITICAL NEWS.

Iowa has voted for biennial elections.

W. A. Clark has secured a majority of the Montana legislature.

The official count will be necessary to decide the contest in Kentucky.

It is said that Senator Wolcott will succeed Hitchcock as secretary of the interior.

Senator Hanna says loyalty to the flag was the chief factor in the recent campaign.

As a result of the election in Idaho Senator Shoup, Rep., will be succeeded by a Fusionist.

The Republicans control the Nebraska legislature, which will elect two United States senators.

The next senate will consist of 49 Republicans, 36 Democrats and Independents, with 5 seats in doubt.

Latest returns in the Minnesota gubernatorial contest indicate that Van Sant will have a plurality of about 5,000.

The fight on Quay in Pennsylvania has resulted in giving the senator a majority of only three in the new legislature.

John G. Woolley, Prohibition candidate for president, estimates that 500,000 votes were cast for him at the recent election.

The Republicans have elected about 200 members of the lower house of congress, a gain of a dozen seats over the last congress.

Mr. Bryan has issued a statement concerning the election in which he declares the result was a surprise to him and hard to explain. He declares the fight must go on.

A Republican unanimity unique in the history of political elections in the West is shown by the complete count of Tuesday's ballots at Batavia, Ills. One precinct gave its entire vote of 575 to McKinley.

Almost complete returns give McKinley a plurality in Nebraska of 8,000. The Republican state ticket is apparently elected by from 1,500 to 2,000. Republicans elect two congressmen and Fusionists four.

McKinley and Roosevelt have received 292 electoral votes to 155 for Bryan and Stevenson. The following states were carried by the Republicans: Connecticut, California, Delaware, Illinois, Iowa, Indiana, Kansas, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, North Dakota, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Oregon, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Vermont, Wisconsin, West Virginia, Washington and Wyoming.

Red Lake Falls Gazette.

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER

– BY –

PHIL. A. KAUFER.

Published weekly, Thursday evening, and entered as second-class matter in the postoffice at Red Lake Falls.

Subscription, $1.00 per Year

☞All matter for publication in The Gazette must be handed in on or before Tuesday 6 p. m.

THE OFFICIAL RETUNRS.

The Gazette this week publishes the official returns of Red Lake county, as recorded by the official canvassing board. The figures are absolutely correct, and present a table that will be extremely handy for reference in the future. True, the state blue book gives the returns, but only on state officers, while in this table is found the complete report on all officers voted upon, from president down to coroner. It is interesting to compare the votes with that of two years ago, and below we give a few figures:

Eustis, 1898	422.
Lind, 1898,	1084
Van Sant,	554.
Lind,	1535.
Ringdal, 1898,	832
Eddy, 1898,	735.
Daly,	1222.
Eddy,	879.
Ives, 1898,	767.
Myran, 1898	806.
Swanson,	994
Rapp,	748.

A comparison of the vote received in Red Lake Falls city by Harry Ives, two years ago, and Charles G. Rapp, this year, reveals the interesting fact that Rapp polled just five more than Ives, the vote being:

Myran,	215.
Ives,	90.
This year,
Rapp,	95,
Swanson,	231.

James Meehan's vote in the three wards of this city was seventy-one.

The Republican vote in this county may be placed at 775, several state officers having polled over that number, and several only two less than that number. The Fusion vote may be placed at 1275, on the same basis. Looking over these figures we realize what a sickly run was made by the great Michael J. Daly, of whose vote the Courier is so proud. Was it the Courier's influence that gave Meighan, the Populist nominee for Lieutenant Governor forty nine votes more than were polled for the great Michael, after all the energetic lying that was done in his behalf: was it the Courier's influence that gave Neary, fusion nominee for secretary of state, forty seven more votes than the Courier's Mike? Was it the Courier's influence that hoisted Koener, fusion nominee for state treasurer, and Saunders, fusion nominee for attorney general, away up over Mike? We verily believe it. The Courier said but little in regard to these other candidates, and they thus escaped with a better vote than that accorded the Courier's apostle. Now tell us, Frank, didn't the vision of the postoffice in the dim distance—say a year or two—have a little to do with your fiery attachment for Daly? So we have heard, from your relatives, who ought to know. In the face of this, no wonder the 4,800 plurality piled up for Hon. Frank M. Eddy burned and tore at your heart strings. Mike should have paid the Courier to keep still. If he had, he would not have run behind every state nominee on the fusion ticket. Moral—if you want to run behind your ticket, hire the Cur to support you.

The campaign is over, Daly defeated, and Frank and Charlie find their designs on the postoffice gone up like mist before the morning sun. These facts and not the special edition of The Gazette, are no doubt the cause of the diarrhoea of words with which the dear boys last week embellished the "Cur."

Real wintry weather—but the dry atmosphere of Minnesota nullifies its effects—as you have heard.

SENATOR DAVIS' ILLNESS.

The St. Paul Globe pays the following beautiful tribute to Cushman K. Davis:

Regardless of party political division, the people of St. Paul, and, indeed of the entire state, are deeply concerned in the health of Senator Davis. The alarmist reports which have been given currency to may have little or no foundation: but the health of the senior senator from this state is known to have been poor for some months past. And the people accordingly entertain feelings of the gravest concern and of the most cordial hopefulness regarding his future health.

A long lifetime of the highest form of public usefulness is surely not destined to be brought to an end at this time, as Senator Davis stands on the threshold of the realization of the highest honors possible in American political life. The people of the United States have only learned to know Senator Davis during the past two years or so. The events of the Spanish-American war brought him into general attention and enabled the entire nation to discover in him a type of the most exalted form of statesmanship which has been revealed in the political history of the country.

The discovery is bound to bring its reward as time progresses. Minnesota has always known the splendid merits of its premier statesman. Its has tendered to him in succession every post in the public service to which it calls the best brain and the best heart of its people. It will delight to honor him till he withdraws from concern in public affairs, no matter how long or how short a period of time may elapse before such a regrettable event occurs. It cannot afford to lose him at this time when he is in the very prime of his grand intellectuality. His people love him too well for the admirable personal qualities they know him to possess to regard his illness with other than feelings of the most intense sorrow. They look for his speedy recovery, and they regret deeply that he should find himself ill.

The Gazette insinuates that we looked at its day book and thereby learned of the $23 deal. Oh! no, Philip; your foreman volunteered the information while visiting the Courier office. You should gag him Philip if you would not have him reveal any deeds of darkness you may desire to perpetrate—Courier.

In answer to the above, I desire to state that I did inform the Courier that the Republican campaign committee had ordered Bede posters, and Elmer Adams had ordered circulars of The Gazette, the pay for which amounted to $23. I did not state that The Gazette had received $23 for supporting Eddy, nor make any statement that any man could construe into such an assertion unless he was dishonest, and desired to decieve.

Signed: Jos. H. Koke.

G. A. Morrison, general overseer of the Indians at Red Lake agency reports matters progressing favorably at all points in his district. The 'Cross Lakers, as the band is known at the narrows between the two arms of the Red Lake, have now taken kindly to the idea of patronizing the school built for them by the government. The rainfall in the Red Lake district has been greater, he thinks, than in any other portion of the state. The lake itself with its area of nearly 50 square miles is from two and a half to three feet higher now than they were ever known to be by any of the inhabitants, red or white, now living. The Indians have no traditions that tell of a higher stage of water than now exists.

The Courier offers to pay us fifteen cents—cash. Hum! We'd prefer to first be paid what you are owing before you talk cash. This braggadocio about paying fifteen cents cash is like the fellow who whistled when he went by the cemetery—to keep up his courage.

Van Sant is elected governor of Minnesota. The full state ticket and seven congressmen are Republican.

The Mission at St. Mary's Church.

The mission at St. Mary's church, which is being given by the Benedictine fathers, P. Augustine, of Moorhead, and P. Alfred of Duluth, opened Sunday at 8 o'clock, a. m., with early mass. The order of exercises for the balance of the week is announced, as follows: Early mass every morning at 5.45, with English sermon; mass at 10 a.m., with German sermon. Way of the Cross at 3 p.m., with instructions for the children, and Benediction every evening at 7:30, with English sermon. The services have been well attended.

Both Father Alfred and Father Augustine are very well qualified for the work of a mission, the object of which is to enkindle religious fervor and reawakening. The fame of Father Augustine as an evangelist is widespread, and he has had years of experience in missionary work, although he is the regular pastor of the Moorhead congregation. Father Augustine possesses rare oratorical abilities, and his exhortations are the work of a genius, an artist. No one can paint more beautiful pictures to enkindle high ideals, and no one can bring stronger or more effective comparisons, in the effort to illustrate the enormity of sin. His heartfelt and emotional appeals, which appear to be inspired by love and solicitude for his fellowmen, often move his hearers to tears. A broad charity and kindliness prevades his zeal, and so close is the attention of his audience, that when he pauses, not a breath disturbes the stillness that prevails. Father Alfred has also delivered several English sermons. His methods are quite different from those of Father Augustine, but equally effective. The strong points of his sermons are their thouroughness, the clearness with which every point is brought out, and their scholarly and classic beauty. They have wielded a potent influence upon his hearers, who must be impressed with the sincerity of the speaker and his apparantly inexhaustible mine of theological wisdom.

The conferences for the young ladies, married ladies, and young men and married men, are for the purpose of giving especial instruction for the different states of life. The conferences for the ladies have already been held, and were largely attended. That for the gentlemen will be held Sunday afternoon.

The mission has attracted much attention, and the evening exercises are attended by members of all denominations.

Harry Currie and William Young, who live up in the Rainy River country, arrived in Crookston on Thursday evening, having come via Winnipeg, and left next morning for Bemidji. They brought with them the election returns from the precincts of Le Claire and Port Island, their sole mission at Bemidji being to turn the ballots over to the auditor of Beltrami county. These two precincts cast only 11 votes two years ago, but this election there were fully 100 voters there—about 90 of whom are republicans, according to the returns as reported by Mr. Currie. The cost of getting the returns from these precincts amounts to about $220.

Query? Is it legal to carry American election returns through foreign territory?

John Savard left for Red Lake Monday, where he will practice the tonsorial art for the lumber jacks in the Thief River Falls Lumber Company's camps this winter.

Both makers and circulators of counterfeits commit fraud. Honest men will not deceive you into buying worthless counterfeits of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. The original is infallible for curing piles, injuries, eczema and skin diseases.

H. H. Zaiser has just completed a new barn on his fine farm, the dimensions of which are 32x64, and the cost of which is $500. Mr. Zaiser has a farm which will be worth, before five years have elapsed, $50 an acre. His success as a farmer is no less marked than his popularity as a banker.

Joe Dwyer last week shot an eagle with a 22 rifle. The bird is a magnificent specimen and measures six feet from tip to tip of its outspread wings. He has turned it over to a taxidermist. Specimens of eagles are rare in this section, and Mr. Dwyer considers this quite a prize.

The Rev. Edgar C. White was in the city for a couple of days this week, a guest of the Rev S. J. S. Moore. The gentlemen were college chums fifteen years ago at Muskingum College, New Concord, Ohio, later taking the three years' course at the Allegheny Theological Seminary. Mr. White is now pastor of the Presbyterian church at Stephen, and the gentlemen like to get together occasionally and exchange reminiscences.

When returning from St. Mary's church after the service Sunday evening, Miss Maria O'Brien met with a painful accident, which went within an ace of being a severe fracture of her leg. A loose plank on the side walk, where 5th street intersects Kretzschmar av, became dislodged, and she stepped into the opening thus made. She was caught just in time by her brother W. P. O'Brien, and a serious accident was averted. She was confined to the house for several days by the severe lameness ensuing.

A card party was given by Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Harren Thursday evening last, to celebrate their sixteenth wedding anniversary. Eight tables were used, and the animated game was continued until 11:30, when an elaborate and refined repast was served. The lady's head prize, a beautiful china salad dish, was won by Mrs. W. A. Schreiter, who had scored eighteen games. The booby prize, a bon bon dish, was awarded to Mrs. Samuel Gibeau, who had won the least number of games—six. E. D. Bray carried off the gentlemen's head prize, a match box, he having twenty games to his credit; the booby prize, a jumping jack, went to Adam Zeh, whose score card showed just four punches. Many beautiful gifts were received by the host and hostess, articles of choice statuary, cut glass and silverware and china, as tokens of the high esteem in which they are held by their friends.

Geo. Earnest.

The last pay day at the office of the Red Lake Falls Lumber Co. saw several thousand dollars pass into the hands of the employes, for less than a months' work. The pay-roll averaged well up for the time the mill was in operation.

Mrs. H. K. Lutz, who has been visiting in the city the past two weeks, left for Crookston Friday, accompanied by her mother, Mrs. B. Zaiser. From there she proceeded to her home at Merriam Park, while Mrs. Zaiser remained to visit with friends and relatives.

Manager Johnson, of the Red Lake Falls Milling Company, got word yesterday that the Warren Manufacturing Company's mill at Warren was destroyed by fire Tuesday night. The mill had a capacity of 250 barrels of flour daily. It was well insured, but will not likely be rebuilt, as the property was involved in litigation.

Conrad Lajambe was in from Lambert Saturday, and the Republicans of the city were congratulating him on the showing made by their party in his precinct where he is a recognized leader. Mr. Lajambe is preparing for his winter's work, hauling supplies to the lumber camps. He has had considerable experience in this work, is particularly well equipped, and The Gazette would recommend him to those needing supplies hauled this winter.

A. Horovitz returned from Warren, Friday, where Horovitz Bros. are conducting a clothing store. The city of Warren has an ordinance providing for a license of $35 for these temporary enterprises, and an attempt was made to collect the amount from this firm. A controversy arose, as a result of which Horovitz Bros. are threatening to bring an action for $3,000 damages against Warren for malicious prosecution and damage to their reputation.

The saw mill, which started on its fall run on the 20th of September, closed down Saturday, having sawed up all the logs available. The cold spell coming in Monday would have necessitated the shut-down anyway. The fall run has been a good, steady one, and taken altogether, the work for this season has been good, and compares favorably with the record of the other mills in this section. The planer will continue to run for some time, much to the satisfaction of the twenty men employed there.

Eddy and the Diminished Red Lake Reservation.

Mr. Eddy says that he will probably introduce a bill at the coming session of congress providing for the opening of that portion of the reservation to settlement, as the demand for homes is very great and the land in question is not being used by the Indians. There is room for about twelve hundred settlers on the strip which congress will be asked to throw open, and it is composed of very choice agricultural lands.

On August 25, 1900, my red and white cow, with horns, strayed away. I will pay a liberal reward for her return, and will pay cost of her keeping.

Vic's Letter.

Tarlac, P. I. Sept. 8, 1900.

Ed. Gazette:—

It is with pleasure that I will drop you a few lines to let you know of a few things that are going on in this part of the world.

We are having a few skirmishes now and then to keep in practice but otherwise there is not much going on. The 15th Infantry and the 8th Infantry, who have just come over from the States, are being inaugurated into fighting on the south line. Already they have lost almost as many men as the 4th Cavalry has during it's entire stay here, although their time on the Island dates back to only a few days.

We were paid on the 22nd and on the 23rd were called out to a little town called San Muigel, which is about five miles south of here. It was reported that a band of ladrones, or thieves, of about 200 strong were to attack that town, which is garrisoned by one squad, of eight men of company C of the 12th Infantry. Ernest Vian, formerly of Red Lake Falls, is a member of this company of the 12th. We rode out of this place, about eighty-five strong, to secretly reinforce the San Muigel garrison. It was about dusk when we left and raining very hard. Scouts were put out in front of the column, about twenty-five yards ahead, and when we reached a point two miles from Tarlac the scouts passed back the message that a native was seen with a rifle in his possession. We could not imagine what was up when the bugle blew the command "Fight on foot action front." And you cannot imagine what little time it took for the men to turn their horses over to the horse holder, and draw their carribines, load them and form a skirmish line in front of our horses. We advanced at double time through the place where the native had been seen. This was not very nice, as the country was a low, marshy place, on each side of the road. The grass was taller than a man, and I heard several say that they had a hard time to keep up with the line, because the grass would tangle in their spurs. When we reached the place where the native had been seen, we found his gun, a Remington rifle, already loaded, and 100 rounds of ammunition, but he had disappeared. The bugler then blew recall and call to horses. We mounted as quickly as we had dismounted and were off again to reinforce San Muigel. A little ways further down the road we met a native, who was undoubtedly the one who had the gun, but had stepped into the woods nearby and changed his ladrone suit for a suit of white clothes, or "amigo," in Spanish, a friend. Although he was probably the man there was no certain proof against him, and he was turned loose.

We reached San Muigel at about 8:30 p. m., and left 20 men there with the horses, and started on foot, with the San Muigel men as guides, to find the ladrones, as they knew which way they would be liable to come. It was raining very hard most of the time, which made it so dark that one could not see his own hand in front of him. We tramped around in the mud and slush and water, in the brush and everywhere, to locate the enemy, but we finally returned in the morning with nothing but a gun for our wild goose chase. I must say right here that one of these trips is not very pleasant or what it is cracked up to be, although it is only a sample of what we have to do over here. Last night we were out again and the ladrones thought they could fool us. They fired on us while we crossed a river, thinking that the noise of the confused horses in the water, would keep us from hearing the commands of our officer, but they did not think we had a trumpeter that could blow the calls the same as the officer spoke them. We captured a few guns, with 500 rounds of ammunition, but the men played the amigo act again.

Ernest Vian was up here on a pass day before yesterday and went back yesterday. He was pleased to see a copy of The Gazette. I received a letter from Wm. Beautrow the other day. He said he was well and so was Simon Paul, the last he heard.

I think this is enough for this time, so goodbye.

Once upon a time a kind and good King had a very beautiful daughter and it was his Great desire that she should Wed some one in her own station, but the Young Woman did not take kindly to the Princes and others who played Golf with her and spent their Pin money for Ice Cream, etc., so she gave them all the Marble heart and ran away to Hudson with the Coachman, and thereafter she took in Washing for a living.

ACQUITS THE BOYS

MILLER AND HARDY NOT GUILTY OF WISE MURDER.

Jury Brings In a Favorable Verdict After Being Out All Night—New Iron Ore District on the Mesaba Range—Lake Fleet Changes Hands—Timber by Rail For Stillwater Mills—State News in General.

ANOKA, Minn., Nov. 12.—James Hardy and Elmer Miller have been acquitted by the jury on the charge of being concerned in the murder of Mrs. Eliza Ann Wise.

At 9:45 a. m. the jury in the Wise murder case came to an agreement. Saturday night at 10:25 the case was in their hands for consideration and on retiring they immediately took an informal ballot, after which seven more were taken before the case was decided.

Judge Giddings and Clerk of Court Hart were notified that the jury was ready to deliver their verdict and when they arrived in the courtroom it was comfortably filled with spectators, and upon arrival of the attorneys and prisoners the verdict was read. The scene when the words of not guilty were read is difficult to describe and do it justice. Public sentiment locally has favored the boys.

Other Indictment May Be Quashed.

However, they are not yet free, as it will be remembered the grand jury found two indictments against both the defendants, one for the murder of Mrs. Eliza Ann Wise and the other for the murder of little Willie Wise, who was instantly killed. The last named indictment is still charged against the boys, but it is understood that County Attorney Pratt will withdraw the charge. Should he refuse to withdraw it it would necessitate another trial, which would no doubt be the same as the one just ended, as both crimes were committed at the same time, place and under the same circumstances, and presumably the same parties did the deed. The boys will be brought into court and either discharged or held on the other indictment.

The jury refuses to disclose any of the ballots taken, but judging from their conversation, they, or a majority of them, expected the first ballot to decide the case, which would have been innocent.

This case has been in progress three weeks, including the task of securing the jury, which took just one week.

NEW IRON ORE DISTRICT.

Recently Discovered Tract In the Mesaba Range to Be Developed.

DULUTH, Nov. 13.—Corrigan, McKinney & Co., the big mining and vessel firm of Cleveland, has obtained control of the newly discovered iron ore property on the eastern edge of the Mesaba range near Mesaba station on the Duluth and Iron Range. The property is variously known as the "Moon" or "Hawkins" property. The Cleveland firm has procured the options for leases held by D. H. Moon, State Senator Hawkins, James Vivian and G. W. Wallace, and the consideration was in the neighborhood of $425,000. The state owns part of the land and the Northern Pacific the balance. There are 1,200 acres in the property and the Northern Pacific acquired its interest through the purchase of the St. Paul and Duluth. The development of this property virtually means a new mining district on the Mesaba.

MUCH TIMBER COMING.

Stillwater Expects to Receive Large Shipments by Rail.

STILLWATER, Minn., Nov. 13.—Indications are that a large amount of timber will be shipped to Stillwater by rail the coming winter from points along the St. Louis river and other timber regions in the northern part of the state. Among the concerns who will ship to Stillwater by rail are the South Muscatine Lumber and Box company of Muscatine, Ia., and William O'Brien and Lammers Brothers. It is estimated that at least 50,000,000 feet will arrive here over the Northern Pacific before work begins on the river next spring. In addition to this there will also be a good-sized cut of timber on the St. Croix and its tributaries.

LAKE VESSELS SOLD.

Fleet of the American Steamship Company Changes Hands.

DULUTH, Nov. 13.—The American Steel and Wire company has just bought the fleet of the American Steamship company of Duluth, paying therefor $5,250,000. There are 12 ships, including the 4 largest vessels on the lakes, 6 others of from 5,000 to 7,000 tons capacity, and 2 St. Lawrence canal ships of 3,000 tons each. The entire capacity of the fleet is 50,000 gross tons per trip, and they cost, two years ago, about $3,350,000. The American Steamship company is largely made up of the directors, etc., of the American Steel and Wire company, headed by John W. Gates.

Use Minneapolis Quotations.

CHICAGO, Nov. 13.—A special to The Chronicle from Kansas City, Mo., says: The Kansas City board of trade has voted to substitute the Minneapolis wheat quotations for those of New York, which the board has been using since its connection with Chicago was interrupted by the bucketshop fight.

Senator Davis Much Improved.

ST. PAUL, Nov. 12.—Senator Davis is greatly improved. It is now confidently believed by the physicians that he has passed the danger point and that his complete recovery is but a matter of time. He showed great interest in the political situation and discussed the subject with ardor.

PASSENGER DERAILED.

Accident on the Great Northern Near Pipestone, Minn.

PIPESTONE, Minn., Nov. 10.—A bad wreck occurred on the Great Northern about two miles south of this city. Two coaches and a baggage car are in the ditch. Mrs. W. H. Folich of Hull is seriously bruised and lacerated; J. B. Bacon, traveling freight agent for the Great Northern, was badly shaken up and sustained several injuries. Other passengers were slightly cut and bruised, but none seriously. The injured were at once brought here and are being cared for in the best possible manner.

Northwestern Flour Output.

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 8.—According to The Northwestern Miller the flour output at Minneapolis last week was 367,485 barrels, against 276,310 barrels for the corresponding week of 1899. Superior-Duluth last week ground 13,200 barrels against 46,960 barrels for the corresponding week of 1899. Mills last week managed to sell about as much flour as made, chiefly domestic, but prices were very close. Advances in wheat brought in many orders at old prices.

Disabled In the Philippines.

NEW ULM, Minn., Nov. 10.—Captain Steinhauser has arrived home from the Philippine islands, where he was wounded at Camarines while leading a detachment of men on May 20. He was shot through both knees. One leg is permanently stiffened, disabling him from further service.

Died While at the Polls.

RED WING, Minn., Nov. 8.—John G. Nyquist, a middle-aged man, in the Second precinct of the Third ward, dropped dead while in the voting booth. His ballot was partly marked and the judges are in a quandary what to do with it.

Northern Pacific Gets Lands.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—The secretary of the interior has ordered patented to the Northern Pacific Railroad company the list of lands selected under its grant, embracing 2,919 acres in the Duluth district, Minnesota.

TO GUARANTEE PURITY.

Important Action Taken by the Millers' National Association.

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 12.—The Evening Wisconsin says: An important secret meeting of the board of managers of the Millers' National Association of the United States was held at the Auditorium hotel, Chicago, Thursday, when important action regarding adulteration of feed and milling stuffs was taken. The board decided that so far as its power goes to throw out of the market ground clay, sawdust, ground corncobs and other adulterants that are being at the present time extensively used in various kinds of feed and milling stuffs now on the market, greatly to the detriment of the legitimate trade. A copyrighted guaranteed label, under bond, will be issued by the national association for the use of its members, and a fine of $500 will be imposed on every member who is discovered and convicted of misusing this label by placing it on anything but the pure product.

BIG SUM MISSING.

Wisconsin Express Agent Gets From $16,000 to $25,000.

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 10.—John A. Barr, Jr., night transfer agent of the United States Express company at Green Bay, Wis., is missing. Burr is accused by General Superintendent E. S. Averill of the express company of having appropriated between $14,000 and $25,000. Superintendent Averill has been investigating Burr's accounts for the past two days and what was at first thought to be a comparatively small shortage, turns out to reach the amount named above. The United States Express company has announced that a reward of $500 and 10 per cent of all money recovered will be paid for Burr's apprehension.

TRIED TO WRECK A TRAIN.

Two Negroes Attempt to Derail the Twilight Limited.

NEW RICHMOND, Wis., Nov. 10.—A desperate attempt was made by two negroes to wreck the Twilight Limited fast train on the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha, between the Twin Cities and West Superior and Duluth.

The switch had been tampered with near Spooner in a place where the train ordinarily runs at a high speed. It was discovered just in the nick of time by a section man. Both colored men were captured, but one got away and a posse is now searching for him.

SENTENCE AFFIRMED.

Supreme Court Declares Mayor Tubbs Must Be Punished.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Nov. 12.—W. G. Porter, assistant United States attorney for South Dakota, has been advised that the United States circuit court of appeals has affirmed the decision of the federal court in this city in the case against Richard A. Tubbs, former mayor of Alcester, this state, who will now have to serve a term of two years in the Sioux Falls penitentiary. Tubbs, while mayor of Alcester, was convicted of mailing objectionable matter to a young woman of Alcester.

SUES FOR BIG SUM.

Mrs. Mary Carpenter Seeks to Recover $2,000,000.

KENOSHA, Wis., Nov. 13.—Mrs. Mary G. Carpenter, 80 years old, is about to sue the British government for $2,000,000, a fortune left by her brother, James Carpenter, who returned to England 15 years ago, and died there, leaving an estate of that amount. She is his sole heir.

She has never been able to get any satisfactory settlement from the English courts and has put the matter in the hands of Attorney A. E. Buckmaster.

CARLISTS BOB UP AGAIN

The Revolution Which Ever Haunts Poor Spain.

PERSISTENCE OF THE PRETENDER.

Origin of the Claim That Keeps the Iberian Kingdom In a Turmoil—The Salic Law and How It Was Originally Broken.

After Spain had received its whipping at the hands of Uncle Sam, it seemed that the unhappy kingdom was about to settle down to a condition of peace. With their vexatious colonial problems solved in so summary a manner, nothing remained for the volatile Iberians to raise a fuss about but their internal affairs, and this they have proceeded to do. That long standing and ever present menace to Spanish peace, Carlism, or the dispute about the throne, has again raised its ugly head, if indeed it could ever have been said to have been scotched, and there is every chance of a general upheaval.

DON CARLOS.

Most Americans know that there is some dispute about the Spanish throne, but few can give its grounds. The main cause of the trouble is the Salic law, which is very ancient and which declares that the throne may not descend to or through a woman. This law was established in Spain by Philip V, who died in 1746. He declared that no woman could reign in Spain while there lived a male descendant of Philip IV. This law worked fairly well without any serious dispute as to its authority for about a century. Ferdinand VII held the throne of Spain under Napoleon from 1813 until 1815, and then in his own right. Like most Spanish monarchs he was a weakling and was completely under the domination of his energetic fourth wife, Queen Maria Christina, daughter of Francis, king of the two Sicilies. This queen was a handsome, energetic, ambitious, unprincipled woman.

Ferdinand VII and Maria Christina had two daughters, who by the Salic law were barred from the throne. Had the royal pair possessed a son much misery and bloodshed would have been spared to their unhappy kingdom. Queen Maria was not satisfied, therefore, with the law, and under her influence the king in 1830 ordered it set aside. This action was vigorously resisted by the Bourbons, to which family the king belonged and who were jealous of the influence of the queen. After juggling with the law for some time Ferdinand settled the question so far as he was concerned by dying in 1833. Thereupon his elder daughter, Queen Isabella II, became queen under the regency of her mother, for she was only 3 years of age. Isabella's claim to the throne was disputed under the troublesome law by the brother of the late king, Don Carlos I. The dispute culminated in a civil war, which was settled for a time by the defeat of the Carlists in 1840. Queen Isabella's reign was disturbed by many revolutions, coups d'etat and changes of constitution, and in 1868 her outraged subjects, alienated by the flagrancy of her private life, deposed her. She is still living in Paris.

WIFE OF DON CARLOS.

From 1868 to 1874 the state of Spain was pitiable. The country was torn by internal revolution, dissension and revolt by its colonies. A republic was tried, but it proved a failure, and the monarchy was restored in 1875 under Alfonso XII, father of the present king. Alfonso died in November, 1885, six months before the birth of the present king, Alfonso XIII. In the interim the throne was occupied by the Infanta Maria Mercedes, the elder sister of the little king. The wife of Alfonso XII, Maria Christina, an Austrian princess by birth, acted as queen regent for both her children.

Don Carlos I, who was defeated in 1840, abdicated in favor of his son, Don Carlos II, in 1845. The second pretender to the throne renewed the quarrel in 1848 without success, although his followers made a stubborn fight. The Carlist strength lay principally in the north of Spain, in Catalonia and among the Pyrenees, as it still does. The second Don Carlos died in 1861, and his claims descended to his son, Don Juan. The latter in 1868 abdicated in favor of his own son, the present Don Carlos and the third of the name. He also has a son called Don Jaime, or James, to continue the fight that has so long torn the distressed country. There was fighting in the Carlos interest all the time, especially between 1873 and 1878. Since then there has been a continual series of small risings and threatened revolutions.

Don Carlos II, the present pretender to the throne and the man in whose interest the present uprisings are taking place, is variously described. By his followers, and he has many in Europe, he receives the highest meed of praise, for he is said by them to be a kindly, knightly personage. They assert, and it cannot be gainsaid if the Salic law be admitted to hold, that he is deprived of his rightful heritage, the throne of Spain. He has also, besides his pretensions to the Spanish throne, a very good claim to that of France, for he is the head of the ancient house of Bourbon. The pretender, who calls himself the Duke of Madrid, is tall, dark and of commanding presence. He is now 52 years of age.

By his enemies Don Carlos is denounced for meanness and love of money. During his early years he was quite poor, and some of his acts in obtaining money to carry on his cause were scarcely such as to commend him to his desperately proud countrymen. His wife, by whom he had four daughters and one son, was a French princess of a younger branch of the house of Bourbon and so related to her husband. She died in 1893. In 1897 he married a daughter of the princely French house of De Rohan, and his enemies say that he did so for her money. It is certain that without it he could not prosecute his cause. He is accused of being an ingrate and a libertine, though of late years he has been much quieter than formerly. He does not, of course, reside in Spain.

DON JAIME.

It has been reported several times that Don Carlos, following the example set by his grandfather and father, had abdicated in favor of his son. The latter is now about 30 years of age and quite rich through inheritance. He is blond haired, full faced and middle sized and was educated in England and Austria. Don Jaime received a military education and is said to be very popular in Spain. Undoubtedly he and the cause of which he is the representative and possible head form the most serious menace to the welfare and peace of Spain.

Society at Its Best.

Mrs. Ronald Stuart is a fair and prominent member of the society circles of Gotham. She does not, however, allow her social duties to distract her from the calls of humanity, and her generous purse is open to all worthy causes. At the recent bazaar held in the Waldorf-Astoria for the benefit of the widows and orphans of the Galveston disaster she was one of the most prominent workers. The raising of the large sum of money collected was largely due to her efforts in the cause.

CHAPTER I.

The first time I met her I was a reporter in the embryonic state and she was a girl in short dresses. It was in a garden surrounded by high red brick walls which were half hidden by clusters of green vines and at the base of which nestled earth beds radiant with roses and poppies and peonies and bushes of lavender lilacs, all spilling their delicate ambrosia on the mild air of passing May. I stood, straw hat in hand, wondering if I had not stumbled into some sweet prison of flowers which, having run disobedient ways in the past, had been placed here by Flora and forever denied their native meadows and wildernesses. And this vision of fresh youth in my path, perhaps she was some guardian nymph. I was only 22, a most impressionable age. Her hair was like that rare October brown, half dun, half gold; her eyes were cool and restful, like the brown pools one sees in the heart of the forests, and her lips and cheeks cozened the warm vermilion of the rose which lay ever so lightly on the bosom of her white dress. Close at hand was a table upon which stood a pitcher of lemonade. She was holding in her hand an empty glass. As my eyes encountered her calm, inquiring gaze my courage fled precipitately; likewise the object of my errand. There was a pause; diffidence and embarrassment on my side, placidity on hers.

"Well, sir?" said she in a voice the tone of which implied that she could readily understand her presence in the garden, but not mine.

As I remember it, I was suddenly seized with a great thirst. "I should like a glass of your lemonade," I answered, bravely laying down the only piece of money I possessed. Her stern lips parted in a smile, and my courage came back cautiously—that is to say, by degrees. She filled a glass for me, and as I gulped it down I could almost detect the flavor of lemon and sugar.

"It is very good," I volunteered, passing back the glass. I held out my hand, smiling.

"There isn't any change," coolly.

I flushed painfully. It was fully four miles to Newspaper row. I was conscious of a sullen pride. Presently the object of my errand returned. Somewhat down the path I saw a gentleman reclining in a canvas swing. "Is that Mr. Wentworth?" I asked.

"Yes. Do you wish to speak to him? Uncle Bob, here is a gentleman who desires to speak to you."

I approached. "Mr. Wentworth," I began, cracking the straw in my hat, "my name is John Winthrop. I am a reporter. I have called to see if it is true that you have declined the Italian portfolio."

"It is true," he replied kindly. "There are any number of reasons for my declining it, but I cannot make them public. Is that all?"

"Yes, sir; thank you," and I backed away.

"Are you a reporter?" asked the girl as I was about to pass by her.

"Yes, I am."

"Do you draw pictures?"

"No, I do not."

"Do you write novels?"

"No," with a nervous laugh.

There is nothing like the process of interrogation to make one person lose interest in another.

"Oh, I thought perhaps you did," she said and turned her back to me. I passed through the darkened halls of the house and into the street. I never expected to see her again, but it was otherwise ordained. We came together three years later at Block Island. She was 18 now, gathering the rosy flowers of her first season. She remembered the incident in the garden, and we laughed over it. A few dances, two or three evenings on the verandas watching the sea, moonlit, as it sprawled among the rocks below us, and the even tenor of my way ceased to be. I appreciated how far she was above me, so I worshiped her silently and from afar. I told her my ambitions, confidences so welcome to feminine ears, and she rewarded me with a small exchange. She, too, was an orphan and lived with her uncle, a rich banker, who as a diversion consented to represent his country at foreign courts. Her given name was Phyllis. I had seen the name a thousand times in print; the poets had idealized it and the novelists had embalmed it in tender phrases.

It was the first time I had ever met a woman of the name of Phyllis. It appealed to my poetic instinct. Perhaps that was the cause of it all. And then she was very beautiful. In the autumn of that year we became great friends, and through her influence I began to see beyond the portals of the mansions of the rich. Matthew Prior's Chloes and Sir John Suckling's Euphelias lost their charms. Henceforth my muse's name became Phyllis. I took her to the opera when I didn't know where I was going to breakfast on the morrow. I sent her roses and went without tobacco, a privation of which woman knows nothing. Often I was plunged into despair at my distressed circumstances. Money to her meant something to spend; to me it meant something to get. Her income bothered her because she could not spend it; my income was mortgaged a week in advance and did not bother me at all. This was the barrier at my lips. But her woman's intuition must have told her that she was a part and parcel of my existence.

I had what is called a forlorn hope—a rich uncle who was a planter in Louisiana. His son and I were his only heirs. But this old planter had a mortal antipathy to my side of the family. When my mother, his sister, married Alfred Winthrop in 1859, at the time when the north and south were approaching the precipice of a civil war, he considered all family ties obliterated. We never worried much about it. When mother died, he softened to the extent of being present at the funeral. He took small notice of my father, but offered to adopt me if I would assume his name. I clasped my father's hand in mine and said nothing. The old man stared at me for a moment, then left the house. That was the first and last time I ever saw him. Sometimes I wondered if he would remember me in his will. This, of course, was only when I had taken Phyllis somewhere or when some creditor had lost patience.

One morning in January, five years after my second meeting with Phyllis, I sat at my desk in the office. It was raining, a cold thin rain. The window was blurred. The water in the steam pipes went banging away. I was composing an editorial which treated the diplomatic relations between this country and England. The roar of Park row distracted me. Now and then I would go to the window and peer down on the living stream below. A dense cloud of steam hung over all the city. I swore some when the copy boy came in and said that there were yet a column and a half to fill and that the foreman wanted to "close up the page early." The true cause of my indisposition was due to the rumors rife in the office that morning. Rumors which emanate from the managing editor's room are usually of the sort which burden the subordinate ones with anxiety. The London correspondent was "going to pieces." He had cabled that he was suffering from nervous prostration, supplementing a request for a two months' leave of absence. For "nervous prostration" we read "drink." Our London correspondent was a brilliant journalist. He had written one or two clever books. He had a broad knowledge of men and affairs, and his pen was one of those which flashed and burned at frequent intervals, but he drank. Dan's father had been a victim of the habit. I remember meeting the elder Hillars. He was a picturesque individual, an accomplished scholar, a wide traveler, a diplomatist and a noted war correspondent. His work during the Franco-Prussian war had placed him in the front rank. After sending his son Dan to college he took no further notice of him. He was killed while serving his paper at the siege of Alexandria. Dan naturally followed his father's footsteps both in profession and in habits. He had been my classmate at college, and no one knew him better than I except it was himself. The love of adventure and drink had ended the life of the one. It might end the life of the other.

The foreman in the composing room waited for some time for that required column and a half of editorial copy. I lit my pipe, and my thoughts ran back to the old days, to the many times Dan had paid my debts and to the many times I had paid his. Ah, me! Those were days when love and fame and riches were elusive, and we went in quest of them. The crust is hyssop when the heart is young. The garret is a prince when hope flies unfettered. The most wonderful dreams imaginable are dreamed close to the eaves. And when a man leaves behind him the garret he also leaves behind the fondest illusions. But who—who would stay in the garret?

The copy boy said there were yet a column and a half to fill.

And as my thoughts ran on the question rose, Whom would they send in his place—Dan's? I knew London. It was familiar ground. Perhaps they might send me. It was this thought which unsettled me. I was perfectly satisfied with New York. Phyllis lived in New York. There would be time enough for London when we were married. Then I began to build air castles. A newspaper man is the architect of some splendid structures, but he thoughtlessly builds on the sand when the tide is out. Yes; foreign corresponding would be all well enough, I mused, with Phyllis at my side. With her as my wife I should have the envy of all my fellow craftsmen. We should dine at the embassies, and the attaches would flutter about us, and all London would talk of the beautiful "Mrs. Winthrop." Then the fire in my pipe bowl went out. The copy boy was at my elbow again.

"Hang you!" said I.

"The foreman says he's coming down with an ax," replied the boy.

It was like churning, but I did manage to grind the copy. I was satisfied that the United States and Great Britain would not go to war over it.

The late afternoon mail brought two letters. I opened the one from Phyllis first. It said:

> Dear Jack—Uncle Bob has a box for the opera tonight, but he has been suddenly called to Washington—politics, possibly, but he would not say. Aunty and I want you to go with us in his stead. Ethel and her fiance, Mr. Holland, will be together, which means that aunty and I will have no one to talk to unless you come. "Carmen" is to be sung. Please do not fail me. PHYLLIS.

Fail her! I thought not.

Then I read the second letter. I read it three or four times, and even then I was not sure that I was not dreaming. I caught up my pipe again, filled it and lit it. I read the letter once more. I was solemnly informed that my uncle was dead and that I was mentioned in the will and that if I would kindly call at the Hoffman House the following morning a certain sum of money would be given to me. I regretted that I had reached that age when a man's actions must be dignified although alone: otherwise I dare say I should have danced the pas seul. Whatever my uncle's bequest might be, I believed that it would make me independently rich. Phyllis was scarcely an arm's length away now. I whistled as I locked up my desk and proceeded down stairs and sang a siren song into the waxen ears of the cashier.

"You have only twenty coming this week, Mr. Winthrop," said he.

"Never mind," I replied. "I'll manage to get along next week." It was only on very rare occasions that I drew my full pay at the end of the week. I dined at a fashionable restaurant. As I sipped my wine I built one of my castles, and Phyllis reigned therein. There would be a trip to Europe every summer, and I should devote my time to writing novels. My picture would be the frontispiece in the book reviews, and wayside paragraphs would tell of the enormous royalties my publishers were paying me. I took some old envelopes from my pocket and began figuring on the backs of them as to what purposes the money should be put. It could not be less than $50,000, perhaps more. Of course my uncle had given a harbor to a grudge against me and mine, but such things are always forgotten on the deathbed. Fortune, having buffeted me, was now going to make me one of her favorite children. I had reached the end of the long lane.

As I left the restaurant I decided to acquaint Phyllis with my good luck and also my desire that she should share of it. I turned into a florist's and had a dozen roses sent up to her. They were American Beauties. I could afford it now.

I found Phyllis thrumming on the piano. She was singing in a low voice the aria from "Lucia." I stood on the threshold of the drawing room and waited till she had done. I believed her to be unaware of my presence. She was what we poets call a "dream of loveliness," a tangible dream. Her neck and shoulders were like satin, and the head above them reminded me of Sappho's which we see in marble. From where I stood I could catch a glimpse of the profile, the nose and firm chin, the exquisite mouth, to kiss which I would gladly have given up any number of fortunes. The cheek had that delicate curve of a rose leaf, and when the warm blood surged into it there was a color as matchless as that of a jack rose. Ah, but I loved her! Suddenly the music ceased.

"There is a mirror over the piano, Jack," she said without turning her head.

So I crossed the room and sat down in the chair nearest her. I vaguely wondered if at the distance she had seen the love in my eyes when I thought myself unobserved.

"I thank you for those lovely roses," she said, smiling and permitting me to press her hand.

"Don't mention it," I replied. It is so difficult for a man to say original things in the presence of the woman he loves. "I have great news for you. It reads like a fairy tale, you know; happy ever afterward, and all that."

"Ah!"

"Yes. Do you remember my telling you of a rich uncle who lived in the south?"

"Is it possible that he has left you a fortune?" she cried, her eyes shining.

"You have guessed it."

"I am very glad for your sake, Jack. I was beginning to worry about you."

"Worry about me?"

"Yes. I do not understand how a newspaper man can afford to buy roses four or five times a week—and exist." She had the habit of being blunt and frank to her intimate friends. I secretly considered it an honor when she talked to me like this. "I have told you repeatedly to send me flowers only once a week. I'd rather not have them at all. Last week you spent as much as $30 on roses alone. Mr. Holland does not do that for Ethel, and he has a million."

"I'm not Holland," I said. "He doesn't—that is—I do not think he"— Then I foundered. I had almost said, "He doesn't care as much for Ethel as I do for you."

Phyllis pretended not to note my embarrassment. The others came in then, and conversation streamed into safer channels.

When we entered the box at the opera, the curtain had risen. Phyllis and I took the rear chairs. They were just out of the glare of the lights.

"You are looking very beautiful tonight," I whispered lowly. I was beginning business early. There was no barrier at my lips.

"Thank you," she replied. Then with a smile, "Supposing I were to say that you were looking very handsome?"

"Oh," said I, somewhat disconcerted, "that would be rather embarrassing."

"I do not doubt it."

"And then it would not be true. The duty we men owe to a beautiful woman is constantly to keep telling her of it."

"And the duty we women owe to a fine looking man?" a rogue of a dimple in her cheeks.

"Is it to explicitly believe all he says regarding your beauty?" I answered, evading the question. "A man may tell a woman that she is beautiful, but a woman may not tell a man that he is fine looking—that is, in public."

"The terms are not fair."

"That may be true, but they make the wheels of the social organization run smoother. For instance, if I met a strange woman and she told me that I was handsome I shouldn't be able to speak again the whole evening. On the other hand, a beautiful woman after you say that you are delighted to meet her expects the very next remark to concern her good looks."

"Your insight is truly remarkable," she said, the dimple continuing its elusive maneuvers. "Hush, here comes Carmen!"

And our voices grew faint in the swell of melody. Mrs. Wentworth was entranced. Her daughter was fondly gazing at the back of her fiance's head. Phyllis had turned her face from me to the stage. As for myself, I was not particularly interested in the cigarette girl. It was running through my head that the hour had arrived. I patted my gloves for a moment, then I drew a long breath.

"Phyllis!" said I. There was a quaver in my voice. Perhaps I had not spoken loud enough. "Phyllis!" said I again.

She turned quickly and gave me an inquiring and at the same time nervous glance. "What is it?"

"I want to tell you something I have never dared to tell you till now," I said earnestly. The voice on the stage soared heavenward. "I love you. Will you be my wife?"

Ah, me! Where were those drooping eyelids, that flush, that shy, sweet glance, of which I had so often dreamt? Phyllis was frowning.

"Jack, I have been afraid of this," she said. "I am so sorry, but it cannot be."

"Oh, do not say that now," I cried, crushing my gloves. "Wait awhile. Perhaps you may learn to love me."

"Jack, I have always been frank to you because I like you. Do you suppose it will take me five years to find out what my heart says to any man? No. Had I loved you I should not have asked you to wait. I should have said yes. I do not love you in the way you wish. Indeed I like you better than any man I know, but that is all I can offer you. I should be unkind if I held out any false hopes. I have often asked myself why I do not love you, but there is something lacking in you, something I cannot define. Some other woman will find what I have failed to find in you to love."

I was twisting my gloves out of all recognition. There was a singing in my ears which did not come from the stage.

"Look at it as I do, Jack. There is a man in this world whom I shall love and who will love me. We may never meet. Then he shall be an ideal to me and I to him. You believe you love me, but the love you offer is not complete."

"Not complete?" I echoed.

"No. It would be if I returned it. Do you understand? There is in this world a woman you will truly love and who will return your love in its fullness. Will you meet? That is in the hands of your destinies. Shall I meet my ideal? Who knows? But till I do I shall remain an old maid."

I nodded wearily. A dissertation on affinities seemed ill timed.

"And now," she said, "this beautiful friendship of ours must come to an end." And there were tears in her eyes.

"Yes," said I, twisting and untwisting the shreds of my gloves. It seemed as though the world had slipped from under my feet and I was whirling into nothingness. "My heart is very heavy."

"Jack, if you talk like that," hastily, "you will have me crying before all these people."

Unfortunately Ethel turned and saw the tears in her cousin's eyes. "Mercy, what is the matter?" she asked.

"Jack has been telling me a very pathetic story," said Phyllis, with a pity in her eyes.

"Yes; something that happened tonight," said I, staring at the programme, but seeing nothing, nothing.

"Well," said Ethel, "this is not the place for them," turning her eyes to the stage again.

The concluding acts of the opera were a jangle of chords and discords, and the hum of voices was like the murmur of a faroff sea. My eyes remained fixed upon the stage. It was like looking through a broken kaleidoscope. I wanted to be alone, alone with my pipe. I was glad when we at last entered the carriage. Mrs. Wentworth immediately began to extol the singers, and Phyllis, with that tact which is given only to kind hearted women, answered most of the indirect questions put to me. She was giving me time to recover. The direct questions I could not avoid. Occasionally I looked out of the window. It had begun to rain again. It was very dreary.

"And what a finale, Mr. Winthrop!" cried Mrs. Wentworth.

"Yes, indeed," I replied. To have loved and lost, and such a woman, was my thought.

"The new tenor is an improvement. Do you not think so?"

"Yes, indeed." No more to touch her hand, to hear her voice, to wait upon her wishes.

"It was the most brilliant audience of the season."

"Yes, indeed," I murmured. Those were the only words I could articulate. The carriage rumbled on.

"Does Patti return in the fall?"

"Yes." Five years of dreaming and then to awake!

And then the carriage mercifully stopped.

Mrs. Wentworth insisted that I should enter and have some coffee. I had so few words at my command that I could not invent even a flimsy excuse. So I went in. The coffee was tasteless. I put in four lumps of sugar. I stirred and stirred [illegible]. Finally I swallowed [illegible] and stirred the cup. [illegible] the contents of [illegible] was very hot. When the [illegible] was past, I rose and made my adieu.

Phyllis came to the door with me.

"Forget what I have said," I began, fumbling the doorknob. "I suppose I was an ass to think that you might love me. They say that it is a malady. Very well. With a few prescribed remedies I shall recover."

Phyllis came to the door with me.

"You are very bitter."

"Can you blame me," clicking the latch back and forth, "when all the world has suddenly grown dark?"

"There are other eyes than mine," gently.

"Yes, but they will light other paths than those I shall follow."

"Jack, you are too manly to make threats."

"That was not a threat," said I. "Well, I shall go and laugh at myself for my presumption. To laugh at yourself is to cure. There is no more wine in the cup, nothing but the lees. I'll have to drink them. A wry face, and then it will all be over. Yes; I am bitter. To have dreamed as I have dreamed and to awake as I have! Ah, well, I must go on loving you till"—

"Till she comes," supplemented Phyllis.

"You wrong me. It is only in letters that I am versatile. Forgive my bitterness and forget my folly."

"Oh, Jack, if you knew how sorry I am! I shall forgive the bitterness, but I will not forget what you term folly. It's something any woman might be proud of, the love of an honest, dear, good fellow. Good night." She held her hand toward me.

"Good night," I said, "and God bless you!" I kissed the palm of her hand, opened the door and then stumbled down the steps.

I do not remember how I reached home. It was all over. My beautiful castle had fallen in ruins about my ears.

CHAPTER II.

In my bedroom the next morning there was a sad and heavy heart. The owner woke up, stared at the ceiling, then at the sun baked bricks beyond his window. He saw not the glory of the sun and the heavens. To his eyes there was nothing poetic in the flash of the distant church spires against the billowy cloud banks. The gray doves, circling about the chimneys, did not inspire him nor the twittering of the sparrows on the window ledge. There was nothing at all in the world but a long stretch of barren, lonely years. And he wondered how without her at his side he ever could traverse them. He was driftwood again. He had built upon sands as usual, and the tide had come in; his castle was flotsam and jetsam. He was drifting, and he didn't care where. He was very sorry for himself, and he had the blue devils the worst kind of way. Finally he crawled out of bed and dressed because it had to be done. He was not particularly painstaking with the procedure. It mattered not what collar became him best, and he picked up a tie at random. A man generally dresses for a certain woman's approval, and when that is no longer to be gained he grows indifferent. The other women do not count.

My breakfast consisted of a cup of coffee, and as the generous nectar warmed my veins my thoughts took a philosophical turn. It is fate who writes the was, the is and the shall be. We have a proverb for every joy and misfortune. It is the only consolation fate gives us. It is like a conqueror asking the vanquished to witness the looting. All roads lead to Rome, and all proverbs are merely signposts by which we pursue our destinies. And how was I to get to Rome? I knew not. Hope is better than clairvoyance.

Was Phyllis right when she said that I did not truly love her? I believed not. Should I go on loving her all my life? Undoubtedly I should. As to affinities, I had met mine, but it had proved a one sided affair.

It was after 10 by the clock when I remembered that I was to meet the lawyer, the arbiter of my new fortunes. Money is a balm for most things, and coupled with travel it might lead me to forget. He was the family lawyer, and he had come all the way north to see that I received my uncle's bequest. He was bent, gray and partially bald. He must have been close to 70, but for all that there was a youthful twinkle in his eyes as he took my card and looked up into my face.

"So you are John Winthrop?" he [illegible] in way of preliminary. You may hand a cardcase full of your [illegible] to a lawyer and still he will insist upon a verbal admission.

"I have always been led to believe so," I answered [illegible], placing my hat beside the [illegible] chair in which I sat down. "How did you manage to locate me in this big city?"

"Your uncle had seen some of your signed articles in New York papers and said that in all probability I should find you here. A few inquiries set me on your track." Here he pulled out a lengthy document from his handbag. "I confess, however," he added, "that I am somewhat disappointed in your looks."

"Disappointed in my looks?" was my cry. "What sort of a duffer were you expecting to see?"

He laughed. "Well, your uncle gave me the idea that I should find a good for nothing hack writer, a dweller in some obscure garret."

"If that is the case, what under the sun did he send you up here for?"

The merriment went out of the old man's face, and his eyes became grave. "Of that anon. Let me proceed with my business and read the will to you. You will find it rather a remarkable document."

I settled back in my chair in a waiting attitude. To tell the truth, I was somewhat confused by all this preamble. To his son my uncle left the bulk of his property, which amounted to more than $1,000,000. I was listless. The head overseer received the munificent sum of $50,000. To the butler, the housekeeper and the cook he gave $10,000 each. I began to grow interested. He was very liberal to his servants. Several other names were read, and my interest assumed the color of anxiety. When the lawyer stopped to unfold the last flap, I spoke.

"And where in the world do I come in?"

"In the sense you understand you do not come in."

I stared at him in amazement. "I don't come in?" I repeated vaguely. "Ah," reaching down for my hat, "then I go out, as it were, as brilliant as a London yellow fog. What the devil does all this mean?" I started to rise.

"Wait!" he commanded. "'To my nephew, John Winthrop, I bequeath the sum of $1,000, to be presented to him in person immediately after this will is probated and with the understanding that he shall make no further demand upon my son and heir in the future.' That is all," concluded the lawyer, folding the document. "I have the check in my pocket."

"Keep it," said I, rising. A hot flush of indignation swept over me. I understood. It was his revenge. To have a man make sport of you after he is dead and gone, leaving you impotent and with never a chance to retaliate! "Keep it," I said again; "throw it away, or burn it. I understand. He has satisfied a petty revenge. It is an insult not only to me, but to my dead parents. You are, of course, acquainted with the circumstances of my mother's marriage. She married the man she loved, disregarding her brother's wishes."

"I knew your mother," said the lawyer, going to the window and looking out and beyond all that met his gaze.

"To think," I went on, cooling none, "that my mother's brother should die in this manner nourishing so small and petty a spite! When he did this, he knew that I should understand his motive. In the first place, I never dreamed that he would remember me in his will—never entertained the least idea of it. I am independent; I am earning a livelihood, small, but enough and to spare. I'll bid you good morning." I took a step toward the door.

"Young man, sit down," said the old man, coming back to his chair. "I want to talk to you for a few minutes. Your uncle was a peculiarly vindictive man. What he considered a wrong he neither forgot nor forgave. His son pleaded with him not to put in that final clause. He offered even to share with you. Your uncle swore he would leave it all to the stablemen first. This journey was forced upon me, or I should not have taken it. This is my advice to you: Accept the check and in the privacy of your room tear it up or light a cigar with it; that's about all it's worth. You will feel no little satisfaction in lighting a cigar with it—that is, if you are anything like me. Think of it—a thousand dollars to light your cigar! It is an opportunity not to be missed. When you grow old, you will say to your grandchildren, 'Once I lit a cigar with a thousand dollar check.' The oldest inhabitant will be silenced forever. It may become history. And then, too, if there are spirits, as Scripture says there are, your uncle will writhe at the performance. I trust that you will forgive me my part in the matter. I have taken a fancy to you, and if you will accept my friendship I shall be happy to accept yours. Your uncle's revenge will not be a marker to the restitution his son will make."

"Restitution! His son?"

"Yes. To my sincere regret he is an invalid who may or may not live the year out. He has already made a will in which he leaves all to you. The will is in my safe at home. I return tonight, so I may not see you again in this world of sin and tribulation." The merry twinkle had returned to his eyes. "I am very old."

"It is worth all the trouble to have,

COUNTY NEWS NOTES.

BY OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENTS.

Sanders.

Well, the election is over and the majority are wearing satisfactory smiles.

The mother of Mrs. Sjordal came up from Iowa Saturday. She will make her future home here.

Notwithstanding the bad roads, peddlers are canvassing in this section with wagons full of goods.

Jack Frost has given us a call, with a sprinkling of snow, but not enough to cover up the rough spots in the roads and make sleighing.

River Falls.

J. A. Sjostrom went to St. Hilaire for lumber Monday.

O. O. Opperud went to St. Hilaire on business Monday.

Ole J. Johnson & Co. finished threshing at Aug. Swenson's farm Friday and moved to A. G. Ness' place.

Mike Johnson & Co. are threshing at Sec. 5, and will soon have all the No. 1 hard in that neighborhood pounded out.

Mr. Tyren, of Gervais, went to St. Hilaire Monday, and like the rest of the eastern farmers took a load of lumber home with him.

Emardville.

Geo. Madden and E. A. Moran, of Red Lake Falls, were around last week buying cattle.

Lorentz Lee was on Saturday appointed treasurer in school district 228, Ed. O. Anderson having resigned.

Mrs. P. Medchill has gone to Winona on a visit to her father and sister. She is accompanied by her son Martin.

Odin Jacobson threshed 9 bushels of flax to the acre, 18 bushels of oats and sixteen bushels of wheat to the acre.

Flax and speltz do not yield much to the acre, owing to the very dry weather during the summer and wet, bad weather this fall.

Edwin Anderson and Arvor Bugge went to St. Hilaire Saturday with a herd of cattle for Geo. Madden. They returned Sunday night.

The grain averages about 17 bushels of wheat and 25 bushels of oats to the acre, although a quarter of the grain was spoiled beyond the possibility of threshing. It takes four good teams to move the engine and from three to five teams for the separator.

Wylie.

A turkey raffle was held at Herman Schulz' Saturday night.

Chas. Johnson went to Crookston Monday, returning Tuesday.

There was a turkey raffle at Chas Liebel's Wednesday, last week.

Robert Berg is building a residence on section 5, Polk Centre.

Miss Hedda Adolphson left for Crookston via the Great Northern, Friday.

L. Jensen, the Republican candidate for county treasurer, was here on business Saturday.

Mrs. A. O. Letvig and Miss Mattie Wylie went to Crookston on Monday's train. They returned on Tuesday.

There was a party at Melin's the evening of election day. All enjoyed themselves to their hearts' content.

H. P. Johnson, employed as teacher in District No. 99, was around with a petition in that district Wednesday to get the time for beginning the school changed from Jan. 5, 1901, to Nov. 15, 1900.

Some one said that if John Lind is elected governor, we will soon get a depot at Wylie. That was before election. If the progress of the depot is as fast the coming two years as it has been the past two years, the chimney, at least, on "that small shanty" will remain uncompleted as a campaign argument.

Henry P. Johnson left on the train last Saturday evening for a short visit in Fisher. He says there is a good deal of threshing yet to be done. Wheatbuyers are complaining about the wheat being damp. They don't buy much, and what they have bought they elevate every day, Sunday not excepted. He returned home on the Tuesday morning train.

There is no pleasure in life if you dread going to the table to eat and can't rest at night on account of indigestion. Henry Williams, of Boonville, Ind., says he suffered that way for years, till he commenced the use of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure, and adds, "Now I can eat anything I like and all I want and sleep soundly every night." Kodol Dyspepsia Cure will digest what you eat. W. A. Schreiter.

Thief River Falls.

F. H. Kratka has returned from St. Paul.

John Forsberg, of New Salam, is in the city.

William Murphy left for Red Lake Falls, on Saturday.

The Commercial Club held a special meeting Friday.

Herman Bishoff, of Red Lake Falls, was an over Sunday visitor.

Morgan Vaughn sent a carload of stock to St. Paul last week.

T. Nolan, of Red Lake Falls, spent a few days in the city this week.

F. Houck moved on the east-side in J. Wright's residence, Monday.

N. W. Tarrent came back from a business visit at Crookston Saturday.

Dr. J. E. Argue is here from Red Lake Falls, to remain for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Fuller left for their claim near Germantown on Saturday.

J. U. Woodrock, of Rhinelander, Wis., is visiting with friends and relatives in the city.

Pat Moylan has engaged Leon DeMars to do some scaling up the river. He left on Saturday.

DeWitt's Little Early Risers are the best liver pills ever made. Easy to take and never gripe. W. A. Schreiter.

Seven carloads of supplies arrived here on Wednesday from Chicago to be shipped to Red Lake via the steamboats.

Dr Hove has sold his entire practice to Dr. Geo. Tupper, of Chicago. His office will be in the rooms over the First State Bank building on Main street.

Many people worry because they believe they have heart disease. The chances are that their hearts are alright but their stomachs are unable to digest food. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat and prevents the formation of gas which makes the stomach press against the heart. It will cure every form of indigestion. W. A. Schreiter.

How to Feed Stock.

Feed of all kind is going to be high this winter, and all who have stock to winter must figure out how to carry their stock through the winter and have them come out in good condition in the spring. Bran and Shorts are the best known feeds for cows, calves, colts and horses and is 33 per cent cheaper than any other kind of feed. One ton of oats at 25c per bushel is worth $15.70. You can buy one ton of Bran and Shorts mixed for $12.50, and save $3.20. But this is not all; 33 per cent of the weight of oats are hulls, that have no more feeding value than the straw. If you take this out of your ton of oats, you have 1334 pounds of feed left. This feed will cost you at the rate of $23.60 per ton. $12.50 for a ton of Bran and Shorts mixed, leaves $11.10 saved on one ton of feed. In other words you can winter your stock on one half the cost by feeding Bran and Shorts. Think it over and then try a ton, and you will always feed Bran and Shorts. We will exchange Bran and Shorts for Oats and Barley at our Mill or at the Crompe Elevator.

A GIRL OF SPIRIT.

Attorney General Griggs Ably Assisted by His Daughter.

In all Washington it would be impossible to find a brighter, more cheerful household than that of the judicial head of our government. Attorney General Griggs, like most New Jerseymen, is very domestic in his tastes and likes best to get away from his official cares and worries and seclude himself in his own home. His household consists of eight—himself, his wife, who is his second, his two sons and his four daughters.

MISS HELEN GRIGGS.

Secretary Griggs' four daughters range from Helen, the eldest, a remarkably handsome girl of 21, to Baby Elizabeth, about 5 years of age. They are fond of society, but are very far from being mere butterflies. Miss Helen Griggs is a young woman of the most artistic tastes, which have been carefully cultivated, although she is not a college graduate. Some time ago, to the surprise and amusement of her friends, she took up the study of stenography, in which she speedily became proficient. At the same time she acquired a knowledge of business.

Miss Griggs has turned her accomplishments to good account, for she is her father's "right hand man." She is the invariable companion of her learned parent, who frequently asks her opinion on vexed points and often accepts her suggestions.

BARRIE AND HIS NEW BOOK.

Many and Great Successes of the Brilliant Scotch Author.

James Matthew Barrie, the Scotch author, who has delighted so many thousands of Americans with his stories of Scottish life as well as by his dramatized novel, "The Little Minister," has just issued another book. "Tommy and Grizel," his latest work, has been running for some months in an American magazine and has just been issued in book form. It is the literary sensation of the hour. In it the delightful Scotchman continues the adventures of "Sentimental Tommy," and it promises to become as great a favorite with Americans as the former work.

JAMES MATTHEW BARRIE.

Mr. Barrie is a man of 40 and was born among the Scottish scenes which he depicts so well. Kirriemuir, in Forfarshire, is the original of the well beloved town of Thrums and the birthplace of the novelist. There and in the ancient town of Dumfries Barrie obtained his education until he went up to Edinburgh. During his university days and even at an earlier period his pen was kept busy, and after his graduation in 1882 he became a journalist. While writing for the press he gained the experiences described so well in "When a Man's Single."

The maelstrom of London soon sucked him in, as it does almost every author and journalist of note in Britain. Barrie's first book, "Better Dead," which appeared in 1887, attracted little attention, but "Auld Licht Idylls" and "When a Man's Single" in 1888 gained quick recognition. His other works, "My Lady Nicotine," a most delightful volume, and "The Little Minister," too well known to need comment, established his reputation on a firm footing.

MORE FIRES

J. A. BRAY'S HARDWARE STORE DESTROYED TUESDAY NIGHT.

THE BUILDING A TOTAL LOSS, GREAT WORK BY THE DEPARTMENT.

With the advent of winter fires are becoming quite common. Sunday night H. F. Krueger's confectionery was the scene of a slight conflagration. He had closed early, and had placed his fruit near the stove, covering it with a carpet, which was soon ignited. At 7:30 the alarm was given, and the first fire-fighters to arrive on the scene saw conveniently near a can containing what they thought was water. Throwing this over the flames, it proved to have been kerosene oil. This gave the fire an impetus, but the flames were extinguished by the crowd that gathered. The damage did not exceed fifty dollars, and was fully covered by insurance.

Tuesday night fire was discovered in the rear of O'Brien Bros.' store, which was caused by throwing ashes containing live coals among the rubbish near the ware house. No damage resulted.

At twelve o'clock the same night the store building occupied by J. A. Bray as a hardware store was discovered to be on fire. The flames could be seen through the windows in the second story, and it is said the fire originated there. Ten minutes after the alarm was given the fire department had a stream of water playing on the flames, and such effective work was done that though this building is in the centre of a frame row, the flames were confined to it, and but comparativly little damage was done to the surrounding buildings. It was a marvel of effective work, and the fire department is entitled to the unstinted praise that is being heaped upon it. J. A. Bray's stock was totally destroyed. Mr. Bray estimates its value at $3,500. He carried $2,500 insurance. The building, also totally destroyed, is the property of J.A. Duffy. Value $1,500, insurance $500. The Kaufer building, to the north, occupied by Philip Chayer, was damaged some, and Mr. Chayer's loss on liquors is said to be several hundred dollars. The Duffy building to the south was also damaged, but the contents escaped, although nearly all the goods were removed. The lumber office across the street got quite a scorching before the water was turned on.

The Mission at St. Mary's Church.

The Mission at St. Mary's church was a remarkable religious event, and has conveyed to many a new idea as to the meaning of the term. For a week, beginning on Sunday, Nov. 11, and terminating on Sunday the 18th inst., there was a constant pilgrimage to the church, from 5:30 in the morning to late in the evening. There were three masses daily, three sermons until Sunday, when no less than six sermons were preached by the two missionaries, Fathers Augustine and Alfred. Conspicuous among the events were the conferences for the young ladies, married ladies, young men and married men. These conferences were simply sermons on the duties of the different states of life. Both missionaries were very able men, and it is interesting to note that so evenly balanced are their talents, that the end of the mission saw it a tie as to which had made the best impression. The closing exercises were held Sunday night, with the blessing of the Mission Cross, and various religious articles and the administration of the Papal Benediction. This benediction is one which the Holy Father has authorized to be given at the close of a mission, and is administered by the missionary making the Sign of the Cross over the congregation with a large crucifix. The mission cross is left in the church. It bears the words in large letters "Save your soul."

Fathers Augustine and Alfred left for their respective homes on Monday's Great Northern, carrying the best wishes of hundreds of our citizens, who appreciated their labors here.

Morrison's Views.

G. A. Morrison, speaking of the prospective opening of the Diminished Red Lake Reservation to settlement, says:

"The question of ceding the eleven townships on the west end of the diminished reservation is one in which the Indians will have to be treated with directly, and they are not likely to favor the project. If the land could be allotted to the minors of the tribe and leased to farmers, it might then be tilled and become productive. The Indians object to taking their allotments, though, unless the remainder of the reservation can be secured to them, or its value be placed in a fund for their benefit. The land sought to be opened is about all the good agricultural district there is on their reserve, and I'm afraid it will be a long time before it can be opened to homesteads for the whites."

"The impression has gained," said he, "that the Red Lake Indians of Northern Minnesota are decreasing in numbers. The contrary is true, however. Ten years ago the band numbered less than 1,200, and the June census showed an enrollment of 1,349. To these have been added a few who are the offsprings of Indian mothers, who have married whites and moved to other portions of the state, but who have rights equal with those who remain. Then too the birth rate is increasing, and at the present time there are 1,380 members of the Red Lake band.

"At the village across the lake there are about three hundred, and it is for these that the new government school has been erected. The 'Cross Lakers have been represented as being adverse to accepting the conditions of civilization, but this is not true. They have adopted the white man's garb, and there is now but one 'blanket' Indian among them, an old man 80 years of age. They are really more industrious than those living about the agency, and have never been in a starving condition. They raise considerable corn and add to their clearings and fields each year."

Mr. Morrison is the overseer at the Red Lake agency, and is well qualified to speak on matters effecting the Indians.

Serious Accident.

Jas. McPeek, who was employed on the Great Northern section running north from this city met with a serious accident Saturday night, as the crew were returning from work. He was sitting with his feet hanging from the hand car, clearing the track of snow as the car slowly progressed, when his left foot caught under the wheel, pulling him off. The car, with its five occupants, ran over his leg and abdomen, and was thrown by the shock off the track. He did not lose consciousness, but was nearly dead when picked up, and suffered great pain until yesterday, when he got his first rest. No bones were broken, and although severe internal injuries, chief of which was injury to his kidneys, resulted, the doctors say he will recover. How such an accident could occur without broken bones and death as a result is the mystery. The Maccabees are looking after the invalid.

BIG DEAL COMPLETED

GREAT NORTHERN SECURED CONTROL OF NORTHERN PACIFIC.

Statement Made by One of the High Executive Officials of the Latter Road. Intervention Asked by the Orinoco Company—Minnesota's Inebriate "Gold Cure" Unconstitutional—State Sale of Timber—General State News.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—The Mail and Express prints the following:

Two gigantic railroad deals involving the Northern Pacific, Great Northern and Union Pacific on one hand, and the Atchison and Southern Pacific railway systems on the other hand, have just been completed and will shortly be announced.

This statement is officially made by one of the highest executive officials of the Northern Pacific railway, who admits his company is about to pass under the control of the Great Northern, according to the long cherished plan of James J. Hill.

Mr. Hill of the Great Northern is acting in close harmony with J. Pierpont Morgan, who is the chief factor in the management of the Northern Pacific, and it is for the purpose of putting through the big combination that the Northern Pacific voting trust has been dissolved. There is to be no consolidation or leasing of one property to another, for Messrs. Hill and Morgan recognize that the laws of certain Western states would not permit of such a thing.

The Plan of Procedure.

Mr. Morgan and Mr. Hill, acting with the Deutche bank of Berlin, which has always been a large owner of Northern Pacific stock, have pooled their interests in Northern Pacific stock and have recently greatly added to their holdings of Northern Pacific shares, until they now have a majority in the great pool. This is to be turned over to the Great Northern, giving the latter control of its rival. The Great Northern, it is believed, will pay for this huge block of Northern Pacific stock by the issue of new Great Northern common stock, or by means of a new security yet to be determined.

The dissolution of the Northern Pacific trust, which becomes effective on Jan. 1 next, instead of a year later, as originally proposed, will permit the distribution of the stock of the company as above proposed, and enable J. J. Hill to take control of the property.

As Hill and several of his friends will enter the directory of the North. Pacific, some of Mr. Morgan's associates in the Northern Pacific will be elected directors of the Great Northern.

VENEZUELAN CONCESSION.

Faribault Company Asks for American Intervention.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—The state department has received notice from an attorney for the Faribault company of the purpose of that concern to submit a formal application for the intervention of the United States government in its behalf to prevent the loss of its concession in Venezuela.

Minister Loomis is now in Washington and he will acquaint himself with the case and probably submit it to the Venezuelan government when he returns to Caracas in about a week, providing it is deemed proper to present it at all. So far as the department is advised up to this moment, there has been no such denial of justice by the Venezuelan government as would warrant a protest and in its present aspect the matter is really a contest between two private organizations for the same valuable commercial privileges. When it shall appear that the Venezuelan courts either have declined to act or have denied justice the department will act. Meanwhile the Venezuelan government has been asked to see that justice is done in the courts.

LAW UNCONSTITUTIONAL.

Minnesota Inebriates Cannot Be Treated at Public Expense.

ST. PAUL, Nov. 17.—The state supreme court has decided that the Minnesota "jag law" is unconstitutional, because it applies only to counties of over 50,000 population, and it is limited in its benefits to a certain number in each county, one per year to each 10,000 of population, to be exact.

The action upon which the decision was rendered came up from Ramsey county, where Edwin Murray, proprietor of the Murray institute for the care of inebriates, sued the county commissioners for fees.

The law provides that in counties of over 50,000 population, indigent inebriates, upon proper petition signed by some friend or relative may be treated at a private institution, and the expense shall be borne by the county.

STATE SALE OF TIMBER.

Minnesota Realizes More Than Four Hundred Thousand Dollars.

ST. PAUL, Nov. 17.—Eighty million feet of standing timber was sold at public auction by State Auditor R. C. Dunn Wednesday in the house of representative's chamber at the state capitol. More than $400,000 was realized, of which $100,000 was immediately paid into the state treasury under a ruling that 25 per cent of the purchase price must accompany successful bids.

No timber sale ever held by the state brought in so much money. The prices paid were phenomenal, averaging about $5.50 a thousand feet, which is more than twice as much as the average price received at the last stumpage sale, two years ago.

Duluth Cuts the Price of Gas.

DULUTH, Nov. 15.—The city announces a reduction in the price of gas to $1.25 per 1,000 feet net. It has been $1.40. On consumption to exceed 2,500 feet the net price is still lower. For fuel purposes gas costs $1.20 net.

CHARGED TO NEGLECT.

Le Sueur, Minn., Excited Over a Child's Death From Diphtheria.

LE SUEUR, Minn., Nov. 15.—The town is very much excited over the death of Mabel Habien, daughter of John Habien, lately of Morristown. They are Dowieites, and the only thing done for the child was to get J. W. Crane of Windom, a deacon of the church, to lay hands on her.

The jury brought in a verdict of death from neglect and recommended the prosecution of Habien and Crane, and the case will be brought before the grand jury. As the child died from diphtheria, the city will issue warrants as soon as the parties are out of quarantine, for violation of the health ordinance.

LARGE DEAL IN PINE.

Muscatine (Ia.) Lumbermen to Acquire Pine in the Rainy River Country.

DULUTH, Nov. 20.—Muscatine (Ia.) lumbermen are consummating a deal whereby they will acquire 210,000,000 feet of pine north of Duluth. The pine is owned by Cook & Turrish, the Duluth pine land men, who are behind the great project of railing logs from the Rainy river country on the Canadian border to Stillwater. The 210,000,000 feet in question will be railed through Duluth to Stillwater and thence by river to Muscatine. The deal involves about $750,000. W. P. Wheelihan of Necedah, Wis., has sold 50,000,000 feet of pine in Lake county to Alger, Smith & Co. for $200,000.

J. J. HILL TO RETIRE.

Said His Son Will Become President of the Great Northern.

ST. PAUL, Nov. 20.—The report, is again current that President James J. Hill of the Great Northern will soon retire and assume the chairmanship of the board of directors. His son, James N. Hill, is mentioned as his successor to the Great Northern presidency. Some of the higher officials in St. Paul credit the story, which was revived early this week, when Louis Hill was brought from Duluth to St. Paul and made president of the Eastern Minnesota. Some weeks ago the Great Northern directors elected James N. Hill president of the Montana Central.

MISS SMITH INDICTED.

Tracy (Minn.) Girl Charged With Raising a Postal Order.

MANKATO, Minn., Nov. 14.—The United States court convened in Mankato during the afternoon, and later the grand jury presented its report and was discharged. It brought in two indictments against Miss Martha Smith, daughter of a well-to-do farmer residing near Tracy, who is charged with raising a 25-cent postal order to $69.25, in order to purchase a gold watch and chain of a Chicago house last July.

Miss Smith plead guilty to having forged the money order and was fined $200.

JAMES KITTSON SUICIDES.

Son of the Late Commodore Kills Himself at Norristown, Pa.

NORRISTOWN, Pa., Nov. 19.—James E. Kittson, formerly one of the proprietors of the Kittson stock farm on Chestnut Hill, Pa., and a son of the late Commodore Kittson of St. Paul, committed suicide by shooting himself with a rifle. Mr. Kittson did not make his appearance at breakfast and when a search was made his body was found in his bedroom. Ill health is believed to have prompted him to take his life.

FILIPINOS COMING.

Eight of Them Will Attend Normal Schools in Minnesota.

DULUTH, Nov. 19.—At the meeting of the state normal school board here it was resolved to allow four Filipinos free tuition at each of the state normal schools at St. Cloud and Winona. The request came from Commissioner of Education Atkinson at Manila.

Collision at Northeast Minneapolis.

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 15.—An outgoing passenger train on the Soo line crashed into a Northern Pacific switching train in the Northern Pacific yards in Northeast Minneapolis. The passengers on the train were badly shaken up, the pilot of the engine smashed and three freight cars demolished. There were great possibilities for a disastrous wreck, but this was escaped by the fact that the passenger train was moving very slowly at the time.

Plunges One Hundred and Fifty Feet.

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 20.—Weakened bodily and mentally by long illness and by devoting much time to spiritualism, Selma Osted, 28 years of age, leaped to her death from the east end of the Northern Pacific bridge into the river, a distance of 150 feet. The girl had been suffering from mental trouble for nearly a week, and it was feared that she would attempt to take her life if left alone.

Lake Fleet Transferred.

DULUTH, Nov. 18.—It is reported among vessel men here that the Bessemer Steamship company, of which John D. Rockefeller owns practically all the stock, has transferred the big fleet of whalebacks to the Consolidated Iron Mines, of which Mr. Rockefeller owns about all the stock. About 90 per cent of the fleet, of which there are 30 whalebacks and an equal number of other large steamers, has been idle all summer.

Men Perished in the Flames.

WEST SUPERIOR, Wis., Nov. 20.—In a fire which destroyed Charles Ward's barber shop here, a man lying in a bed in the back room was burned to a crisp. It was supposed that the remains were those of Ward himself, but the coroner has as yet been unable to determine.

Herdey, Wis., Badly Scorched.

NEW RICHMOND, Wis., Nov. 20.—Through a fire, the origin of which is unknown, the principal part of the business portion of the village of Herdey, on the main line of the Omaha, was wiped out. Evans & Co., general merchants, were the heaviest losers.

THE TROTTING RECORD.

Alcidalia's 2:12 at Brockton, Mass., Oct. 4 is the trotting race record of the year for a half mile track.

It is said that $504,713 was recently bet in the mutual pools in one day at Paris on the running races.

The Axtell-Huma colt belonging to Mr. Kendall trotted a mile in 2:12 at Terre Haute recently in a workout.

The new pacer Salinas, 2:22, is by Donum, 2:19, son of Nelson, 2:09, and his dam is Lilly Mack, 2:24, by Auctioneer Johnny.

A green 3-year-old filly by Oakland Baron, 2:09¼, out of a Strathmore mare, recently trotted a trial at Lexington, Ky., in 2:18¼.

Ollie Graves owns a yearling sister to the phenomenal 2-year-old pacing filly Alice Mapes, 2:14¾, public trial 2:09½, that has shown him a half in 1:13.

At Hastings, Mich., the other day, Captain Sphinx, by Sphinx, won the free for all pace in 2:13½, 2:15¼, 2:16¼, lowering the track record five full seconds.

The fast new California pacer Fredericksburg, 2:12, is by Nephew, Jr., sire of Ottinger, 2:09¾, out of a mare by Hubbard, thoroughbred son of Planet.

Baron Hunter, by Baron Jean, full brother to Baron Belt, 2:20½, owned by J. A. Hunter of Durham, Ont., is going very fast at the trot and will be out for the money next year.

Roy Moore has straightened out the pacing mare Dame Trot, 2:23¼, by Allie Wilkes, so that she does not now wear hobbles, and he has stepped her a mile in 2:[illegible] without them.

One of the sensational green pacers of the season in New England is the 4-year-old gelding Carmine, 2:10½. He is by Symboleer, 2:09½, who once broke the race record for 2-year-old pacers, out of Dauntless Bess, 2:21¾, by Dock. —Horse Review.

THE GLASS OF FASHION.

Gathered skirts with tunics puffed on the hips are among the possibilities for winter in full dress costumes.

The latest street glove is of heavy skin fastened with one large pearl stud. Sometimes gold studs are used.

This will be a great season for buttons. Small ones by the dozen are used for dress trimmings, and large ones form special ornamentation.

The picturesque girl hails with delight the return of the velvet blouse, which certainly is one of the prettiest and most becoming of garments.

One of the new hats is a three cornered felt of light gobelin blue trimmed with shaded mauve roses arranged in separate bunches and massed somewhat more profusely at the left corner.

The most novel bolero has a watteau plait in the back. This style is not to be commended to the stout woman. The belted bolero set into a band at the waist also is fashionable and is decidedly smart in appearance.

Gay colored silk linings to tailor made gowns are now passe, and black cloth is invariably lined with black. Colored cloths have the linings to match as nearly as possible, and very dark colors have black linings.

A new tailor gown has the skirt fastened in front with interlacing of black silk cord and black satin buttons. The jacket has revers, collar and cuffs of white stitched cloth and is cut in Eton fashion, ending at the waist line.

East Indian silk handkerchiefs are being utilized by fashionable women as shirt waists and are exceedingly bright and effective. They are made with narrow vest and collar of solid color, frequently black, or it may be of the tint predominating in the handkerchief.—New York Tribune.

ORCHARD AND GARDEN.

For market choose such varieties as bear heavy crops of salable apples.

All young trees should be well protected from rabbits early in the fall.

Before setting out trees dig holes broad enough for the roots without bending.

For house plants during the winter land plaster makes a good, convenient fertilizer.

The more an orchard is cropped the more manure will be required to grow good fruit.

House plants should have as much sun and light during the winter months as possible.

The leaves of house plants should be kept clean and frequently sprinkled with water.

Mulching should not be done until the ground is frozen hard enough to bear up a wagon well.

Protection to half hardy plants should not be applied until the weather becomes cool in the fall.

Some new planting of fruits should be done every year. Old sorts occasionally die out and need replacing either with the same kinds or with newer and better ones. Give the preference to well tried and proved kinds.—St. Louis Republic.

APHORISMS.

Early home associations have a potent influence upon the life of the state. —Child.

Consider it a crime to injure a brother, even though he be unbrotherly.—Seneca.

God gives every bird its food, but he does not throw it into the nest.—J. G. Holland.

The secret of success in life is for a man to be faithful to all his duties and obligations.—Disraeli.

The man who thinks himself inferior to his fellows deserves to be and generally is.—William Black.

Humility is a divine veil which covers our good deeds and hides them from our eyes.—St. John Climacus.

ARNOLD'S FLAGSHIP.

Relics of the Historic Ship Congress to Be Preserved.

After lying at the bottom of Lake Champlain for 122 years Benedict Arnold's flagship, the Congress, has been restored to the upper world. It was in October, 1776, that Arnold, then a trusted officer in the American army, fought a terrible battle in Valcour bay. He succeeded in repulsing the British, but with such severe loss that he judged it best to scuttle his ship in order to prevent its falling into the hands of the enemy. So it was sunk in a little inlet subsequently called by his name.

RELICS OF THE FLAGSHIP CONGRESS

For many years parties of tourists have been in the habit of going out in boats to look down at the decaying hulk, which on bright days could be distinctly seen lying on the sands. Many attempts were made to raise it, and at last William Adams, a local farmer, assisted by Millard F. Barnes and others, recovered what was left of the venerable relic, which now rests in Mr. Adams' farmyard. Of course after that crowds of visitors and relic hunters thronged to the spot, and the latter were so persistent that large pieces of the old ship were stolen, and it was in a fair way of being carried off altogether. When this came to the ears of the members of the New York Historical society, they decided to build a museum at Caldwell, on Lake George, where the remains of the gallant ship may rest in peace free from the knives and axes of vandals.

TROUBLES OF A PRINCESS.

Great Nations Try to Separate Mother and Son.

The little kingdom of Roumania, in southeastern Europe, bids fair to become a veritable storm center in the near future. And it will be no tempest in a teapot if it does come, for Russia, Germany, Austria and England are closely interested in the quarrel. In all the troubles in the Balkan states of recent years women have been very prominent, and the present imbroglio is no exception. In this affair the woman in the case is an exceedingly pretty and charming young princess of 25, a granddaughter of Queen Victoria and therefore a cousin of Emperor William of Germany.

PRINCESS OF ROUMANIA AND HER CHILDREN

The king of Roumania, Charles I, is 61 years of age and has no issue to succeed him on the throne. In 1881, therefore, Prince Ferdinand of Hohenzollern, the son of the elder brother of the king, was chosen as his successor. The Roumanian royalties belong to the older line of the Hohenzollern family, while Emperor William is the head of a younger line of the same family. Prince Ferdinand married, in 1892, Princess Marie of Edinburgh, daughter of the late Duke of Saxe-Coburg. Their son, Carol, or Charles, is now seven years of age, and is heir presumptive to the throne of Roumania. His father is consumptive and is not expected to live long.

The present trouble is caused by the attempt of the Roumanian government to remove Prince Carol from the control of his mother. Princess Marie's sympathies are entirely with Russia, which country is seeking a commanding voice in Roumanian affairs, for her mother is a sister of the late czar, Alexander III. The Roumanian government, however, is devoted to Germany and Austria and fears that the princess will influence her child, to whom she is of course passionately devoted, against them. An effort is being made to take the prince entirely from the control and care of his mother, which the high spirited princess has resisted by leaving the country with her children. The sympathies of the people of Roumania are with her and Russia and against the king and the Germans.

met you," said I. "You should have made the jolt very easy."

So we shook hands, and he gave me a cigar, around which was wrapped the check. He winked; then he laughed; and I joined him, though my laughter resembled mirth less than it did the cackle of a hen which was disturbed over the future of her brood. I left him and went down into the wineroom, and ordered a stiff brandy and soda. When that disappeared, I ordered another. I rattled the ice in the glass. "Ha, ha, ha!" I roared as the events of the past 24 hours recurred to me. There must have been a suicidal accent to my laughter, for the bartender looked at me with some concern. I called for another brandy and shot the soda into it myself. I watched the foam evaporate. "Ha, ha, ha!"

"Hard luck?" the bartender asked sympathetically.

"Yes," said I. I seemed to be speaking to several bartenders who looked at me with several varieties of compassion.

"Have another on me," said the bartender.

I had another and went out into the street. I walked down Broadway, chuckling to myself. What a glorious farce it all was! My fortune! Phyllis my wife! What if she had accepted me? I laughed aloud, and people turned and stared at me. Oh, yes! I was to travel and write novels and have my pictures in book reviews and all that! When I arrived at the office, I was on the verge of total insanity. I was obliged to ask the paragrapher to write my next day's leader. It was night before I became rational, and once that, the whole world donned cap and bells and began capering for my express benefit. The more I thought of it the more I laughed. What a whimsical world it was! And was there anything in it so grotesque as my part? I took the check from my pocket and cracked it between my fingers. A cigar was in my mouth. Should I light it with the check? It was for $1,000. After all it was more than I had ever before held in my hand at once. But what was a paltry thousand, aye, a paltry ten thousand, to a man's pride? I bit off the end of my cigar, creased the check into a taper and struck a match. I watched it burn and burn. I struck another. I held it within an inch of the check, but for the life of me I could not light it.

"The devil take it!" I cried. I flung the cigar out of the window and laid the check on my desk. Courage? Why. It needed the courage of a millionaire to light a cigar with a $1,000 check!

The office boy, who came in then, was salvation. The managing editor wanted to see me. I sprang up with alacrity. Anything but the sight of that figure 1 and the three demon eyes of that $1,000 check!

"Winthrop," said the managing editor to me as I entered his office, "you've got to go to London. Hillars has gone under"—

"Not dead!" I cried.

"No, no! He has had to give up work temporarily on account of drink. If it was any other man, I'd throw him over in short order. But I feel sorry for Hillars, and I am going to give him another chance. I want you to go over and take care of him if possible. The London work is not new to you. You can handle that and Hillars too. If you can keep him in check"—

I shuddered. The word "check" jarred on my nerves.

"What's the matter?" asked the editor.

"A temporary chill," I said. "Go on."

"Well, if you can manage to keep him in check for a month or so, he'll be able to get on his feet again. And it will be like a vacation to you. If anything happens to Hillars, you will be expected to remain permanently abroad. Hillars suggested you in his letter. Will you be ready to go next Monday?"

"Tomorrow, if you like," I answered readily enough.

I was much pleased with the turn of events. If I could get away from New York, I might forget Phyllis—no, not forget her; I loved her too well ever to forget her, but the prolonged absence would cure me of my malady.

Before going to bed that night I lit a cigar, but not with the check. On sober second thought I calculated that the sum would pay up all my debts and leave me a comfortable margin. A man can well pocket his pride when he pockets a thousand dollars with it. And why not? I was about to start life anew and might as well begin on a philosophical basis. Who knew but my uncle had foreseen the result of his bequest; my rage, my pride, and finally lighting a cigar with his check? It really might make his spirit writhe to better effect if I became benefited. Sober second thought is more or less a profitable investment.

On the morrow everything was arranged for my departure. I was to leave Saturday morning.

It was a beautiful day, crisp and clear, with a bare ground which rang to the heel. In the afternoon I wandered over to the park and sat down on a bench and watched the skaters as they glided to and fro. I caught myself wishing that I was a boy again, with an hour's romp on the sheeny crust in view. Gradually the mantle of peace fell upon me, and there was a sense of rest. I was going to forgive the world the wrong it had done me. Perhaps it would feel ashamed of itself and reward me for my patience. So Hillars was "going to pieces." It is strange how we men love another who has shared and spent with us our late patrimonies. Hillars and I had been friends since our youth, and we had lived together till a few years back. Then he went to Washington, from there to Paris, thence to London. He was a better newspaper man than I. I liked to dream too well, while he was always for a little action. Liquor was getting the best of him. I wondered why. It might be a woman. There is always one around somewhere when a man's breath smells of whisky. A good deal of this woman's temperance business is caused by remorse. I was drawing aimless pictures in the frozen gravel when I became aware that two skaters had stopped in front of me. I glanced up and saw Phyllis and Ethel, their eyes like stars and their cheeks like roses.

"I was wondering if it were you," said Ethel. "Phyllis, where is my cavalier?"

"I believe he has forsaken us," said the voice of the woman I loved.

"Will you not accept part of the bench?" I asked, moving along.

The girls dropped easily beside me.

"I was just wishing I was a boy again and was in for a game of hockey," said I. "I am going to London on Saturday. Our foreign correspondent has had to give up work on account of ill health."

"You haven't"— Phyllis stopped suddenly.

"Oh, no!" said I intuitively. "I am growing rusty, and they think I need a vacation." I was glad Ethel was there, with her voluble chatter.

"Oh, a foreign correspondent!" she cried.

"Yes."

"You will have a glorious time. Papa will probably return to B. when the next administration comes in. You know papa was there 20 years ago. I suppose you will be hobnobbing with dukes and princes."

"It cannot be avoided," I said gravely. "I do not expect to remain long in London. When my work is done, perhaps I shall travel and complete my foreign polish."

"Oh, yes!" said Phyllis. "I forgot to tell you, Ethel, that a fortune has been left to Jack, and he need not work but for the love of it."

I laughed, but they thought it a self conscious laugh. Somehow I was not equal to the task of enlightening them.

"It is jolly to be rich," said Ethel, clicking her skates together. "It's a bother at times, however, to know what to do with the money. I buy so many things I do not need just because I feel compelled to spend my allowance."

"It must be very inconvenient," I observed.

"And now that you are a man of leisure," said Phyllis, "you will write that book you have always been telling me about?"

"Do you wish it?" I asked.

"I do. What I have always found lacking in you is application. You start out to accomplish something, you find an obstacle in your path, and you do not surmount it. You do not persevere."

My pulse beat quickly. Was there a double meaning to what she said? I could not tell, for her eyes remained averted.

I sighed. "It would be nice to become a successful author, but when a man is as rich as I am, fame tarnishes." I took out an envelope from my pocket.

"What is that?" asked Phyllis.

I turned over the back and showed it to her.

"Figures!" she laughed. "What do they mean?"

"It is what I am going to do with my fortune," said I. I was holding out my vanity at arm's length and laughing at it silently.

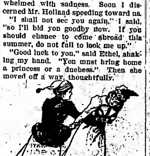
"Your air castles will be realized now," said Phyllis.

"I shall build no more," said I. "The last one gave me a very bad fall."

Phyllis looked away again. A vague perfume from her hair wafted past my nostrils, and for a space I was overwhelmed with sadness. Soon I discerned Mr. Holland speeding toward us.

"I shall not see you again," I said, "so I'll bid you goodby now. If you should chance to come abroad this summer, do not fail to look me up."

"Good luck to you," said Ethel, shaking my hand. "You must bring home a princess or a duchess." Then she moved off a way, thoughtfully.



And then—and then they sped away.

"You must write to me occasionally, Jack," said Phyllis. "If only once a [illegible] shall always be interested in your career." The smile faltered as she put out her gloved hand.

"You will make some man happy, Phyllis," I said.

"Goodby."

"Goodby."

And then—and then they sped away, and I followed them with dimming gaze till I could see them no more. I trudged home.

* * * * * * *

I stood on the upper deck. The spires and domes of the city faded on my sight till all merged into a gray, smoky patch on the horizon. With a dead cigar clinched between my teeth I watched and watched with a callous air, as though there had been no wrench, as though I had not left behind all I loved in the world. And yet I gazed, the keen salt air singing past my ears till there was nothing but the sea as far as the eye could scan.

Thus I began the quest of the elusive, which is a little of love, a little of adventure and a little of all things.

CHAPTER III.

Hillars hadn't been down to the office in two days, so the assistant said.

"Is he ill?" I asked, as I carried a chair to the window.

"Ill?" The young man coughed affectedly.

"Do you believe it possible for him to come in this afternoon?"

"It is quite possible. One does not use the word impossible in regard to Hillars. It is possible that he may be in St. Petersburg by this time, for all I know. You see," with an explanatory wave of the hand, "he's very uncertain in his movements. For the last six months he has been playing all over the table, to use the parlance of the roulette player. I have had to do most of the work and take care of him into the bargain. If I may take you into my confidence"—with some hesitancy.

"Certainly," said I. "I want you to tell me all about him. He was my roommate at college. Perhaps I can straighten him up."

"The truth is, the trouble began last September. He came back from the continent, where he had been on an errand, a changed man. Hillars always drank, but never to an alarming extent. On his return, however, he was in a bad shape. It was nearly November before I got him sobered up, and then he went under on an average of three times a week. I asked him bluntly what he meant by it, and he frankly replied that if he wanted to drink himself to death that was his business. When he isn't half seas over, he is gloomy and morose. From the first I knew that something had gone wrong on the mainland, but I couldn't trap him for a farthing. No man at his age drinks himself to death without cause; I told him so, but he only laughed at me. I'd give a good deal to know what the truth is; not from curiosity, mind you, but to find the disease in order to apply a remedy. Dan's father died of drink."

"No," said I coldly; "he was shot."

"Oh, I know that," was the reply, "but give a conditioned man the same wound and he will recover nine times out of ten. The elder Hillars was so enervated by drink that he had no strength to fight the fever which came on top of the bullet hole. Something happened over there, and it's pounds to pence there's a woman back of the curtain. It is some one worth while. Hillars is not a man to fall in love with a barmaid."

I began to respect the young man's wisdom.

"So you believe it to be a woman?"

"Yes; the wind blows from one point at a time. There are four points to the vane of destiny—there is ambition for glory, ambition for power, ambition for wealth and ambition for love. In Hillars' case, since the wind does not blow from the first three, it must necessarily blow from the fourth. You know him better than I do, so you must certainly know that Hillars is not a man to drink because glory or power or wealth refused to visit him."

"You are a very discerning young man," said I, whereat he laughed. "Did he get my cable?"

"No; I thought that it was some order from headquarters and opened it myself. I put it in his desk. I spoke to him, but he was too drunk to pay any heed to what I said. Well, I must be going. I am getting out a symposium of editorials from the morning papers on the possibility of a Franco-Russian alliance. It must be at the cable office in half an hour. If you are going to wait, you'll find the Berlin and Paris files in the next room. I'll see you later," and he departed.

It was 5 of the clock. The Strand was choked. Here and there I saw the color of martial attire. Save for this and that the buildings were low and solid and that most of the people walked slower, I might have been looking down upon Broadway, for all the change of place I saw. There is not much difference between New York and London except in the matter of locomotion. The American gets around with more rapidity than does his English cousin, but in the long run he accomplishes no more. It is only when one steps on to the continent that the real difference in the human races is discerned. Strange as this may seem, it is not distinguishable in a cosmopolitan city. Suddenly my roving eyes rested upon a familiar face. It was Hillars, and he was pushing rapidly across the street. Any one would have instantly marked him for an American by the nervous stride, the impatience at being obstructed. I went into the fireroom, intending to give him a little surprise. I did not have long to wait. The door to the main office opened, and he came in singing, a snatch from a drinking song we used to sing at college. The rich baritone that had once made the old glee club famous was a bit husky and throaty.

"Dick!" he called. "Hi, Dick! Well, I'm hanged!" Evidently he had discovered my cable.

"Dick isn't in," said I, crossing the threshold.

In a moment our hands were welded together, and we were gazing into each other's eyes.

"You old reprobate!" I cried. "Not to have met me at the station even."

"Bless my soul, Jack, this cable was the first intimation that you were within 3,000 miles of London. But it does my heart good to see you!" pumping my hand again. "Come out to dinner with me. Now don't begin to talk till we've had something to eat. I'm almost famished. I know all the questions you want to ask, but not now. There's a Bohemian joint a block above that'll do your heart good to see. We'll have chops and ale, just like we did in the old days, the green and salad days. I would they were back again," soberly. "Oh, I've a long story to tell you, my son. Time enough when we get to my rooms. But not a word of it now—not a word. It will all be forgotten in ten minutes with you. We'll rake up the old days and live 'em over for an hour or so. I'm glad that I suggested you in my letter. What did the old man say about my nervous prostration?" with half a laugh.

"He put quotation marks around it," I answered. "I wanted to see you particularly. They told me that you were rolling down hill so fast that if some one did not put a fulcrum under you you'd be at the bottom in no time at all. I'm going to be the lever by which you are to be rolled up hill again."

He smiled grimly. "If any one could do that—well, here we are." And we entered the chophouse and took a table in one of the side rooms. "Woods," he said to the waiter, "chops for two, chipped potatoes, and fill up those steins of mine with ale. That will be all. I brought those steins from across, Jack. You'll go crazy over them, for they are beauties."

A college bred bachelor nine times out of ten has a mania for collecting pipes or steins or both. Dan and I had been affected this way. During the year I had studied at Heidelberg I had gathered together some fifty odd pipes and steins. I have them yet, and many a pleasant memory they beget me. As for the steins of Dan, they were beyond compare.

"I'll tell you a story about them," said Dan after he had taken a deep swallow of the amber ale. "Few men can boast of steins like these. Not many months ago there was a party of men and women, belonging to the capital of a certain kingdom, who attended a dinner. It was one of those times when exalted personages divest themselves of the dignity and pomp of court and become free and informal. There were 20 of these steins made especially for the occasion. By a circumstance over which I had no control I was the only alien at this dinner. The steins were souvenirs. How I came by two was due to the lady whom I took down to dinner and who presented hers to me after having—after having—well, kissed the rim. Do you see the crest?" pointing to the exquisite inlaid work.

"Why," I said eagerly, "it is the crest of"—

"Yes, a noted king," Dan completed, "and these were made by his express command. But never mind," he broke off, "it's merely a part of the story I am going to tell you when we get to my rooms. I am always thinking of it, night and day, day and night. Talk to me or I'll be drinking again. This is the first time I've been sober in a month. It's drink or morphine or something like. Do you ever see anything of the old glee boys?"

"Once in awhile. You know," said I, lighting a cigarette, "all the fellows but you and I had money. Most of them are carrying on the business of their paters and ornamenting dinner parties and cotillons."

"I thought that you had a rich uncle," said Dan.

"I did have, but he is no more." And I told him all about the bequest.

He laughed so long and heartily over it that I was glad for his sake that it had happened. Already I was beginning to look wholly upon the humorous side of the affair.

"It is almost too good not to be printed," he said. "But his son may square matters when he dies."

"I do not want matters squared," I growled. "I can earn a living for a few years to come. I shan't worry."

"By the way, is that Miss Landors whom you used to rave about in your letters married yet?"

"No." Miss Landors was Phyllis only to her intimate friends. I called the waiter and ordered him to replenish my stein, Dan watching me curiously the while. "No, Miss Landors is not married yet."

"I have often wondered what she looked like," he mused.

"When do you go on your vacation?" I asked irrelevantly.

"In a week or ten days—maybe tomorrow. It's according to how long I stay sober."

I was sorry that he had recalled to me the name of Phyllis. It dampened my sociability. I was not yet prepared to take him into my confidence. The ale, however, loosened our tongues, and, though we did not talk about our present affairs, we had a pleasant time recounting the days when we were young in the sense that we had no real trouble. Those were the times when we were earning $15 and $20 the week; when our watches were always in durance vile; when we lied to the poor washerwoman and to the landlady; when we would always be "around tomorrow" and "settle up" with our creditors.

"There was no ennui those days," laughed Hillars.

"True. Do you remember the day you stayed in bed because it was cheaper to sleep than work on an empty stomach?"

"And do you remember the time I saved you from jail by giving the sheriff my new spring overcoat to pay a washerwoman's bill of six months' standing?"

"I hung around Jersey City that day," said I. And then there was more ale, and so on. It was 9 when at last we rose.

"Well, we'll go back to the office and get your case," said Dan. "Where's your trunk?"

"At the Victoria."

"All your luggage must be sent to my rooms. I will not hear of your going elsewhere for lodging while in town. I have a floor, and you shall share it. It's a bachelor's ranch from basement to garret, inhabited by artists, journalists, one or two magazine men, a clever novelist and three of our New York men. There is no small fry save myself. We have little banquets every Friday night, and they sometimes last till Saturday noon. I've taught the Frenchman who represents the Paris Temps how to play poker, and he threatens to become my Frankenstein, who will eventually devour me." Hillars laughed, and it sounded like the laughter of other days. "Jack, I think you will do me good. Stay with me and keep me away from the bottle if you can. No man drinks for pure love of liquor. My father never loved it, and God knows what he was trying to forget. For that's the substance of it all, to forget. When you start out to the point of forgetfulness, you must keep it up; regret comes back threefold with soberness. It seems silly and weak for a man who has been buffeted as I have, who is supposed to gather wisdom and philosophy as a snowball gathers snow as it rolls down hill, to try to drown regret and disappointment in liquor. A man never knows how weak he is till he meets the one woman and she will have none of him."

And somehow I got closer to Hillars spiritually. There were two of us, so it seemed, only I was stronger or else my passion did not burn so furiously as his.

The apartments occupied by Dan were all a bachelor could wish for. The walls were covered with photographs, original drawings, beer steins, pipes, a slipper here, a fan there and books and books and books. I felt at home at once.

I watched Hillars as he moved about the room, tidying up things a bit, and I noticed now more than ever how changed he was. His face had grown thin, his hair was slightly worn at the crown and temples, and there were dark circles under his eyes. Yet, for all these signs of dissipation, he was still a remarkably handsome man. Though not so robust as when I last saw him, his form was yet elegant. In the old days we had called him Adonis, and Donie had clung to him long after the Cambridge time.

"I'll tell you why I'm going to the dogs."

"Now," said he when we had lighted our pipes, "I'll tell you why I'm going to the dogs. I've got to tell it to some one or go daft, and I can't say that I'm not daft as it is."

"It is a woman," said I after reflection, "who causes a man to drink, to lose all ambition."

"It is."

"It is a woman," I went on, holding the amber stem of my pipe before the light which gleamed golden through the transparent gum, "who causes a man to pull up stakes and prospect for new claims, to leave the new country for the old."

"It is a woman indeed," he replied. He was gazing at me with a new interest. "If the woman had accepted him he would not have been here."

"No; he would not," said I.

"In either case, yours or mine."

"In either case. Go on with your story. There's nothing more to add to mine."

Some time passed, and nothing but the breathing of the pipes was heard. Now and then I would poke away at the ashes in my pipe bowl, and Dan would do the same.

"Have you a picture of her?" I asked, reaching for some fresh tobacco.

"No; I am afraid to keep one."

To me this was a new phase in the matter of grand passions.

"A likeness which never changes its expression means nothing to me," he explained. "Her face in all its moods is graven in my mind. I have but to shut my eyes, and she stands before me in all her loveliness. Do you know why I wanted this vacation? Rest?" His shoulders went up, and his lips closed tighter. "My son, I want no rest. It is rest which is killing me. I am going across. I am going to see her again, if only from the curb, as she rolls past in her carriage, looking at me, but not recognizing me, telling her footman to brush me aside should I attempt to speak to her. Yet I would suffer this humiliation to see that glorious face once more, to hear again that voice, though it were keyed to scorn. I am a fool, Jack. What, have I gone all these years free heart to love a chimera in the end? Verily I am an ass!

"She is a princess. She has riches. She has a principality. She is the ward of a king. What has she to do with such as I? Three months in the

THE MASON AND DIXON LINE.

Some evil genius has applied the Mason and Dixon Line, with all its nefarious sentiments and suggestions, to the line running east and west across Red Lake county, on the northern boundary of Red Lake Falls township. Two years ago, after the defeat of several would be leaders in the northern portion of Red Lake county, the threat was made that in future the nationality issue would be made the prime factor in county politics, with party and individuality largely eliminated. A union of the north end leaders was to be effected that would make the movement irresistible. The common sense of the people, and some of the party leaders in this county, soon put a quietus to this idea, and this spring when the first county convention was held, it was at once manifest that there was nothing in it, and that the people of Red Lak county were Americans first, and clung to the traditions of their erstwhile nationalities in a secondary sense. The election held on Nov. 6, far from justifying the idea of a Mason and Dixon Line, has served to oblitetate the nationality idea. It is interesting to compare the voting strength north and south of the socalled Mason and Dixon Line. Taking the vote on governor, we find the total strength as follows:

RED LAKE COUNTY'S POPULATION.

The population of Red Lake county, as given out by the director of the census, is 12,195, as against 8,968 as given by the state census in 1895. Red Lake county stands well up in point of population among the 82 counties of the state, there being twenty nine counties with less population, while we have the distinction of being the youngest county in the state, the division propositions in Polk and St. Louis counties having both been defeated, at the last election.

One of the questions that will rouse sectional bitterness between the North and South at the coming session of congress is as to whether the congressional reapportionment shall be based upon the population, or upon the number of qualified electors, according to the last general election. The Republicans as a rule favor the latter plan, on account of the disfranchisement of the Negro in the Southern states, arguing that for political purposes, the voters are the only element of the population to be considered, and that it is not just for the states disfranchising a large percentage of their vote, to have the same proportion of representation as those which do not.

A Vienna doctor says that he has demonstrated that lost hair can be restored by the use of X-rays. He introduced to the society of Vienna a man aged 86, part of whose head had been bald for years. He applied the rays on it occasionally for two months, with the result that hair has grown thickly on the parts treated, the rest of his head remaining bald.

On President Kruger, who has just arrived in Europe, are focused the eyes of the world.

AN IMPORTANT CASE SETTLED.

The damage suit brought jointly by a number of farmers on Clearwater river against Lammers Bros for the overflowing of their lands on account of logging operations along the river conducted by this well known firm of lumbermen, was finally settled here yesterday.

Henry J. Gjertson, of Minneapolis attorney for the land owners; Halvor Steenerson, of Crookston, attorney for the defendants A. J. Lammers of Stillwater, and a number of the farmers interested, were on hand and before night a settlement was made whereby Lammers Bros. pay a certain amount for the alleged damages and the settlers relinquish all claims against the company and agree to bring no action against them in the future.—Thirteen Towns.

EDDY GUARANTEES IT.

The Thief River Falls News says: At the close of the meeting a settler on the reservation asked Mr. Eddy if it were true that the so-called free homes bill was ineffective. This made the plain, blunt representative of the Seventh district a trifle indignant. "I will reimburse out of my own pocket," he said "any settler who is required to pay a dollar outside of the customary land-office fees to secure his land, and there will be no additional legislation required. I do not care so much about the roorbacks that have been circulated over the district, but when the opposition deliberately lies about a thing that is of public record. I object. I have always tried to honestly represent the people of this district, and will continue to do my duty."

This statement, coming after the election, ought to satisfy the few Doubting Thomases remaining.

The Secretary of the Interior has decided to dispose of, at public sale, on December 4, the ceded lands of the Chippewa Indians, adjoining the White Earth and Red Lake reservations in Minnesota. These lands comprise 33,316 acres of agricultural land near the White Earth reservation, and 39,922 acres of pine land containing 76,384,000 feet of pine. The value of this pine land is $231,489. The Red Lake land is 887 acres of pine, containing 488,000 feet, valued at $1,485. The aggregate area of land to be disposed of is 74,125.

JOHN C. WISE, DECEASED.
Founder of the Mankato Review.

It is a positive pleasure to quote the following tribute to Mr. Wise from the pen of Editor Sinclair of the Winona Republican:

From long personal knowledge of the man and his professional work, the Republican does not hesitate to say that John C. Wise was one of the noblest characters that ever represented and adorned the journalism of this state: Though a strict partisan in matters of conviction and belief, he was fair, candid, just and even generous towards his political opponents. Noted for the integrity and uprightness of his character, in all the relations of life he was a model citizen, who leaves behind him a good and savory memory.

The editor of this paper knew Mr. Wise well. His paper, the Review, was published in our native city, and was the first newspaper read by the writer. Only last March he was on the editorial excursion to New Orleans, occupying a neighboring section to ours. And now he is gone! May he find the reward his noble life merited.

The family have gone to housekeeping in the Wm. Zaiser residence on Hamilton av. Mr. Sather is the book-keeper at the Bank of Red Lake Falls.

L. T. Bergh, the hunting collector, was in the city today, and reports that his neighbor, L. T. Bramsness, was burnt out of house and home early Monday morning. The fire started in the roof, and the building was soon in ruins. But little of the household effects were saved, and as there was no insurance, the loss is doubly hard. Mr. Bramsness has a host of friends throughout the county who will be grieved at his ill fortune.

C. G. Rapp, who was elected representative from this district after a close and exciting three-cornered fight, was in the city Monday. Mr. Rapp takes his success very sensibly, and far from being puffed up over it, avers that his waist band measures several inches less than it did before the campaign. He will make a capable and hard working member of the House, and says he will be only too glad to receive advice from this as well as other portions of the district, which also includes Beltrami county.

P. E. Fohloe is displaying a line of silverware that is calculated to interest all those who are contemplating purchasing Christmas gifts that will be useful as well as ornamental. His stock is unusually large, and embraces some of the prettiest pieces ever seen. The goods are warranted by one of the largest and most substantial firms of manufacturers in the United States. Besides this stock of up-to-date silver-ware he is showing an immense assortment of jewelry of all kinds, from the most inexpensive little ornaments, to costly articles. His stock ought to be examined thoroughly by the thoughtful buyer before making Christmas selections.

Miss Mamie Kaufer will have occasion to remember her nineteenth birthday anniversary with pleasure. It occurred on Tuesday, and as the young lady was about to retire, members of the Bon Ton Cooking Club, accompanied by their gentlemen friends, samples of their cooking, and a beautiful watch chain, as a gift to the surprised hostess, appeared. The evening was spent most merrily, and all present voted the affair a success, and the verdict of the gentlemen was to the effect that if the cakes and other delicacies were actually the product of the Bon Ton Cooking Club, and not the result of mothers' efforts, the progress being made was something marvelous and highly creditable. Those present were: Misses Alice Buse, Josephine Kuns, May Buse, Rachel Taylor, Allie Newton, Lillie Buse, Mabel Owen, [illegible] Schreiter, Bessie Hunt; Messrs. [illegible] J. J. Padden, Jas. Taylor, H. H. Zaller, Milton Cousrse, Geo. Hennings, Wm. McIntyre, Ralph Wyer, Ernest Buse, Sam Hunt.

We are in receipt of our eighth annual Thanksgiving turkey from Joseph Ducharme, our good friend of Badger Creek. We appreciate the turkey, and the friendship that prompts its offering is still more highly prized.

Chicago streets are a wonderful sight at Christmas time. You can stop a couple of days in Chicago and see the Christmas shops and theatres if you buy your ticket via the Great Northern Railway. Tickets on sale from Dec. 3rd to Dec. 31st. $40.00 for the round trip.

The sad intelligence of the death of Miss Gertrude Ryan reached this city Monday, in a telegram to her sister, Mrs. F. A. Grady. Miss Ryan's death was sudden, from heart failure induced by dropsy. She was well known and popular here, and the news of her death has been a great shock not only to relatives, but to her friends as well.

A special meeting of the Board of Trade will be held Monday night, at which a full attendance is desired. At this meeting the Board of Directors will be chosen, and other important matters will come up. Every business man having the advancement of the city at heart should attend these meetings. In future, at the time of the meetings, the city bell will give four taps, then a pause, and again four taps, at exactly a quarter to eight. The meeting will be held at eight sharp. It is especially desired that all be present at the opening of the meeting.

NEWS IN MINNESOTA

Southern Minnesota teachers met at Mankato last week.

Solomon Schmidt, aged 40, committed suicide at his home near Lake City, last week.

The record of fire losses shows that 1900 was the worst year in the history of St. Paul.

An accident to the Apple river electric supply caused darkness in St. Paul Sunday night.

Suit has been brought at Duluth to compel the admission of unvaccinated children to school.

John C. Wise, editor of the Mankato Review and a pioneer Minnesota newspaper man, died suddenly Saturday.

John Butler, a resident of St. Paul for 30 years, was found dead in bed Saturday. Heart disease was the cause.

Lyman P. Hoyt, a prominent dairyman of Fridley, Anoka county, had his left arm caught in a corn sheller. Dr. Frank of Anoka amputated it at the elbow.

A new lumber company has been organized at Winona. The company is known as the Laird-Norton yards, and has been incorporated with a capital stock of $300,000.

The supreme court has reversed the lower court and has granted a retrial of the suit of G. F. Spinney, formerly managing editor of the St. Paul Globe, against J. J. Hill.

The Warren Manufacturing company of Warren lost its mill by fire Thursday morning. The total loss is $25,000, insurance $15,000. The fire is supposed to be of incendiary origin.

Dr. W. R. Mahan is dead at Mankato, aged 84 years. He located in that city in 1855 and was the first physician in Blue Earth county. He was a member of the first constitutional convention.

E. B. Shaw, an elderly gentleman, attempted to stop a runaway team at Rochester but was thrown down and run over. His skull was fractured, and it is feared the accident will prove fatal.

Andrew Rozek of Winona was struck and instantly killed by a passenger train on the Milwaukee road as he was crossing the tracks at what is known as the Rock road. Mr. Rozek was prominent in Polish circles.

Joel P. Dibble, one of the very earliest settlers of Olmsted county, is dead at his home in Rochester at the age of 82. Mr. Dibble settled in Olmsted county in 1845, before Rochester was begun and had lived there ever since.

The case of the state against Charles Campbell, charged with murder for the killing of Henry Scott in DeGraff, came to an end at Benson Saturday, after four days' trial. The jury thought Campbell was justified in what he did.

Effie Sykes, 19 years old, committed suicide at Le Sueur Center. She was an orphan, living with an aunt. A theft of $40 in money lost by her grandfather, was charged to her. She denied the offense and was so chagrined she took carbolic acid.

A verdict has been given Miss Minnie Swanson of Cannon Falls of $3,000 against Swan K. Swanson of Kenyon for breach of promise. He admitted that they were engaged, but swore that the engagement was broken by mutual consent last March.

A Chicago papermaking concern has just closed the purchase at Duluth of 9,000 cords of pulp wood, to be delivered at a mill near that city this winter. The price per cord, delivered, is about $8.50. It will take 150 men all winter to cut this amount.

State Auditor Dunn has received a report on the sale of state school lands in Roseau county, held Nov. 1. The report says that 13 230 acres of land, on which the delinquent principal amounted to $70,047 were disposed of making one of the best sales on record

The supreme court has ruled that the legislative enactment for the cure of in[illegible]es, commonly known as the "ja[illegible] law," is unconstitutional, in that it is special legislation as to the affairs of counties and is not uniform in its operation throughout the state.

Miss Martha Schmidt, the 15-year-old daughter of Mr. Schmidt, who resides three miles from Tracy, and is a wealthy and influential farmer, pleaded guilty in the United States court at Mankato to having forged a money order. Judge Lochren fined her $200.

It is again asserted that the Northern Pacific and Great Northern have formed a combination. This statement is officially made by one of the highest executive officials of the Northern Pacific, who admits that his company is about to pass under the control of the Great North[illegible].

James E. Kittson, formerly one of the proprietors of the Kittson stock farm on Chestnut Hill, Pa., and a son of the late Commodore Kittson of St. Paul, committed suicide at Norristown, Pa., by shooting himself with a rifle. Ill health is believed to have prompted him to take his life.

The saw mills of Laird, Norton & Co., and the Empire Lumber company, located in Winona, have shut down for the season. These are the largest saw mills on the Mississippi between Minneapolis and Dubuque, and their closing means that 700 men will be thrown out of employment.

J. J. Sutton of Augusta, indicted for manslaughter at Warren, has been discharged. Judge Watts held that the evidence was insufficient. Sutton was charged with causing the death of W. W. Swift of Minneapolis, who died suddenly at Argyle a few weeks ago, but the court held the evidence worthless.

Eighty million feet of standing timber was sold at public auction by State Auditor R. C. Dunn Wednesday in the house of representative's chamber at the state capitol. More than $400,000 was realized, of which $100,000 was immediately paid in the state treasury under a ruling that 25 per cent of the purchase price must accompany successful bids.

Burlington Route

Canadian Excursions.

If you are going to Eastern Canada this winter, it will help you to read and act on this Important Information.

The Best Route for comfort and quick time is by way of St. Paul and Chicago—through the States.

The Best Railroad is the Burlington, because its accommodations are excellent, its tracks smooth and connections sure.

Reclining Chair Cars are run on all Burlington Route trains, and no extra charge is made for seats. They are more roomy and comfortable than similar cars on other lines. Uniformed porters are in attendance to insure the comfort of travelers.

Leaving St. Paul.—Burlington trains leave St. Paul at 8:15 a. m. except Sunday, and 8:05 p. m. daily, arriving at Chicago in ample time to connect with the most convenient trains for Canadian points.

The Cost.—The price of a ticket to Montreal—or any place west of that city—and return, will be only Forty Dollars.

Tickets can be purchased of your home ticket agent, who will cheerfully give rates and informations. Patrons should ask for and see that their tickets read via the Burlington Route, between St. Paul and Chicago.

A Head

that throbs, pains and aches, or feels heavy, stuffy, dull or dizzy, is a poor head to do business with. It irritates the temper, upsets the stomach, interferes with digestion and wears out the brain and nerves. Make the nerves strong, the brain clear and your head will be right.

"Years of headache made me nervous, irritable and unfit for business; but when I began taking Dr. Miles' Nervine I found permanent relief. Nothing equals it for overworked nerves, aches, or head troubles of any kind." THOS. W. FRAME, Davis, Ind. Ter.

Dr. Miles'

Nervine

quiets the irritation, stimulates digestion and builds up nervous health and strength. Try a bottle.

Story of a Slave.

To be bound hand and foot for years by the chain of disease is the worst form of slavery. George D. Williams, of Manchester, Mich., tells how such a slave was made free. He says: "My wife has been so helpless for five years that she could not turn over in bed alone. After using two bottles of Electric Bitters she is wonderfully improved and able to do her own work." This remedy for female diseases quickly cures nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, headache, backache, fainting and dizzy spells. This miracle working medicine is a godsend to weak, sickly, run down people. Every bottle guaranteed. Only 50 cents. Sold by W. A. Schreiter, Druggist.

Prevented A Tragedy.

Timely information given Mrs. Geo. Long, of New Straitsville, Ohio, prevented a dreadful tragedy and saved two lives. A frightful cough had long kept her awake every night. She had tried many remedies and doctors but steadily grew worse until urged to try Dr. King's New Discovery. One bottle wholly cured her, and she writes this marvelous medicine also cured Mr. Long of a severe attack of Pneumonia. Such cures are positive proof of the matchless merit of this grand remedy for curing all throat, chest and lung troubles. Only 50c and $1.00. Every bottle guaranteed. Trial bottle free at W. A. Schreiter's Drug Store.

You can't afford to risk your life by allowing a cough or a cold to develop into pneumonia or consumption. One Minute Cough Cure will cure throat and lung troubles quicker than any other preparation known. Many doctors use it as a specific for grippe. It is an infallible remedy for croup. Children like it and mothers endorse it. W. A. Schreiter.

TIME AND SPACE are practically annihilated by the ocean cables and land telegraph systems which now belt the circumference of Old Earth in so many different directions. "Foreign parts" are no longer foreign in the old meaning of the term. Europe, Africa, Asia, are "next door" to us. What happens there to-day we know to-morrow—if we read THE CHICAGO RECORD, whose Special Cable Correspondents are located in every important city in the world outside of the United States. No other American newspaper ever attempted so extensive a service; and it is supplemented by the regular foreign news service of The Associated Press. For accurate intelligence of the stirring events which are shaking the nations—of wars and rumors of wars—of the threatening dissolution of old governments and the establishment of new—of the onward sweep of the race in all parts of the world—the one medium of the most satisfactory information is the enterprising, "up-to-date" American newspaper, THE CHICAGO RECORD.

FREE A large map of the world on Mercator's Projection, about 23½x16 inches in size, beautifully printed in colors, with a large-scale map of Europe on the reverse side, will be mailed to any address free of charge on receipt of request accompanied by two 2-cent stamps to cover postage and wrapping. The maps illustrate clearly how comprehensively the special cable service of THE CHICAGO RECORD covers the entire civilized world. Address THE CHICAGO RECORD, 181 Madison street, Chicago.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

FOREIGN NEWS.

The czar of Russia is ill with typhoid fever.

The condition of the czar continues to improve.

Great Britain intends to float another loan for war expenses.

Influenza is again epidemic throughout Germany, especially in Berlin.

Reports received from Vienna and Rome assert the czar's illness is due to poisoning.

In the legislative assembly of Victoria a resolution expressing want of confidence in the government was adopted 51 to 42.

The bubonic plague has broken out among the natives near King Williamstown, Cape Colony. Three deaths have already occurred.

While driving in an open carriage at Breslau Emperor William was the object of an attack by an insane woman, who threw a hatchet at him. The weapon struck the vehicle but none of the occupants were injured.

Europe is alarmed over the illness of the czar of Russia. It is generally felt at the present critical state of international affairs that even a temporary weakening of the influence of so favorable a factor in the maintenance of the world's peace justifies grave anxiety.

BRITISH-BOER WAR NEWS.

Lord Kitchener has decided to depopulate several towns in the Transvaal and concentrate the people in cities, owing to the difficulty in handling the Boers who are hampering the civilian population.

A correspondent of the Cape Times reports that 1,250 Boers are besieging Schweizer-Rencke, in Western Transvaal, and that Lord Methuen and Colonel Settle are believed to be going to the garrison's relief.

The Boers, according to the Cape Town correspondent of the London Daily Mail, have broken the railway in 20 places between Bloemfontein and the Orange river. The line is also cut between Kimberley and Belmont.

The Boers are very active. It is alleged that Commandant Louis Botha has established a government at Rosenhal, north of Middelburg, and that with the £150,000 that he has available he is paying the fighting burghers a crown per day.

POLITICAL NEWS.

Attorney General Griggs has formally announced that he will be unable to remain in the cabinet after March 4.

President McKinley has formally requested all the members of his cabinet to remain during the coming four years.

Latest returns from Nebraska legislative elections show that the Republicans have a majority of five on joint ballot.

A Royalist delegate to congress has been chosen in Hawaii. He was elected on an anti-white platform and received the support of the ex-queen.

John W. Yerkes, late Republican candidate for governor of Kentucky, has been reappointed collector of internal revenue for the Eighth district.

The joint caucus of the Democrats of both houses of the Alabama legislature unanimously nominated J. T. Morgan for re-election as United States senator.

NEWS OF NOTED PERSONS.

Richard Croker has sailed for Europe. He will visit Carlsbad for the benefit of his health.

The Dutch cruiser Gelderland, with ex-President Kruger on board, has arrived at Suez.

The vitality of Senator Davis of Minnesota is decreasing and he is rapidly growing weaker. There is little doubt the end is drawing near.

Miss Louise Pierpont Morgan, the eldest daughter of J. Pierpont Morgan, the banker and capitalist, was married Thursday to Herbert Livingston Satterlee.

Private but most trustworthy information has been received at Paris that King Oscar of Sweden is in a very low state of health. His recent brain attack, it is added, deprived him of his memory and he seems unable to recuperate. The facts are suppressed.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

General Miles, in his annual report, urges the reorganization of the army.

Mr Russell, United States charge at Caracas, reports that the earthquake in Colombia last month was much more severe than at first described. Between 12,000 and 15,000 buildings were destroyed or damaged.

Plans are being made by the administration to press with vigor for the ratification by the senate of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty in its original form as the first step toward the construction of the Isthmian canal.

A contract for $16,000,000 worth of armor plate for battleships has been awarded by Secretary Long. The contract is on a basis of $420 a ton for Krupp armor and certain royalty fees, not exceeding a total cost of $455.52 per ton.

THE CRISIS IN CHINA.

Prince Tuan and General Yu Hsien are reported to be under arrest.

Belief is expressed in Shanghai that the trouble in China has only begun.

China has practically conceded all the demands of the powers, with the exception of the execution of certain personages.

An imperial decree of Nov. 13 deprives Prince Tuan and Prince Chwang of their ranks and offices and orders them to be imprisoned for life.

Sanitary conditions in Peking are becoming serious. Since the foreign occupation many Chinese have died of smallpox and other infectious diseases.

Proceedings of the Board of County Commissioners.

Special meeting board of county commissioners.

Red Lake Falls, Minn.,
Nov. 12, 1900.

Pursuant to call dated Oct. 3rd board met in extra session this day.

Meeting call to order by the chairman.

All members present.

Hearing was then had on the following ditch petition:

Petition to establish a ditch, drain or water course.

Petition for a Public Ditch.

To the Board of County Commissioners of the county of Red Lake, State of Minnesota.

The undersigned land owners, whose lands will be liable to be affected by, or assessed for, the expense of the construction of the drainage ditch, hereinafter described, would respectfully represent that the public health, convenience and welfare require the establishment and construction of a drainage ditch along the following described route in the town of Red Lake Falls in said county of Red Lake and that the construction of the same would be of public benefit and utility.

A general description of the proposed starting point, route and terminus of said ditch is as follows:

Commencing at the ¼ section corner on the east line of section one, being the NE corner of the SE ¼ of said section one Township 151, Range 44, thence west along the ¼ section line through the center of sections one, two and three and to a point on the quarter section line running east and west through the center of section 4, about 40 rods east of the northwest corner of SW¼ of said section 4, all of said land being in the town of Red Lake Falls, and terminating at said point on the quarter section line running east and west through the centre of said section 4, about 40 rods east of the NW corner of the southwest quarter of said section 4 as its outlet.

Your petitioners further state that there are large tracts of lands lying adjacent to and in the vicinity of the line of said proposed ditch which will be directly and greatly benefited by the construction thereof, said lands being low and wet, and at certain seasons of every year they are covered with water, thereby rendering said lands unproductive and useless; that said water, during portions of every year, becomes stagnant and foul, rendering the atmosphere in the vicinity thereof impure and unwholesome, thereby endangering, injuring and affecting the health of the occupants of said lands and of the public; that for the reasons aforesaid the construction of such ditch is necessary and also for the reason that by the construction thereof there will thereby be removed from off said lands, said waters, thereby promoting the health of the public at large; that the same will be of great benefit to the public highways in the vicinity thereof, by preventing in many places the overflowing of such highways; that large tracts of said lands that are unproductive and useless will thereby be reclaimed and very greatly increased in value, all to the great benefit, utility and welfare of the public, as well as your petitioners.

And your petitioners pray that you will proceed to establish such drainage ditch and cause the same to be constructed as provided by Chapter ninety-seven (97), General Laws of Minnesota for 1887, and subsequent amendments thereto.

Motion made by Hansen seconded by Hebert that petition be accepted and viewers appointed.

Motion carried unanimously.

Order Appointing Viewers in Ditch Proceedings.

In the matter of the petition of John Marleau and others for a drainage ditch in the county of Red Lake State of Minnesota.

State of Minnesota, }
County of Red Lake. } ss.

Whereas, a petition bearing date the 20th day of September, 1900, signed by John Bole, John Marlean, John Linnertz, T. Linnertz, Michael Kees, H O Gerlach, Joseph Wagner, Hubert Linnertz, John A. Dwyer, Prosper Wilmes, Joachim Rose, H. Hartz, Johnson & Marshall Land Co., Edward Busse, Ed Enright, Steve Roark, Jacob Pahlen, Morris Healey, Joseph Bole, Napoleon Constant, Lott McNarthney, and William Marleau praying for the establishment of a certain drainage ditch in said county, the route of which is more fully described in said petition, and a proper bond accompanying the same, have been filed with the county auditor of said county, as by law required;

And whereas, it appears by satisfactory proof to the board of county commissioners of Red Lake county, that at least thirty (30) days' notice of the pendency of said petition, and the time and place at which the same would be given as required by law;

And whereas, said board has determined that the construction of such ditch as proposed in said petition will be of public benefit and utility, and conducive to the public health, convenience and welfare;

Now therefore, we, the board of county commissioners of said county, at a special session held this day, do hereby accept said petition, do hereby appoint K M Hansen, Wm O L Demaen and Joseph Pigeon, three resident freeholders of said county and not interested in the construction of said proposed work, and not of kin to any parties interested therein, as viewers, and do specify the 3rd day of December, 1900, at one o'clock p. m. at the outlet of said ditch, sec 4-151-44, as the time and place for said viewers to meet, preparatory to commencing their duties as such viewers as prescribed by law, and after completing their duties as such viewers to make and file their report with the county auditor of said county, on or before the first day of February, 1901.

How to Feed Stock.

Feed of all kind is going to be high this winter, and all who have stock to winter must figure out how to carry their stock through the winter and have them come out in good condition in the spring. Bran and Shorts are the best known feeds for cows, calves, colts and horses and is 33 per cent cheaper than any other kind of feed. One ton of oats at 25c per bushel is worth $15.70. You can buy one ton of Bran and Shorts mixed for $12.50, and save $3.20. But this is not all; 33 per cent of the weight of oats are hulls, that have no more feeding value than the straw. If you take this out of your ton of oats, you have 1334 pounds of feed left. This feed will cost you at the rate of $23.60 per ton. $12.50 for a ton of Bran and Shorts mixed, leaves $11.10 saved on one ton of feed. In other words you can winter your stock on one half the cost by feeding Bran and Shorts. Think it over and then try a ton, and you will always feed Bran and Shorts. We will exchange Bran and Shorts for Oats and Barley at our Mill or at the Crompe Elevator.

Vic's Breezy Letter.

Tarlne. P. I. Oct. 6th, 1900.

Editor Gazette:—

Well I will write a few lines to let you know that I have received orders to proceed to Co. B Engineer Corp stationed at Manila to report there for orders.

I have received my transfer fully approved. I am glad of it and think that I will be better off there, as it sults me better. In transferring I am doing a thing that few men in the U. S. army can do that is transfer out of the cavalry branch of the service into the engineer corp, the highest branch of service in the U. S. army. I do not know where I will be stationed but have tonight made an application to be sent to China where there is half of my company. I will try my best to go if possible although I will be leaving Simon Paul and Wm. Beautrow but then we only have one and one half year more here. I expect that this transferring is placing my foot on the first round of the ladder and I will endeavor to climb to the top before I leave it.

My papers have been buried time and again and every time I managed to grind it through and now I am safe, although many people may think that I am transferring to the engineer corp to get out of fighting and that I am a little cold footed; But the duties I am undertaking are not of the most timid kind, and besides we do infantry duty.

I will write again in a few days.

"Vic."

Manila. P. I. Oct. 10, 1900.

Editor Gazette:—

It is with pleasure that I will take a moment to drop you a few lines to let you know how I like my new place.

I arrived in Manila Oct. 8th in the afternoon and proceeded to the headquarters of Co. B. Battallion of U.S. E. where I reported for duty. I was then given two days for a restowning to the fact that I had done pretty hard duty in the Cavalry branch of the service. These two days which end tonight I have spent in the city of Manila and out at Caloocan, where Corporal Simon Paul of G troop 4th Cav. is stationed, also a few hours with Private William Boautrow, of E troop 4th Cav. stationed at Passay, P. I. Corporal Paul is about to be made Sargeant. Success to him for he has earned it all through bravery under fire of the enemies. Simon is well liked by his comardes in his troop, and there is hardly one but who would put his life in peril to save Simon. While in Manila I took time very easy as I know that a good lot of work is before me. I must tell you that there is pleasure to go out strolling along the Escot, the business street of Manila and see the sights and then go to the Lunota, the only place of refreshment. The Lunota is well paved and runs almost like a track along the bay of Manila. In the center are thousands of bamboo chairs where one can sit and listen to the bands of different regiments play picked military music while officers and others who own rigs drive around the track-like street, breathing the air from the sea on one side and from the land on the other.

On the bay not many hundred yards away one can see the different transports and gun-boats of the U.S. Navy. The music from their bands is heard from the distance. The quarters of the company to which I belong are known in and around here as the Quartel De Malate and are situated about fifty yards from the Lunota along the water line of the bay. The duty of the company is very light at present. Twenty of the 150 men are in China and are expected back in a few weeks, about twenty-five of the men are in the Southern Islands and the balance are in the city at different work which is in charge of the U. S. E. They also have a school in Civil Engineering, Water Mines and Pontoon Bridge building etc. All of which I will undertake to study. Their work in the dry weather will be the surveying and making maps of these islands.

We are well quartered, fairly fed and good accommodation such as rigs to drive to and from our work. We do hardly any soldiering and are not restricted so much as one is in the cavalry service. The pay is: 1st Sargent $50.60 per month, Sargent $42.80 Corporal $31.30 1st class private $20.40 second class private $15.60. I do not know what I will be yet. I have passed a good enough examination to entitle me to 1st class, but there is but two vacancies and there are other men ahead of me. However, I shall soon be 1st class I think. I got a "very excellent character" from troop L, not a trial on my records. But I did not get credit in detail for every battle in which I took part, and I will apply to the Adjutant General of the engineer for my complete credit for such engagements as I took part in. I may get satisfaction and I may not, but it always pays to be long-winded in all such things as that, at least it did in the matter of my transferring.

I am left on going to China as these men in China will soon come back.

Well I think I have told you all there is to write about, I remain as ever

Yours,
"Vic."

ANOTHER TOWNSITE

Will be Platted on the Bank of Black Duck Lake.

There is great activity among prospective townsite owners along the line of the new railroad that is being built up through northern Minnesota from Bemidji to the Rainy River country, and every owner of a quarter section is hoping that he may be able to secure a side track on his land that will warrant him starting a town.

Just now Blackduck, at the terminus of the portion of the line that is contemplated for the first year, is attracting considerable attention. The road passes a distance of upwards of a mile from the lake and M.D.Stoner has platted that portion where the side tracks have been located.

Among others who own land between this point and the lake are J. E. Carpenter and Mrs. Sarah Crandall of this city. Mrs. Crandall has disposed of a half interest in her land to Frank Ives of Cass Lake, and both this piece of property and the one adjoining it owned by Mr. Carpenter will be platted in the spring.

Black Duck is one of the gems of water stretches that stud that portion of the state, and the property proposed to be platted has as fine a stretch of beach as exists anywhere and the lake is one of the best fishing and hunting grounds in the state.—Crookston Times.

Board of Trade.

A special meeting of the Board of Trade was held at the city hall Monday night. In the absence of the president and vice president, P. A. Kaufer was called to the chair. A board of directors, as follows, was elected: J. B. Armstrong, Theo. La Bissoniere, Theo. Garceau, J.T. Knight. Ernest Buse, E. L. Healy, and Dr. N. M. Watson. Resolutions were passed favoring the establishing of the proposed national park in northern Minnesota. The committee to draft advertising matter for the Great Northern Information Bureau was increased by the addition of E. L. Healy and P. A. Kaufer. A committe, consisting of Theo. Garceau, J. A. Duffy and Frank E. Hunt, was appointed to lay out before the city council the needs of improvements to our fire protection in the way of additional tanks, etc. C. F. Johnson and E. I. Healy were appointed a committee of two to investigate as to the cost and feasibility of getting out an advertising map in the interests of the city. The matter of making an effort to secure a paper mill was gone into, and this will come up again at the next meeting, which will be held at the city hall next Monday at eight o'clock p. m.

Wireless Telephony.

One of the North side telephone wires broke last Saturday, and although the switch board is not yet in, and no connection made, the ground circuit enabled several patrons to converse over the wires. Instances where the breaking of wires does not interfere with their use are common. Manager Schreiter, of the long distance telephone exchange, says that last winter the wires near Tilden broke, and although it was several days before repairs were made the ends of the wires resting on the ground, sufficed for the connection, and the use of the phone was not interrupted. This is wireless telephony in its incipiency. We notice that a Minneapolis electrician is endeavoring to perfect a system of wireless telephony, and that recent experiments hold out assurance of his ultimate success.

LIFE'S TRAGEDIES.

An Episode In the Daily History of a Great City.

[Copyright, 1900, by C. B. Lewis.]

"These trousers, sir," began the gaunt faced, gray haired woman as she deposited the bundle on the counter, "these trousers belonged to my son Willie. I never expected to sell them; but, oh, sir"—

"You want to take advantage of the cheap excursion to Niagara falls?"

"Not that—not that! How could I think of going to Niagara falls when my Willie is where he is? I want to raise 75 cents. I must raise it. If I don't get the money, I will commit suicide."

"A patch on each knee and two on the seat, but they might do for a millionaire. Fifteen cents."

"Only 15 cents for Willie's trousers!" she moaned as the tears sprang to her eyes. "Oh, man, man, but you cannot be so heartless! Think of the sentiment connected with those trousers!"

"And the patches."

"But there is sentiment even in patches. Those patches were sewed on with black thread and a mother's tears."

"Going at 15—15—15 cents!"

"Never, never! I will starve first—that is, I will take the 15 cents and buy potted chicken with it and live on. I must live on. Some day heaven will send me luck, and then I can get up to Sing Sing and see my dear Willie and ask him if he really was guilty of that burglary or if his honor gave him seven years as a joke." M. QUAD.

Wifely Assistance.

"Yes," said the poet, "my first book of poems was dedicated to my wife."

"And to whom was your second book dedicated?"

"My wife."

"Now you are getting out a third Who is it to be dedicated to?"

"I dunno. When I spoke to my wife about it, she said she'd think the matter over if I would give her a list of the people I hate worst."—Chicago Times-Herald.

A Mild Answer.

"Now, don't gimme any song about misfortune an wantin to be a hard worker an all that," said the hard faced lady. "I can see right through you."

"Gee," said Dismal Dawson, "I knowed I ain't had nothin to eat for three days, but I didn't know it had thinned me down like that!"—Indianapolis Press.

Ostracize Him.

First Workingman—Hodder is going to be married.

Second Workingman—Well, I don't care.

First Workingman—Don't you, though! He's going to marry a working girl, and she doesn't belong to the union!—Somerville Journal.

A Diplomat.

She—Yes; it's all well enough to say now you think I'm pretty. Yesterday you said my nose turned up dreadfully.

He—Well, dear, I was thinking it shows mighty poor taste in backing away from such a lovely mouth.—Collier's Weekly.

Unappreciated.

"How beautiful the autumn leaves are!" exclaimed Mrs. Blykins.

"Yes," answered her husband resentfully. "If they weren't so common, we'd be paying $4 or $5 apiece for them as trimmings for our wives' hats."—Washington Star.

On the Contrary.

Vane Glory—I hope Swainston said nothing about me the other night, old chap?

Cecil Swarve—Not a word, old man. In fact, we had quite an interesting little chat.—Judy.

By the Cards.

"Do you believe a person's fortune can be told by cards?"

"Well, I can tell that anybody must be poor if their cards are printed instead of engraved."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

A Natural Result.

Dobbs—Yes; she bought the outfit at a slaughter sale.—Baltimore American.

A Practical Illustration.

"Here, boy! What do you mean by striking your little sister?"

"I means ter show dat us men is de lords of creation, dat's all."—New York Journal.

Sonnet.

The last bluejay is swinging high
Upon the crooked, leafless bough
And haply wondering why and how
It is that only sparrows fly
In chirping squads around him now,
What time there steals within his heart
A sadness that will not allow
Him to assume a joyous part.
But stills his song! And I, as he,
Remain alone in sorrow's clutch,
While chattering fools flit in and out
And men ignore the jay and me,
And not a soul would worry much
If both of us were up the spout!

Story of a Slave.

To be bound hand and foot for years by the chain of disease is the worst form of slavery. George D. Williams, of Manchester, Mich., tells how such a slave was made free. He says "My wife has been so helpless for five years that she could not turn over in bed alone. After using two bottles of Electric Bitters she is wonderfully improved and able to do her own work." This remedy for female diseases quickly cures nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, headache, backache, fainting and dizzy spells. This miracle working medicine is a godsend to weak, sickly, run down people. Every bottle guaranteed. Only 50 cents. Sold by W. A. Schreiter, Druggist.

year she dwells in her pretty pala The other months find her here and there—Paris, St. Petersburg or Rome, as fancy wills. And I—I love her! Is it not rich? What am I? A grub burrowing at the root of the tree in which she, like a bird of paradise, displays her royal plumage. 'Masters, remember that I am an ass. Though it be not written down, yet forget not that I am an ass.' The father of this princess once rendered the present king's father a great service, and in return the king turned over to his care a principality whose lineal descendants had died out. It was with the understanding that so long as he retained the king's good will, just so long he might possess the principality, and that when he died the sovereignty would pass to his children. The old king died, and his son sat upon his father's throne. The father of the princess also died. The king of today made the same terms as his father before him. The Princess Hildegarde accepted them, not counting the cost. Last spring she was coronated. Shortly before the coronation Prince Ernst of Wortumborg became a suitor for her hand. The king was very much pleased. Prince Ernst was a cousin of the Princess Hildegarde's father and had striven for the principality in the days gone by. The king, thinking to repair the imaginary wrongs of the prince, forced the suit. He impressed upon the princess that it was marry the prince or give up the principality. She gave her consent, not knowing what to do under the circumstances. Prince Ernst is a prince without principality or revenues. In marrying the princess he acquires both. I shall tell you how I became concerned."

Hillars laid his smoking pipe in the ash pan. He got up and roamed about the room, stopped at the window and stared at the inken sky, then returned to his chair.

CHAPTER IV.

I shall tell Hillars' story as he told it. He said: Last August I went to B——. My mission was important and took me to the British legation, where I am well known. I was most cordially invited to attend a ball to be given the next evening. The notables of the court were there. For a few moments the king let his sun shine on the assemblage. It was a brilliant spectacle. At midnight I saw for the first time a remarkably beautiful woman. I was looking well myself that night. All women like to see broad shoulders in a man. It suggests strength—something they have not. Several times this young woman's eyes met mine. Somehow, mine were always first to fail. There was a magnetism in hers mine could not withstand. Later an attache came to me and said that he wished to present me to her serene highness the Princess Hildegarde of—let us call it Hohenphalia. He whispered that she had commanded the introduction. I expected to see some red faced dowager who wanted to ask me about my country and bore me with her guttural accents. To my intense pleasure, I found myself at the side of the beauty whom I had been admiring. There was a humorous light in her eyes as she put some questions to me.

"Do you speak German?" she asked in that language.

"Poorly, your highness," I answered.

"Perhaps, then, you speak French?"

"As I do my mother tongue," said I.

"I am interested in Americans," she said.

"Collectively or individually?" I tried to say this with perfect innocence, but the smile on her lips told me that I had failed.

"Yes, I was sure that you would interest me." She tapped the palm of her hand with the fan she held. "Shall I tell you why I desired to meet you?" I nodded.

"I have heard it said that the American bows down before a title, and I am a woman and curious."

Said I, laughing: "Your highness has been misinformed. We never bow down to a title. It is to the wearers that we bow."

This time her eyes fell.

"This sort of conversation is altogether new to me," she said, opening the fan.

"I hope that I have not offended your highness," I said.

"Indeed, no. But it seems so strange to have any one talk to me with such frankness and deliberation. Have you no fear?"

"There is seldom fear where there is admiration. If you had used the word awe, now"—

Soft laughter rippled over the fan. She had the most wonderful eyes. "Are all Americans brave like yourself?" she next asked.

"Brave? What do you call brave?"

"Your utter lack of fear in my presence, in the first place. I am called dangerous. And then, your exploits in the Balkistan, in the second place. Are you not the M. Hillars whose bravery not so long ago was an interesting topic in the newspapers? I know you."

"This is truly remarkable," said I. "The only thing I did was to lead a regiment out of danger."

"The danger was annihilation. If a captain or a colonel had done it, we should have thought nothing of it, but an utter stranger, who had nothing in common with either cause—ah, believe me, it was a very gallant thing to do."

"This is positively the first time I was ever glad that I did the thing." I placed my hand over my heart. "But, after all, that is not half so brave as what I am doing now."

"I do not understand," said she, puzzled.

"Why, it is simple. Here I am talking to you, occupying your time and keeping those fierce generals at bay. See how they are gnawing those fierce mustaches and biting their lips and asking one another who I am. There are as many as five challenges waiting for me the moment I depart from your side."

There was mischief in her eye.

"Then you shall stay with me, find me an ice and waltz once with me, for if anything happened to you I should always have myself to blame."

I waltzed with her, and the perfume of her hair got into my head, and I grew dizzy. When the dance came to an end, I went into the smoking room. Suddenly it went through my brain that the world had changed in an incredibly short time. I tried to smoke, and for the first time in my life tobacco was tasteless. I was falling in love with a princess. I confess that it did not horrify me. On the contrary, I grew thrilled and excited. There was a spice here which hitherto had been denied me. The cost was unspelled. I fell as far as I could fall. The uncertainty of the affair was in itself an enchantment.

Well, the next day I strolled up the Avenue of Legations and saw her on horseback. She was accompanied by an elderly man with a face like an eagle's. There were various decorations on his breast. As the princess saw me she bent her head. She remembered me. That was all that was necessary for my transportation. Later I was informed that her escort was Prince Ernst of Wortumborg, who was destined to become her lord and master. I did not care who he was. I knew that I hated him.

For a week I lingered on. I met her time and again, alone on horseback, at the various embassies and at the opera. At these meetings I learned a great deal about her. She was known to be the most capricious woman at court, and that she was as courageous as she was daring, and that the prince might consider himself lucky if he got her, king's will or no king's will. She had little liking for her intended. She treated him contemptuously and held his desires in utter disregard. One fine morning I was told that the prince was beginning to notice my attentions, that he was one of the most noted pistol shots and swordsmen on the continent and that if I had any particular regard for my epidermis I would cease my attendance on the princess at once. This of course made me more attentive than ever, for I can hold my own with any man when it comes to pistols, and I can handle the rapier with some success.

It was one night at the opera that the climax was brought about. I sat in one of the stalls diagonally across from the royal box where she sat. She saw me and gave me the barest nod of recognition. Perhaps she did not wish to attract the attention of the royal personages who sat with her, for the nod struck me as clandestine. Between the first and second acts a note was handed to me. It was not addressed, neither was it signed. But it was for me. The bearer spoke my name. As near as I can remember the note contained these words:

"A carriage will await you two blocks south. It will be without lights. You will enter it exactly ten minutes after the opera is ended."

That was all, but it was enough. When I returned to my seat, I found the princess gazing intently at me. I made an affirmative gesture and was rewarded with a smile which set my blood to rushing. I made little out of the last act. I could not dream what the anonymous note had behind it. I suspicioned an intrigue, but what use had she for me, an American, a very nobody? Something unusual was about to take place, and I was to be a witness or a participant of it. That was as far as my talent for logical deduction went. Promptly at the stated time I stood at the side of the carriage. It was the plainest sort of an affair. Evidently it had been hired for the occasion. The door opened.

"Step in, monsieur," said a low voice in French. I obeyed. The horse started. As we spun along the pavement a light flashed into the window. The princess sat before me. There was a ringing in my ears, and I breathed quickly. But I said no word. It was for her to speak first.

"Monsieur is an American," she began. "The American is of a chivalric race."

"That should be the aim of all men," I replied.

"But it is not so. Monsieur, I have been studying you for the past week. Tonight I place my honor and my fame in your hands. It is for you to prove that you are a knight. I trust you. When I have said what I shall say to you, you may withdraw or give me your aid, as you please."

"I am grateful for your confidence, your highness," said I. "What is it that you wish me to do?"

"Have patience, monsieur, till the ride is done," she said. "Do not speak again till I permit you. I must think."

The journey was accomplished in half an hour.

"It is here, monsieur, that we alight," she said as the carriage stopped.

I was glad that her opera cloak was of dark material and that she wore a veil.

The building before which we stood was on the outskirts of the city. Far away to my left I could see the flickering lights of the palaces. A yellowish haze hung over all. Once within the building I noted with surprise the luxurious appointments. Plainly it was no common inn, a resort for the middle and travelling classes. Whether it was patronized by the nobility I could only surmise.

"We shall continue to speak in French," she said as she threw back her cloak and lifted her veil. "Monsieur has probably heard that the Princess Hildegarde is a creature of extravagant caprices, and he expects an escapade."

"Your highness wrongs me," I protested. "I am an obscure American. Your highness does not share your—that is"—

I stopped, not wishing to give the term escapade to anything she might do. As a matter of fact she has caused her royal guardian, the king, no end of trouble. She went to Paris once unattended. At another time she roamed around Heidelberg and slashed a fencing master. She had donned a student's garb. She is said to be the finest swordswoman on the continent. Yet notwithstanding her caprices she is a noble minded woman. She does all these things called social vagaries because she has a fine scorn for the innate hypocrisy of the social organization of this country. She loves freedom not wisely, but too well. To go on:

"Monsieur wrongs me also," she said. "In what are termed my escapades I am alone. You appealed to me," with a directness which amazed me, "because of your handsome face, your elegant form, your bright eyes. You are a man who loves adventure which has the spice of danger in it. My countrymen"— She crooked one of her bare shoulders, which shone like yellow ivory in the subdued light. This rank flattery cooled me. A woman who has any regard for a man is not likely to flatter him in respect to his looks on so short and slight an acquaintance. "Monsieur," she proceeded, "this is to be an escapade, no caprice. I ask your aid as a desperate woman. At court I can find no one to succor me save at the peril of that which is dearer to me than my life. Among the commoners who would dare? An Englishman? It is too much trouble. A Frenchman? I would trust him not quite so far as the door. You are the first American not connected with the legation I have ever met. Will you help me?"

"If what you ask me to do is within my capabilities, I am yours to command."

"The reward will be small." As if to try me.

I laughed. I was so insanely happy, I suppose.

"There will be danger," she persisted; "secret danger. There will be scandal."

"The more danger the merrier," I cried.

"Ah, yes," smiling; "it is the man of Balkistan."

I leaned over the table and inhaled the ineffable perfumes which emanated from her person. Tell me from what must I succor the princess? Is she a prisoner in a castle over which some ogre rules? Well, then, I'll be Sir Galahad." My jesting tone jarred on her nerves. She straightened in her chair.

"Monsieur is amused," she said coldly.

"And he asks a thousand pardons," I cried contritely. "Command me," and I grew chilled and serious.

"You have heard that I am to wed Prince Ernst of Wortumborg?"

"Yes." I gnawed the ends of my mustache.

"Monsieur, it is against my will, my whole being. I have no desire to contribute a principality and a wife to a man who is not worthy of one or the other. I refuse to become the king's puppet notwithstanding his power to take away my principality and leave me comparatively without resources. I detest this man so thoroughly that I cannot hate him. I abhor him. It is you who must save me from him. It is you who must also save me my principality. Oh, they envy me, these poor people, because I am a princess, because I dwell in the tinsel glitter of the court. Could they but know how I envy their lives, their homes, their humble ambitions! Believe me, monsieur, as yet I love no man. But that is no reason why I should link my life to that of a man to whom virtue in a woman means nothing. He caused my mother great sorrow. He came between her and my father. He spoiled her life. Now he wishes to spoil mine.

"The prince will be in Brussels. You are to come in his stead."

But I will not have it so. I will give up my principality rather. But first let me try to see if I cannot retain the one had rid myself of the other. Listen. Tomorrow night there will be a dinner here. The king and the inner court will hold forth. But they will cast aside their pomp and become for the time being ordinary people. The prince will be in Brussels and therefore unable to attend. You are to come in his stead."

"I!" in astonishment.

"Even so," she smiled. "While the festivities are at their height you and I will secretly leave and return to the city. We shall go immediately to the station, thence to France."

I looked at her as one in a dream. "I—You! Thence to France?"

CHAPTER V.

Hillars went to the sideboard and emptied half a glass of brandy. Coming back to his chair, he remained in a reverie for a short time. Then he resumed his narrative:

The princess looked up into my face and smiled.

"Yes; thence to France. Ah, I could go alone. But listen, monsieur. Above all things there must be a scandal. A princess elopes with an American adventurer. The prince will withdraw his suit. The king may or may not forgive me, but I will risk it. He is still somewhat fond of me notwithstanding the worry I have caused him. This way is the only method by which I may convince him how detestable this engagement is to me. Yet my freedom is more to me than my principality. Let the king bestow it upon whom he will. I shall become a teacher of languages or something of that sort. I shall be free and happy. Oh, you will have a merry tale to tell, a merry adventure. You will return to your country. You will be the envy of your compatriots. You will recount at your clubs a story such as men read, but never hear told." She was growing a bit hysterical. As she looked at me she saw that my face was grave.

"Is there no other way?" I asked. "Can it not be accomplished without scandal?"

"No. There must be scandal. Otherwise I should be brought back and forgiven, and no one would know. In a certain sense I am valuable. The Hohenphalians love me. I am something of an idol to them. The king appreciates my rule. It gives him a knowledge that there will be no internal troubles in Hohenphalia so long as matters stand as they now do. Still, there are limits to the king's patience, and I am about to try them severely. But monsieur hesitates. He will withdraw his promise."

"No, your highness," said I. "I have given my word. As for the scandal, it is not for myself that I care. It will be a jolly adventure for me, and then I shall have such a clever story to tell my friends at the clubs."

She saw that I was offended. "Forgive me, monsieur. I know that you would do no such thing. But let me explain to you. At the station we will be intercepted by two trusted and high officials at court."

"What!" I exclaimed. "Do they know?"

"No, but I shall write to them anonymously, the note to be placed in their hands immediately we leave the premises."

I looked at the woman in wonder. "But this is madness!" I cried.

"Directly you will see the method in the madness. Without their knowing there could be no scandal. They will try to stop us. You will overpower and bind them. There will also be several other witnesses who will not be participants. Through them it will become known that I have eloped with an American. Oh, it is a well laid plan."

"But, supposing I am overpowered myself, thrown into jail and I know not what?" All this was more than I had bargained for.

"Nothing of the kind will happen. Monsieur will hold a pistol in each hand when the carriage door is opened. You will say: 'I am a desperate man. One of you bind the other or I fire!' It will be done. You will spring upon the remaining one, and I will help you to bind him likewise. Oh, you will accomplish it well. You are a strong man. Moreover, you are rapid."

I sat in my chair, speechless. Here was a woman of details. I had never met one before.

"Well, does monsieur accept the adventure or does he politely decline?" There was a subtle taunt in her tones. That decided me.

"Your highness, I should be happy to meet a thousand deaths to do you service. What you ask me to do is quite simple." I knew that I should lose my head in case of failure. I rose and bowed as unconcernedly as though she had but asked me to join her with a cup of tea.

"Ah, monsieur, you are a man!" And she laughed softly as she saw me throw back my shoulders. There was unmistakable admiration in her eyes. "And yet," with a sudden frown, "there will be danger. You may slip. You may become injured. Yes, there is danger."

"Your highness," said I lowly, compelling her eyes to meet mine, "it is not the danger of the adventure or its results that I most fear." I was honest enough to make my meaning clear.

She blushed. "I said that I trusted monsieur's honor," was her rejoinder. "Come," with a return of her imperiousness, "it is time that we were gone." She drew on her cloak and dropped the veil. "I might add," she said, "that we will remain in France one hour. From there you may go your way, and I shall go secretly to my palace."

And the glamour fell away like the last leaves of the year.

I had to wake up the driver, who had fallen asleep.

"Where shall I say?" I asked.

"To your hotel. I shall give the driver the remaining instructions."

Canadian Excursions.

If you are going to Eastern Canada this winter, it will help you to read and act on this Important Information.

The Best Route for comfort and quick time is by way of St. Paul and Chicago—through the States.

The Best Railroad is the Burlington, because its accommodations are excellent, its tracks smooth and connections sure.

Reclining Chair Cars are run on all Burlington Route trains, and no extra charge is made for seats. They are more roomy and comfortable than similar cars on other lines. Uniformed porters are in attendance to insure the comfort of travelers.

Leaving St. Paul.—Burlington trains leave St. Paul at 8:15 a. m. except Sunday, and 8:05 p. m. daily, arriving at Chicago in ample time to connect with the most convenient trains for Canadian points.

The Cost.—The price of a ticket to Montreal or any place west of that city—and return, will be only Forty Dollars.

Tickets can be purchased of your home ticket agent, who will cheerfully give rates and informations. Patrons should ask for and see that their tickets read via the Burlington Route, between St. Paul and Chicago.

Date of Sale.—December 3 to December 31, 1900.

Limit of Tickets. Each ticket is good for return within three months from date of sale.

Extension of Time can be arranged for with the Canadian ticket agent at your destination, upon payment of a small extra charge.

East of Montreal, to points in Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, the rate will be something above $40.00. The extra rate can be ascertained by applying to your ticket agent.

Our Agent.—Mr. A. L. Eidemiller, our Traveling Passenger Agent, will be at the Clarendon Hotel, Winnipeg, or Hotel Dacotah, Grand Forks, N. D., until December 24th. Application can be made to him for any further information needed.

Once within the building I noted with surprise the luxurious appointments. Plainly it was no [illegible] a resort for the middle and [illegible] classes. Whether it was patronized by the nobility I could only surmise.

"We shall continue to speak in French," she said as she threw back her cloak and lifted her veil. "Monsieur has probably heard that the Princess Hildegarde is a creature of extravagant caprices, and he expects an escapade."

"Your highness wrongs me," I protested. "I am a discreet American. Your highness does not share your [illegible] that is"—

I stopped, not wishing to give the term escapade to anything she might do. As a matter of fact she has caused her royal guardian, the king, no end of trouble. She went to Paris once unattended. At another time she roamed around Heidelberg and slashed a fencing master. She had donned a student's garb. She is said to be the finest swordswoman on the continent. Yet notwithstanding her caprices she is a noble minded woman. She does all these things called social vagaries because she has a fine scorn for the innate hypocrisy of the social organization of this country. She loves freedom not wisely, but too well. To go on:

"Monsieur wrongs me also," she said. "In what are termed my escapades I am alone. You appealed to me," with a directness which amazed me, "because of your handsome face, your elegant form, your bright eyes. You are a man who loves adventure which has the spice of danger in it. My countrymen"— She crooked one of her bare shoulders, which shone like yellow ivory in the subdued light. This rank flattery cooled me. A woman who has any regard for a man is not likely to flatter him in respect to his looks on so short and slight an acquaintance. "Monsieur," she proceeded, "this is to be no escapade, no caprice. I ask your aid as a desperate woman. At court I can find no one to succor me save at the peril of that which is dearer to me than my life. Among the commoners who would dare? An Englishman? It is too much trouble. A Frenchman? I would trust him not quite so far as the door. You are the first American not connected with the legation I have ever met. Will you help me?"

"If what you ask me to do is within my capabilities, I am yours to command."

"The reward will be small." As if to try me.

I laughed. I was so insanely happy, I suppose.

"There will be danger," she persisted; "secret danger. There will be scandal."

"The more danger the merrier," I cried.

"Ah, yes," smiling; "it is the man of Balkistan."

I leaned over the table and inhaled the ineffable perfumes which emanated from her person. "Tell me from what must I succor the princess? Is she a prisoner in a castle over which some ogre rules? Well, then, I'll be Sir Galahad." My jesting tone jarred on her nerves. She straightened in her chair.

"Monsieur is amused," she said coldly.

"And he asks a thousand pardons!" I cried contritely. "Command me," and I grew chilled and serious.

"You have heard that I am to wed Prince Ernst of Wortumborg?"

"Yes." I gnawed the ends of my mustache.

"Monsieur, it is against my will, my whole being. I have no desire to contribute a principality and a wife to a man who is not worthy of one or the other. I refuse to become the king's puppet notwithstanding his power to take away my principality and leave me comparatively without resources. I detest this man so thoroughly that I cannot hate him. I abhor him. It is you who must save me from him. It is you who must also save me my principality. Oh, they envy me, these poor people, because I am a princess, because I dwell in the tinsel glitter of the court. Could they but know how I envy their lives, their homes, their humble ambitions! Believe me, monsieur, as yet I love no man. But that is no reason why I should link my life to that of a man to whom virtue in a woman means nothing. He caused my mother great sorrow. He came between her and my father. He spoiled her life. Now he wishes to spoil mine.

"The prince will be in Brussels. You are to come in his stead."

But I will not have it so. I will give up my principality rather. But first let me try to see if I cannot retain the one and rid myself of the other. Listen. Tomorrow night there will be a dinner here. The king and the inner court will hold forth. But they will cast aside their pomp and become for the time being ordinary people. The prince will be in Brussels and therefore unable to attend. You are to come in his stead."

"I!" in astonishment.

"Even so," she smiled. "While the festivities are at their height you and I will secretly leave and return to the city. We shall go immediately to the station, thence to France."

I looked at her as one in a dream. "I—You! Thence to France?"

CHAPTER V.

Hillars went to the sideboard and emptied half a glass of brandy. Coming back to his chair, he remained in a reverie for a short time. Then he resumed his narrative:

The princess looked up into my face and smiled.

"Yes; thence to France. Ah, I could go alone. But listen, monsieur. Above all things there must be a scandal. A princess elopes with an American adventurer. The prince will withdraw his suit. The king may or may not forgive me, but I will risk it. He is still somewhat fond of me notwithstanding the worry I have caused him. This way is the only method by which I may convince him how detestable this engagement is to me. Yet my freedom is more to me than my principality. Let the king bestow it upon whom he will. I shall become a teacher of languages or something of that sort. I shall be free and happy. Oh, you will have a merry tale to tell, a merry adventure. You will return to your country. You will be the envy of your compatriots. You will recount at your clubs a story such as men read, but never hear told." She was growing a bit hysterical. As she looked at me she saw that my face was grave.

"Is there no other way?" I asked. "Can it not be accomplished without scandal?"

"No. There must be scandal. Otherwise I should be brought back and forgiven, and no one would know. In a certain sense I am valuable. The Hohenphalians love me. I am something of an idol to them. The king appreciates my rule. It gives him a knowledge that there will be no internal troubles in Hohenphalia so long as matters stand as they now do. Still, there are limits to the king's patience, and I am about to try them severely. But monsieur hesitates. He will withdraw his promise."

"No, your highness," said I. "I have given my word. As for the scandal, it is not for myself that I care. It will be a jolly adventure for me, and then I shall have such a clever story to tell my friends at the clubs."

She saw that I was offended. "Forgive me, monsieur. I know that you would do no such thing. But let me explain to you. At the station we will be intercepted by two trusted and high officials of court."

"What!" I exclaimed. "Do they know?"

"No, but I shall write to them anonymously, the note to be placed in their hands immediately we leave the premises."

I looked at the woman in wonder. "But this is madness!" I cried.

"Directly you will see the method in the madness. Without their knowing there could be no scandal. They will try to stop us. You will overpower and bind them. There will also be several other witnesses who will not be participants. Through them it will become known that I have eloped with an American. Oh, it is a well laid plan."

"But supposing I am overpowered myself, thrown into jail and I know not what?" All this was more than I had bargained for.

"Nothing of the kind will happen. Monsieur will hold a pistol in each hand when the carriage door is opened. You will say: 'I am a desperate man. One of you bind the other or I fire!' It will be done. You will spring upon the remaining one, and I will help you to bind him likewise. Oh, you will accomplish it well. You are a strong man. Moreover, you are rapid."

I sat in my chair, speechless. Here was a woman of details. I had never met one before.

"Well, does monsieur accept the adventure or does he politely decline?" There was a subtle taunt in her tones. That decided me.

"Your highness, I should be happy to meet a thousand uhlans to do you service. What you ask me to do is quite simple." I knew that I should lose my head in case of failure. I rose and bowed as unconcernedly as though she had but asked me to join her with a cup of tea.

"Ah, monsieur, you are a man!" And she laughed softly as she saw me throw back my shoulders. There was unmistakable admiration in her eyes. "And yet," with a sudden frown, "there will be danger. You may slip. You may become injured. Yes, there is danger."

"Your highness," said I lowly, compelling her eyes to meet mine, "it is not the danger of the adventure or its results that I most fear." I was honest enough to make my meaning clear.

She blushed. "I said that I trusted monsieur's honor," was her rejoinder. "Come," with a return of her imperiousness, "it is time that we were gone." She drew on her cloak and dropped the veil. "I might add," she said, "that we will remain in France one hour. From there you may go your way, and I shall go secretly to my palace."

And the glamour fell away like the last leaves of the year.

I had to wake up the driver, who had fallen asleep.

"Where shall I say?" I asked.

"To your hotel. I shall give the driver the remaining instructions."

Burlington Route

Canadian Excursions.

If you are going to Eastern Canada this winter, it will help you to read and act on this Important Information.

The Best Route for comfort and quick time is by way of St. Paul and Chicago—through the States.

The Best Railroad is the Burlington, because its accommodations are excellent, its tracks smooth and connections sure.

Reclining Chair Cars are run on all Burlington Route trains, and no extra charge is made for seats. They are more roomy and comfortable than similar cars on other lines. Uniformed porters are in attendance to insure the comfort of travelers.

Leaving St. Paul. Burlington trains leave St. Paul at 8:15 a. m. except Sunday, and 8:05 p. m. daily, arriving at Chicago in ample time to connect with the most convenient trains for Canadian points.

The Cost. The price of a ticket to Montreal or any place west of that city and return, will be only Forty Dollars.

Tickets can be purchased of your home ticket agent, who will cheerfully give rates and information. Patrons should ask for and see that their tickets read via the Burlington Route, between St. Paul and Chicago.

Date of Sale. December 3 to December 31, 1900.

Limit of Tickets. Each ticket is good for return within three months from date of sale.

Extension of Time can be arranged for with the Canadian ticket agent at your destination, upon payment of a small extra charge.

East of Montreal, to points in Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, the rate will be something above $40.00. The extra rate can be ascertained by applying to your ticket agent.

Our Agent.—Mr. A. L. Eidemiller, our Traveling Passenger Agent, will be at the Clarendon Hotel, Winnipeg, or Hotel Dacotah, Grand Forks, N. D., until December 24th. Application can be made to him for any further information needed.

GOOD ROADS.

We do not think any one subject more than that of good roads so vitally concerns the prosperity of a city, situated like Red Lake Falls, in an agricultural district, and surrounded by competitors alive to every point that might be exerted to draw trade away from us and unto them. If this city had no competition, so that the trade naturally tributary must of necessity come to us, the situation would be quite different from what it is. But the fact remains that while no trading point in northern Minnesota has a larger constituency, yet we are not making the most of our advantages, and trade that would be ours, everything being equal, now goes to competitive points, simply because the roads leading to this market are not what they ought to be, while our competitors have outflanked us by building good highways leading from our very territory into their markets. So long as these conditions endure, Red Lake Falls can not expect to secure and hold the benefits of advantageous location, good markets, magnificent stores, enterprising and popular business and professional men, and the prestige that naturally comes to a county seat. The roads to the south and west are fairly good, but those leading north, northwest and east scarcely deserve the name, and the big trade that now comes to this city comes in spite of obstacles and not because of them. We doubt if the merchants realize the vast amount of trade that is annually lost on account of the bad roads leading to this city, and what a stimulus to their business would follow highway improvement. But they have had an object lesson the past few days, since the advent of sleighing, which has made the hitherto almost impassable roads fairly good. Business, which had been practically paralyzed, has suddenly taken on a new lease of life, and the streets and stores and places of business generally present a decidedly animated scene.

The local Board of Trade has a committee on Good Roads, and this is one of the most important committees appoineed by that body to date. They could do no better service to this city than to map out a system of good roads, leading from Red Lake Falls in all directions, and then pointing the way to the carrying out of their plans. These good roads should not only reach out a few miles but they should be arteries traversing in perfect system the entire county, so that all roads would lead to Red Lake Falls. Perhaps the carrying out of the designs would necessitate the building of a bridge here and there. This winter, while the legislature is in session, would be the time for us to go after this part of the plan, and to this end the help of Senator Myron and Representative Rapp should be secured. If we go after these things systematically, enthusiastically, unitedly, and with perserverance, we will succeed. There is no question about that. And with such a system of good wagon roads, leading to Red Lake Falls from all parts of the county, the business of our merchants and business institutions generaly, while good now, will be doubled. If the work is taken up at all it should be done in such a manner, that every shovel full of dirt moved will be so much progress towards the carrying out of a systematic and perfected plan, so that no effort will be wasted, but instead will be a step in a well defined system.

Senator Davis breathed his last Wednesday night.

THANKSGIVING.

This is the great American holiday, a day exclusively ours, and its observance is accompanied by an ever growing custom of family reunions that is giving it a place in the hearts of Americans that can be touched by nothing quicker than by what effects the hearthstone and home. It is a day when not only members of families gather, but when prospective members are invited to join for a day the family circle, and this feature is an unfailing sign for the guidance of the aspiring maid or youth. As a nation we certainly have much to be thankful for, and as individuals no doubt the majority of us could be worse off.

The Courier assumes too much. The Gazette does not claim the credit for the fact that Red Lake county was one of only three in the district where Congressman Eddy ran ahead of McKinley, the other two counties being Pope, and Rosean. We are perfectly willing to give the Courier credit for the whole thing, and verily believe that if it had not supported Daly and opposed Eddy this fine showing would not have been possible. It goes to show what a good thing it is to have the Courier's opposition and that of its editors in a political campaign.

When The Gazette espoused Eddy's cause, the Courier said he was doomed. He got a larger plurality than ever before, but we have not heard from the boys in regard to that, as yet. Perhaps it will come later. We notice last week they admit that this is the county of "Free Homes." Those voters who were gulled will now see that the denial of the validity of the Free Homes law was for campaign purposes only. Who will know when to believe the Cur oow? They have cried "wolf" too often.

The Crookston Daily Times is ten yearsold. So good a newspaper is the Times, and so well known the fact, that it seems almost superfluous for us to add the testimony of The Gazette. Indeed, the Times is a model as a sucessful, popular newspaper.

One of the Courier boys, who bolted Populist nominees, and ran independent, and Frank, who assisted him, talking about party loyalty and honor! Whoop! Where would that Republican's $100 be if Frank hadn't been running?

The switch board for the local telephone exchange arrived this week, and Manager Schreiter expects to have everything in operation by next Monday. The switch board has 100 drops, and it is thought will accommodate the business for some time to come. Miss Lorena Schreiter will have charge of the exchange.

Dave Picket and his troupe of colored comedians, gave two entertainments in the city last week—Friday and Saturday. Dave Picket has been on the road for nearly twenty years and is personally very popular. He gives a good, clean entertainment. The company went from here to Thief River Falls and St. Hilaire.

Excursion tickets, Eastern Canada and return, on sale Dec. 3rd, to Dec. 31st. Via Great Northern Railway and best Eastern roads.

The Great Northern railroad is about to build a line paralleling the Brainerd & Northern, presumably to offset the marked success attending the Brainerd & Northern, and the Northern Pacific's new line, the Minnesota & International, now under construction. The latter will run north and may reach Rainy Lake. The territory has valuable lumber and this fact is said to be the chief reason to impel Mr. Hill in his decision. The exact route of this proposed line is uncertain as yet. It will strike off from the Fosston branch between that point and Leech Lake into the lumber belt. Mr. Hill has not yet made an official statement of his intentions in the matter.

KEEP IT A SECRET

DIPLOMATS AT PEKING AGREE ON PRELIMINARY TREATY.

Nothing Now Remains but to Secure the Approval of Their Respective Governments—It Is Said That the Terms Are in Line With the French Note to the Powers.

PEKING, Saturday, Nov. 24.—The diplomatic body held a special meeting this morning and agreed upon the terms of the preliminary treaty. Nothing now remains except to secure the approval of their respective governments before definite measures on the Chinese peace treaty are begun.

The exact terms of the settlement have not been made public here, but it is believed outside that the diplomatic corps are in substantial agreement with the French note to the powers, namely punishment of guilty, indemnities to governments and individuals, retention of strong legation guards and the occupation of certain places between Peking and Taku.

A party of American cavalry went forth to disperse a band of bandits in a village 16 miles from Peking. The village was found strongly fortified, but the Americans attacked and captured it, killing seven Chinese.

A secret edict from Sian Fu to the provincial viceroys and governors orders them to cease the manufacture of modern arms and to revert to the old type of weapons, because modern arms have proven utterly worthless against the foreigners.

MORE FAVORABLE.

Information at State Department Indicates a Better State of Affairs.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Such information as has come to the state department in the last few days is said to indicate a more favorable condition of affairs respecting the chances for a satisfactory understanding among the ministers of the powers than during the earlier part of last week, when a deadlock seemed imminent. Just what is the nature of this agreement is not apparent, but evidently it came from Secretary Hay's last note to the powers setting forth the purposes of the United States toward China.

This note contained instructions that have been sent to Minister Conger, and are believed to be of such a nature as to constitute an appeal from the extreme demands of some of the powers with regard to the treatment of the Chinese government upon some matters on which the ministers have been unable to agree.

MILD SATISFACTION.

No Confidence in London That Any Real Step Has Been Made.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—Mild satisfaction is expressed in the London papers this morning that the diplomats in Peking have arrived at a preliminary understanding, but no confidence seems to be felt that any real step has been made in the endless negotiations. It is conceded that there is little for Germany to do but to concede where the United States and Russia agree.

The Standard says: "It is hardly possible for Germany to hold out, deeply offended as she is, if the United States, Russia, France and Japan are disposed to moderation. Our Berlin correspondent is prepared to waive the death penalty."

The Shanghai correspondent of The Times telegraphs that advices from Peking state the United States has refused to join the demand for the expulsion of princes and high officials.

ADMIRAL HO RETIRING.

With Ten Thousand Troops He Is Retreating Before Colonel Yorck.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—The Times has the following from its Shanghai correspondent: "Ten thousand Chinese under Admiral Ho are said to be retiring in the direction of Kalgan before Colonel Yorck's expedition. It is said that the population is friendly and glad to be rid of Ho's soldiers."

BERLIN, Nov. 26.—The Lokal Anzeiger publishes a dispatch from Peking saying that a force of German cavalry attacked a detachment of the Chinese imperial troops under General Ma and Admiral Ho between Sun Hu and Huai Nan, killing 30 Chinese and capturing six ammunition wagons.

Punitive Expeditions Suspended.

SHANGHAI, Nov. 26.—A prominent foreign official here denies the rumor to the effect that 15,000 of the allied forces are to proceed from Shanghai to Hankow. Reports from Peking say that the punitive expeditions of the allies have been temporarily suspended.

SIR ARTHUR SULLIVAN.

Noted Musical Composer Dies Suddenly of Heart Disease.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—Sir Arthur Sullivan, the musical composer, is dead, the result of heart failure.

Sir Arthur's death was very sudden. It occurred at 9 a. m. While he was laughing and talking in a house here he fell down and died within a few minutes. He had been ailing for some time, but it was not believed his heart was affected. Recently he had been in better health than for some weeks past.

FIRM IN ITS REFUSAL.

Charge d'Affaires Griscom Calls on the Porte Regarding Harpoot Consulate.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Friday, Nov. 23.—United States Charge d'Affaires Griscom called upon Tewfik Pasha, minister for foreign affairs, yesterday to urge a settlement of the difficulty in relation to the granting of an exequatur to Dr. Thomas H. Norton, who some time ago was appointed by President McKinley to establish a consulate at Harpoot. The porte, however, is firm in its refusal to grant the request.

WILL BE A BUSY DAY.

White Earth Reservation to Be Opened Tuesday, Dec. 4.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Tuesday, Dec. 4, at 9 o'clock in the morning, is the date fixed for the opening of the four ceded townships on the White Earth Indian reservation. The total area of agricultural lands on these reservations is 33,816 acres. The lands are considered very valuable, and there will be a big rush for them at the Crookston land office, where filings are to be made. Contrary to general expectations the provisions of the free homes bill do not extend to the White Earth reservation.

BUILD A PAPER MILL.

Wisconsin Parties Will Establish a Plant at Grand Rapids, Minn.

DULUTH, Nov. 25.—L. Lindauer of Kaukauna, Wis., is in the city and confirms the report of the building of a paper mill at Grand Rapids, Itasca county, Minn. The plant will cost about $260,000 and it is the intention to have it in operation Sept. 1, 1901. Three other residents of Kaukauna are interested with Lindauer and will incorporate a company. The country contiguous to the proposed mill is well covered with spruce, poplar and other timber utilized in paper making.

Gift of Ex-Governor Pillsbury.

ST. PAUL, Nov. 24.—Through the generosity of Former Governor John S. Pillsbury of Minneapolis, the state forestry board has been offered 1,000 acres of cut-over land in Cass county to be used for forestry purposes. The offer was presented at a meeting of the board in a personal letter, in which Mr. Pillsbury expressed regret that he did not have more land to give, and reserved the right to make additions to the tract which he has donated.

Factory Building Destroyed.

RED WING, Minn., Nov. 22.—The Red Wing Stoneware company's main factory building was burned during the night, causing a total property loss of between $25,000 and $30,000, well covered by insurance. The origin of the fire is unknown, although it is believed to have started from the boiler room.

May Be Murder After All.

DULUTH, Nov. 26.—Arrests will probably be made in the case of Operator Quigley, found dead in the burned station at Reno a few days ago. Suspicion that murder was done has been aroused by newly discovered circumstances.

STABBED TO DEATH

PROMINENT MINNEAPOLIS YOUNG MAN KILLED IN A FIGHT.

Victim Is Leonard A. Day, Son of the Late Millionaire Lumberman of That Name—Frank Hamilton, a Reporter, Charged With the Crime—Democratic Proposal For a Recount—Robbers Loot a Store at Foreston—State News in General.

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 26.—Leonard A. Day, son of Leonard Day, the late millionaire lumberman, and a young man well known about town, was stabbed to death in the West hotel billiard hall about 2 o'clock Sunday morning.

Frank Hamilton, a Minneapolis Times reporter, with whom he was engaged in an altercation just previous to the time when the fatal blow was struck, is locked up at the Central police station, charged with murder.

All witnesses, and men who participated in a general row that resulted from the differences between the two men, agree that the men engaged in two scuffles. They were separated by friends in the first, and shook hands, and it was believed that the trouble was over. About five minutes later they resumed quarreling and friends made another attempt to separate them. During the general melee the fatal blow was struck and almost without a word, Day fell to the floor.

It is reported that a woman is at the bottom of the trouble, although possibly innocently so.

DEMOCRATIC PROPOSAL.

Suggest a Recount For Governor of Eight Minnesota Counties.

ST. PAUL, Nov. 25.—Definite steps toward settling the question of the gubernatorial election, which many of the friends of Governor Lind believe did not really result as the face of the returns show, was taken by Chairman Rosing of the Democratic state central committee, with the evident indorsement of Governor Lind.

The proposition, which is contained in a letter to Captain C. C. Whitney, as secretary of the Republican state central committee, is briefly, to recount eight counties, each committee to name four of them. If these eight counties do not show a net gain of 500 votes for Governor Lind, then Mr. Rosing assures the Republicans that Governor Lind will not further contest the election.

GOT OFF WITH THE MONEY.

Burglars Blow Open the Safe in a Store at Foreston, Minn.

PRINCETON, Minn., Nov. 21.—The hardware store of T. F. Neumann of Foreston, this county, was entered by cracksmen who blew open the safe and levanted with $500 in cold cash and $600 in checks and town orders. The clock over the safe stopped at 1:25 a. m., indicating that the safe was blown at that time. The interior of the store was partly wrecked and the loss on that account may foot up several hundred dollars.

KNOCKED THE STOVE OVER.

Telegraph Operator at Reno, Minn., Burned to Death.

DULUTH, Nov. 20.—The tragedy at Reno, a station about 60 miles from Duluth on the Iron Range railroad, where J. W. Quigley, a telegraph operator, was burned to death in the stationhouse Sunday night, was not a murder, as first reported, but an accident. Coroner Eklund has investigated and found that Quigley and a woodsman got drunk on a jug of whisky left in the station by some hunters. While in that condition they tipped the stove over and set the building on fire. Quigley was evidently too drunk to get out, but the other man escaped.

MANY LIVES ENDANGERED

Fire in a St. Paul Hotel Causes a Lively Time.

ST. PAUL, Nov. 27.—Fire roused 68 sleeping guests at the Maple Leaf hotel, 147 East Third street, shortly after 2 a. m., driving them to the street, clad only in their night clothes.

Louis Kerl, proprietor of the hotel, with his wife and young son, narrowly escaped suffocation, while Ella Dorothy was carried from the second floor unconscious by Patrolman Misko.

MILLER AND HARDY BAILED.

Probable End of a Notable Case So Far as They Are Concerned.

ANOKA, Minn., Nov. 28.—Elmer Miller and James Hardy were brought before Judge Giddings and were bound over to the March term of court, bail being fixed at $5,000. A joint bond was furnished and the two boys were released. After visiting a few intimate friends they went to their respective homes.

Found Corbett Not Guilty.

ST. PAUL, Nov. 23.—The jury in the case of Game Warden Edward F. Corbett, on trial for the murder of Joseph Mrozinski, the fisherman, brought in a verdict of not guilty. They reached a decision in 20 minutes. Corbett, who has maintained a stoical demeanor throughout the trial, was deeply moved by the verdict.

Pioneer Lumberman Dead.

ST. CLOUD, Minn., Nov. 27.—Coleman Bridgman, a pioneer lumberman of this state and the founder of the town of Bridgman, Lac qui Parle county, died at his home in this city of Brights disease. The deceased was 72 years of age and came to Minnesota from South Amherst, Mass., in 1859.

Upholds the Police Commission.

ST. PAUL, Nov. 22.—The supreme court, in a decision rendered during the morning, upholds the action of the police commission of St. Paul in dismissing officers summarily "for the good of the service," without charges being brought against them and without hearing.

WYLIE GAZETTE.

Edited by H. P. JOHNSON, WYLIE, MINN.

A department devoted to the interests of Wylie and the district tributary. Subscriptions received by H. P. Johnson.

As the Wylie Gazette makes its bow to the public it feels proud to be recognized by a people whose history is paragraphed in daring efforts and perseverence.

We look back over the lapse of about twenty years and picture in our mind a wilderness. A scene of the wild West, where the white man had scarce left a footprint; where no roads guided the feet of the wanderer, and no bridges over the rivers, in whose shadows the reflection of the stars were lost. From progressive monarchies of Europe came men who stepped over the threshold of the New World intent on earning for themselves and families by the sweat of their brows an honest livelihood. As civilization advanced westward these men followed its sweep, and undaunted by the stories of the prairies, where the northwind in winter raged in its fury. they settled here in a then remote part of our country. We see these men, with their families, struggling through many years. dwelling in humble cottages, and breaking the prairie soil more and more, year after year; and as they were persistent in bettering their homes the sod shanties have given place to comfortable buildings. Where was the wild brushland now wave fields of grain, and stand majestic groves. The swamps are turned into beautiful meadows where graze sleek herds. Churches and school houses have replaced the Indian wigwams,

Newspapers and letters reach our postoffice daily, whereas in former years the postoffice was the recipient of mail only at long intervals.

To the older settlers, the pioneers, and their courageous efforts, are due the fact that towns and villages here flourish among us; that the net of railroads have sent straggling branches even here. We appreciate that the generation of to-day enjoys the fruits of your labor. We see the expressions of nobleness in your sunburned faces—kindliness, thoughts for the wellfare of your descendents and love of country have left their stamp. As this department, hand in hand with the Red Lake Falls Gazette, finds its entrance into your bright and cheerful homes, which you have built for yourselves and your children, it bows in profound respect as it craves attention. May it ever find a warm support in your hospitality. It shall always with pleasure make its earnest endeavor to contribute to your source of general information. As the time passed by our people here has taught them morals, character and the higher life, we hope that our items shall at all times be free from criminal news, and never contain a line discreditable to an individual, a neighborhood or to the people as a whole.

The Wylie Gazette hopes that where it once makes a call, it may always be a welcome visitor; that your children may one day inherit it, and when they enter the sweet land of matrimony we shall with pleasure have them read of their wedding in our columns, and continually find delight in our page; it wishes to please all of right mind; the family and the hermit, the farmer and the laborer, the rich and the poor. So may every reader gained be a true friend won.

Your humble servant,
THE EDITOR.

Axel Sandberg and John Haglund were in St. Hilaire Sunday.

John Malmquist is doing the carpenter work on Rev. Mattson's new barn.

Some in our neighborhood received invitations to the wedding at Bray, last Friday.

Rev. J. A. Mattson returned last Monday from Minneapolis, where he had been to attend a Conference.

Naplin Bros. pulled in with their threshing machine last Wednesday, having finished up a good run, considering the fall we had.

Jake Thill and Peter Hensel, two of our prominent citizens, drove to Red Lake Falls Sunday to attend divine service at St. Mary's church.

It must be the opinion of loafers that a bachelor has more to eat than others. Whether it is that or because there is not always someone at home remains a question in the case of Chas. Sandberg, who has at different times found one of his windows broken open and all his eatables gone. The last episode of the kind occurred on a Saturday night, while Charley was out on some social enjoyment. Coming home early in the morning he found one of his window panes smashed in, and the cold breezes whistled through it while he took a short morning nap. Charley has now loaded his windows with dynamite, and next time they come, whoever they are, they will get the panes in their faces. Someone must be carrying a famine inside the vest.

The Gridiron Heroes.

Brawny and long haired and padded,
  Shields on chins, noses and ears,
Proudly again they are posing,
  Winning the tribute of cheers.
Long winded, strong limbed and daring,
  Eager for athletic fame,
They are the gridiron heroes,
  Greeted with public acclaim.

Quarter back, half back and full back,
  Tackle, guard, center and end,
Ready for desperate charging,
  Ready to meet and defend.
Lining up boldly for action,
  Putting the ball into play,
Passing and plunging and rushing,
  Getting the runner away.

With brawny foemen colliding,
  Heroes of equal renown,
Pushing and struggling and swaying,
  All in the mud going down.
Limping and bruised and discolored,
  Promptly they rally, and then,
Giving their hurts slight attention,
  Bravely they line up again.

Passing and running and punting,
  Chasing the man with the ball;
Tackling and surging and squirming,
  Down they go, runner and all.
Up again, passing and rushing,
  Scoring a touchdown, then goal.
Wild are the onlookers' plaudits,
  Cheering that knows no control.

These are the gridiron heroes,
  Plucky and brawny and fleet,
Eagerly taking all chances,
  Ready all foemen to meet.
Battered and bruised and discolored,
  Victory comes to console.
Plaudits and fame they are winning,
  Scoring a touchdown, then goal.

PERSONALITIES.

Bret Harte is to spend the coming winter in Italy and has rented a villa near Naples.

F. W. Davison of Hanover, N. H., has given a new dormitory to Dartmouth college.

Captain Dreyfus, who is still staying at Coligny, near Geneva, is again in vigorous health and has grown quite stout.

E. H. R. Green, the son of Mrs. Hetty Green, is reported to have given up Texas politics and is about to make New York his home.

Ouida says of Joseph Chamberlain: "His face indicates his character. It has no distinction, but is full of intelligence and resolution. It is that of a tradesman, not a statesman."

The oldest princess in Europe has just celebrated the eighty-ninth anniversary of her birth. This is the Duchess of Anhalt-Bernbourg, who is the elder sister of the king of Denmark.

The highest price ever paid for residence property in the city of New York and perhaps in the country was given recently by Harley T. Proctor of Cincinnati, $600,000 for a lot 100 feet front by 125 feet deep at the corner of Fifth avenue and Fifty-second street.

The Prince of Wales has lately amused himself by collecting pens of famous writers of the Victorian era. He has one that belonged to Tennyson, one of Browning's, of Swinburne's, of Hardy's and 50 or 60 more, including a curious inkstand once the property of Robert Louis Stevenson.

Patti, Baroness Cedarstrom, sang for a charity at the new opera house in Stockholm not long ago. Her husband is a brother of the equerry to the king of Sweden, and after the concert the king himself pinned upon her corsage a jeweled badge. The prima donna was invited to the palace and received a souvenir from the queen.

Canon Christopher, the veteran English evangelical leader, has recently completed his eightieth birthday, and it is proposed to commemorate the event by the establishment of scholarships at Wycliffe Hall, Oxford, and Ridley Hall, Cambridge. The scheme is receiving warm support from Lord Kinnaird, Sir John Kennaway and the bishop of Liverpool.

Former King Prempeh of Ashanti, who is now on his way to the Seychelles islands, is to be finally lodged in Mahe, in the Indian ocean, where the chiefs of the Malay peninsula were exiled in the early seventies. Mahe is 17 miles in length and 6 miles wide and enjoys the distinction, with the Aldabra islands, of being the home of the gigantic land tortoise.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Reicke of California are in charge of a signal station on the brow of a lofty peak in the Sierra Nevada mountains, where they keep a sharp lookout, fieldglass in hand, for fires which might break out in the snowsheds that skirt the railroad through the rocky wilds. If a small flame should pass unnoticed for an hour, the whole chain of sheds might be consumed and the tracks endangered. The woman watches by day and her husband by night.

STAGE GLINTS.

"The Choir Invisible" has been unsuccessful.

"Mme. Sans Gene" has passed its five hundredth performance in Paris.

"The Girl With the Auburn Hair" may next season sing in comic opera.

A play called "The Devil's House," by H. A. Kennedy, was lately brought forth in England.

Laura Burt has just returned from England, where she has had a successful season as Madge in "In Old Kentucky."

About one-half of the plays put on in London during the present season have been either failures or of doubtful box office value.

The authors of "Zaza" have sketched out a play on the subject of Marie Antoinette for Mrs. Langtry. The title is "A Queen's Heart."

Sudermann's new play, "Johannisfeuer," was produced at the Lessing theater, Berlin, recently. Some of it was received with favor and some of it was hissed.

A scheme is being evolved in Boston which, if successful, will give to theater patrons a whole evening of one act operettas, such as is common in many of the German capitals.

George M. Cohan has written more successful one act comedies than any other living playwright. More than 50 comedies which are now playing in vaudeville are from his pen.

Phœbe Davies, so long identified with "Way Down East" as its sweet and sympathetic heroine, will be seen next spring in a new romance of the American Revolution.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

It requires an average of more than 20,000,000 pins a day to meet the needs of the American people.

Thus far in 1900 Australia has sent $4,650,000 more gold to England than it sent in the same part of 1899.

During the present century 400 human lives, $100,000,000 and 200 ships have been lost in fruitless efforts to find the north pole.

A Scotch collie dog fell from a bridge at the Chicago waterworks into the pumps and passed through the pumps without losing his life. He was almost dead when he came out, but was revived by the employees of the works.

TIME AND SPACE are practically annihilated by the ocean cables and land telegraph systems which now belt the circumference of Old Earth in so many different directions. "Foreign parts" are no longer foreign in the old meaning of the term. Europe, Africa, Asia, are "next door" to us. What happens there to-day we know to-morrow—if we read THE CHICAGO RECORD, whose Special Cable Correspondents are located in every important city in the world outside of the United States. No other American newspaper ever attempted so extensive a service; and it is supplemented by the regular foreign news service of The Associated Press. For accurate intelligence of the stirring events which are shaking the nations—of wars and rumors of wars—of the threatening dissolution of old governments and the establishment of new—of the onward sweep of the race in all parts of the world—the one medium of the most satisfactory information is the enterprising, "up-to-date" American newspaper, THE CHICAGO RECORD.

FREE A large map of the world on Mercator's Projection, about 23½x16 inches in size, beautifully printed in colors, with a large-scale map of Europe on the reverse side, will be mailed to any address free of charge on receipt of request accompanied by two 2-cent stamps to cover postage and wrapping. The maps illustrate clearly how comprehensively the special cable service of THE CHICAGO RECORD covers the entire civilized world. Address THE CHICAGO RECORD, 181 Madison street, Chicago.

COUNTY NEWS NOTES.

BY OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENTS.

Emardville.

Mrs. J. K. Johnson is again seriously ill.

Mrs. Brede Bredson is on the sick list this week; also Mrs. L. Lee.

Rev. O. Kolstoe preached one of his fine sermons at the church Sunday morning.

John Kile, of Grit, was here last week in the interests of the Fosston Woolen Mills.

Rev. and Mrs. O. Kolstoe visited some of their numerous friends the fore part of the week.

Wm. A. Murphy and Louis Sieff were here from Red Lake Falls Saturday making collections.

John G. Hagen is no doubt our champion hunter and trapper. He caught one wolf Tuesday and another Saturday of last week.

Anton Nilson, Svere Jacobson, Parelions and Adolf Pederson returned home Thursday last from Keystone Farm, where they have been working.

Now that the sleighing has put the roads in a passable condition farmers are hauling their produce to the mills, elevators and stores in Red Lake Falls, at a lively rate.

The Ladies' Sewing Society auction sale last Saturday was well attended, and netted about $50.00. The ladies have donated the ceiling for the church building, for which the members feel very grateful.

We would be very much pleased if the manager of the Red Lake Falls Milling Co. would give us the proportions of bran and shorts in a ton of his advertised mixture of bran and shorts that he proposes to trade for a ton of oats.

There will be a basket party next Saturday, Dec. 1, at the home of A. E. Sorensen, at eight o'clock in the evening. The proceeds will go towards buying a heating stove for the church. There will probably be some good singing and music and refreshments will be served at a moderate price for those not securing a basket. Come one, come all.

Many people worry because they believe they have heart disease. The chances are that their hearts are alright but their stomachs are unable to digest food. Kodal Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat and prevents the formation of gas which makes the stomach press against the heart. It will cure every form of indigestion. W. A. Schreiter.

Bray.

John O. Carlson transacted business at St. Hilaire Friday.

Chas. Washgreen, of Warren, is here visiting his cousin, Chas. Englund.

Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Erickson arrived home last week from East Grand Forks after three weeks' absence.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Sandberg, of Thief River Falls, and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Lemay, of Red Lake Falls, were guests at the Larson-Drake wedding Saturday.

A pretty wedding occurred last Saturday at the residence of A. E. Anderson when Emil Larson and Miss Lulu Drake were united for life, Rev. J. A. Mattson officiating. The young couple will go to housekeeping on their farm. A feature of the event was the charivari in the evening.

DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve will quickly heal the worst burns and scalds and not leave a scar. It can be applied to cuts and raw surfaces with prompt and healing effect. Use it for piles and skin diseases. Beware of worthless counterfeits. W. A. Schreiter.

Sanders.

Ludvig Anderson has gone to the pineries via Grand Rapids, where he will work the coming winter.

Notice has been served that Lanstad's congregation will hold its annual meeting on the 10th of December next.

Rev. Lund, of St. Hilaire, and Rev. Simunson, of Beeten, Kittson county, held a meeting in Lanstad's church Monday last. Mr. Simunson preached an eloquent sermon, with the Prodigal Son as his text.

At the annual meeting of the Women's Lanstad's Sewing Society the following officers were elected:

President, Mrs. R. Aasehy.
Secretary, Mrs. Joachim Wig.
Treasurer, Mrs. Ole Thorson.

A. N. K. Anderson made a call at the home of Ole J. Osness last week. During the conversation the subject of reading matter came up and as the result of a strong recommendation it is likely that The Gazette has secured a new subscriber.

River Falls.

H. Nelson started for the Black Duck country the first of the week.

Mike Johnson finished threshing on Fred Harrington's farm last week and had a slight breakdown on moving from there to Gust Erickson's.

George Madden, of Wyandotte, passed through here Friday on his way home from St. Paul, where he had been disposing of a carload of cattle.

L. R. Bramsness had the misfortune to lose his dwelling house by fire Monday morning, the 19th inst. Nearly all the household effects were destroyed, and Bramsness Jr. had to jump from the upstairs window without his clothes. There was no insurance on anything.

Both makers and circulators of counterfeits commit fraud. Honest men will not deceive you into buying worthless counterfeits of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. The original is infallible for curing piles, injuries, eczema and skin diseases.

Herman Nelson reports his aged father as being very ill.

Mike Olson has sold six head of young stock to A. P. Sandberg.

A big drove of horses belonging to the St. Hilaire Mill Company started for the woods Sunday morning.

Carl Dahl returned from his old farm on Tuesday, bringing a span of horses and sleigh, and is now hauling home a supply of hay.

A new threshing outfit on Monday crossed the steel bridge and went out to the northeast part of the township in response to the urgent demands of the farmers of that section.

Ed Peterson and Wm. Bramsness Tuesday moved a house from St. Hilaire over the steel bridge to the Bramsness farm, to be used for a temporary residence, while building a new house on the old site on the river bank.

If you have ever seen a child in the agony of croup you can realize how grateful mothers are for One Minute Cough Cure which gives relief as soon as administered. It quickly cures cough, colds and all throat troubles. W. A. Schreiter.

Brooks.

V. Cailler, of Gentilly, was calling on her last Sunday.

Daniel Lefebvre, who has spent the last summer working at Crookston, has returned.

Ben Bronillette, of Emerson, who has been visiting with his brother Ed, returned home Tuesday.

Thanis Carriere, of Gentilly, who has spent some time with his brother Joseph, returned to his home Sunday.

J. Hawly, of Grand Forks, is building a new house on the Prinuo from where he will make his future home.

Eugene Godette was all smiles Sunday having been made richer by the arrival of a bright girl at his home.

Joseph Corbeille and Miss Victoria Asselin, of Lambert, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony last Monday at that place. The celebration took place at the bride's home with a large number of friends and relatives in attendance.

You can't afford to risk your life by allowing a cough or a cold to develop into pneumonia or consumption. One Minute Cough Cure will cure throat and lung troubles quicker than any other preparation known. Many doctors use it as a specific for grippe. It is an infallible remedy for croup. Children like it and mothers endorse it. W. A. Schreiter.

Equality.

Louis Sall went to Red Lake Falls last Tuesday.

Ben Welker has been on the sick list the past week.

Grundy Thompson went to McIntosh last Tuesday.

Ed Havik, the merchant of Grit, built a large warehouse this fall.

Mr. Pierce, of Crookston, is here baling hay which he put up last summer.

Tom Smidgan is home from the Grand Forks hospital, where he was taken about a month ago.

Miss Eleanor Breault, of Red Lake Falls, closed a successful term of school in the Green district Friday.

Athert Salt, who is along with his brothers, threshing, left for his home in Wyandotte for a few days' stay.

O. M. Gilbertson went to McIntosh Friday to look up the feasibility of that point as a place from which to ship stock.

Deer hunters have been very lucky this season—a party of six brought back ten deer, the result of two days' hunting.

Helmer Iverson went Garnes Monday inst. He had a hat on when he went and also when he came back, owing to the fact that they had no caps on hand at that place.

Threshing is progressing slowly out here, and many farmers will not get their grain threshed this winter if no other machine comes in here. The average yield of wheat per acre is about ten bushels.

There is no pleasure in life if you dread going to the table to eat and can't rest at night on account of indigestion. Henry Williams, of Boonville, Ind., says he suffered that way for years, till he commenced the use of Kodal Dyspepsia Cure, and adds, "Now I can eat anything I like and all I want and sleep soundly every night." Kodal Dyspepsin Cure will digest what you eat. W. A. Schreiter.

Bismark's Iron Nerve

Was the result of his splendid health. Indomitable will and tremendous energy are not found where Stomach, Liver, Kidneys and Bowels are out of order. If you want these qualities and the success they bring, use Dr. King's New Life Pills. They develop every power of brain and body. Only 25c at W. A. Schrieter's drug store.

It Saved His Leg.

P. A. Danforth, of LaGrange, Ga., suffered intensely for six months with a frightful running sore on his leg, but writes that Bucklen's Arnica Salve wholly cured it in ten days. For Ulcers, Wounds, Burns, Boils Pains, or Piles it's the best salve in the world. Cure guaranteed. Only 25c. Sold by W. A. Schrieter, Druggist.

THE ANDERSON LAW.

Accomplished Its Purpose, Even if Delcared to be Unconstitutional.

The United States supreme court has declared unconstitutional the Anderson law taxing railroad land grants, holding it to be a violation of the contract under which the gross earnings tax is levied.

Attorney General Douglas says that while he was disappointed in the decision, it would cause small loss to the state, as practically all the lands held under these grants had been disposed of by the grantees and are now on the tax list. There was a clause in all contracts providing that when the lands were sold they immediately became taxable. This applies to lands sold by one railroad company to another, as well as lands sold to private parties, therefore, the lands sold by the St. Paul and Duluth road to the Northern Pacific are now on the tax list.

The law has, therefore, practically accomplished its purpose, so far as the state is concerned.

WYLIE'S NEW DEPOT.

An Abandoned Pumphouse to Be Utilized for Station Purposes.

Wylie has a new depot. It went through Crookston on a flat car today. It has done duty as a pumphouse at White Lake, near Willmar, ever since the seventies, when Sup't Jenks, then a freight conductor, lost that car of wheat out of the middle of his train on his run into St. Paul from Willmar, then the terminus of the only piece of track the Great Northern, then the St. P. M. & M. owned.

The building is 7x9 in dimensions, the shingles that projected over the eaves had been knocked off by contact with a bridge, and the most valuable part of it was the keyhole to the door.

It is a disgrace to the company and to the thriving village of Wylie, and cost more to load, transport and place in shape to use than would a new building double the size.

It was reported here that when it reached its destination Jake Thill was to make the presentation speech and furnish four beerkegs which would be used as corner-stones.—Crookston Times.

PRICE ON HIS HEAD.

A Man Whom the Canadian Government Offered $100,000 For.

Cavalier county, N. D., shelters a man on whose head the Canadian government at one time placed a reward of $100,000. He is Gabriel Dumont, one of the ringleaders of the last Riel rebellion of 1885. Dumont is said to have been possessed of far more talent than Riel as a strategist, and to have possessed the confidence of the Canadian half breeds to a great extent. After Riel was captured, Dumont, with a handful of breeds, worked his way through the Canadian lines and escaped into Montana. He is at present living in the vicinity of Olga, an inland town, situated in the Pembina mountains, where he makes his home with the breeds, all of whom look upon him as a real Moses. Dumont has visited Winnipeg once since the rebellion, but he returned without having been identified. He goes armed continually, expecting that an attempt will be made on his life by friends of some of the Canadian militia killed in the rebellion. Nothing has been heard of the reward in late years. The Canadian government is satisfied that Dumont does not care to again take up his residence on the Canadian side of the border, and that is sufficient.

Two Runaways in One Afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. P. O'Brien had reason Thanksgiving afternoon to be thankful that they were alive. They hired one of Sieff's rigs for a sleigh-ride, and had barely gotten started when the team ran away. It was on Main street, and just in front of the Red Lake Falls Lumber Company's office. Mrs. O'Brien jumped out, unhurt. Mr. O'Brien clung to the lines and after a wild race up Main St., ran the horses into a corral in Little Canada, where they were stopped. Louis Sieff got into the rig here to take charge of the horses, and had them started calmly on the home stretch when they decided to run away again. Those who had seen Mr. O'Brien's lightning ride up Main St. and who were still wondering how he would get out of the deal, were thunder struck to see him repeating the feat in the opposite direction, only the horses were crazed with excitement this time, and Mr. Sieff had the reins. We never saw a more vicious runaway, and hundreds of spectators held their breaths in apprehension as the team tore down the street and neared the turn at the foot of Main street. This they made all right, but the tongue dropped here, and stopped the cutter so suddenly that the occupants were thrown over twenty feet. It seems almost miraculous that neither was hurt. The horses and rig were gathered together and everything turned out all right. But Will says two runaways in one afternoon are a little more than he would want again on top of a Thanksgiving dinner.

Found the Team.

The team stolen from Louis Sieff was found Thursday last by that gentleman in the Grand Central livery stable, Crookston. They were left there by a man who was not known and went away without leaving any address. Mr. Sieff drove down with a team one of the horses of which was the property of Vassau Bros. On his way back this horse slipped and fell, breaking his leg. It was necessary to shoot the animal, and he had but three horses on his return when he should have had four.

JEALOUSY THE CAUSE.

Former Minneapolis Woman Killed by Her Husband at Chicago.

CHICAGO, Nov. 30.—Mrs. F. A. Hudson, formerly Miss Belle Walker of Minneapolis, was murdered by her husband, who then attempted suicide. The Hudsons lived at the Vickery hotel and the crime was committed in their room. Hudson was insanely jealous of his wife. After inflicting three bullet wounds, any one of which would have caused death, he crashed the lifeless woman's skull with a hammer, and then fired two shots into his own head. The shots failed to kill and he tried to crush his skull with the butt of his revolver. In a desperate struggle he was overpowered by attaches of the hotel and removed to a hospital, where, it is said, he will recover. Mrs. Hudson came here from Minneapolis three years ago.

WEATHER IS TOO WARM.

Lumbering Operations in Minnesota Are Practically at a Standstill.

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 4.—Lumbering operations in Minnesota are practically at a standstill on account of the warm, unseasonable weather and unless there is a change at once lumbermen will be heavy losers this winter. None of the swamps are frozen over as yet and logging operations cannot be conducted with safety. The woods are full of men, ready to go to work. They are being paid the highest wages that have prevailed for several years. Should snow come before the ground freezes the situation will become more complicated than ever.

SALE OF WHITE PINE.

One Hundred Thousand Dollars Realized From White Earth Timber.

CROOKSTON, Minn., Nov. 30.—The sale of pine on the ceded portions of the White Earth reservation here resulted in cash receipts aggregating $100,000. Only one-third of tracts listed were sold. The highest priced tract brought $10 per 1,000, and several went as high as $7. The average for the day was $5.

Nearly every one of the firms owning pine lands or operating lumber mills in the state had one to three representatives here, while those in Wisconsin and Michigan were also largely represented.

BUYING SPRUCE WOOD.

Paper and Pulp Mill Agents Are Investing in Timber.

DULUTH, Dec. 4.—There is a great activity in the cutting of spruce wood for the paper and pulp mills, and this region is being invaded by agents of mills all over the country. The mills of Wisconsin and other parts of the country are fast approaching the end of their pulp-wood supply, and many of them are now buying wood here. Some are taking up timber lands with a view to a supply of wood when their present limits are exhausted. Others are buying wood direct and contracting for a part, at least, of their supply from here.

Shot Sweetheart and Himself.

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 30.—Henry W. Sherman, a shoe polisher living at 126 Fourth street south, shot his sweetheart, Miss Belle Benson, and then shot himself. Both are at the city hospital and it is expected that Miss Benson will die. Sherman received only a flesh wound and will recover.

Whipple Acquitted of Murder.

BEMIDJI, Minn., Dec. 1.—The jury in the Whipple murder case brought in a verdict of not guilty after two hours' deliberation. The first ballot stood 8 to 4 for acquittal. Judge Holland practically instructed the jury in favor of the defendant.

Minnesota Defeats Nebraska.

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 30.—Minnesota defeated Nebraska in as stubborn and well contested a football game as was ever witnessed on a local gridiron before a crowd that broke the record in point of attendance. The score was 20 to 12.

Wylie Thanksgiving Ode.

The title new this page did get
On a Thanksgiving day,
For last week Thursday was begun
Our issue in this way:
An inside page. Wylie Gazette
Should carry for its name
And Wylie's ads and Wylie news
Should crowd the space in same.

Thanksgiving is so great a day:
It visits paid us all;
To humble cottage, dwellings rich,
It made its regular call.
We reasons have to thankful be,
Each one, both rich and poor.
Destruction, perils, famine, all
Have happily passed our door.

In homes of comfort, we could spend
Our glad Thanksgiving day:
While Boys in Blue on battlefield
Were struggling nobly, brave:
While many homeless wandered
'round
Till night from early morn
On Galvaston's despoiled streets
Still tempest-racked and torn.

A turkey dinner we enjoyed,
Among our other blessings
That crowd eachother, unalloyed
By misfortunes sad, distressing—
We could this year our harvest reap,
And pile our grain in store,
While famine's plight, in India,
Reaps people by the score.

O say, is there a greater day,
Of any yet assigned?
Can you for others to observe
More valid reasons find?
Long as our people's grateful hearts
Thanksgiving's joys beget
None can a greater birthday have Than the Wylie Gazette.

"H. P."

Virtue Again Rewarded.

"I met a man yesterday," said Mr. Noodleson, trying to make himself agreeable, "who told me that you were an old friend of his."

She did not answer immediately, but after clasping her hands tightly several times and biting her underlip until it nearly bled the beautiful grass widow replied, with forceful mirth:

"You mustn't believe all you hear, Mr. Noodleson. I am nobody's 'old' friend."

Half an hour later he suddenly began to laugh with all his might and told her she was the "cleverest girl in the world. Ha, ha, ha! Such a witty thing—that about not being anybody's 'old' friend, you know!"

It was dark and very still out in the streets when he went away, and as she watched him waft a kiss back to her just before he turned the corner she sighed sweetly and said to herself:

"Ah, what wonders people in this world could accomplish if they would always try to turn the laugh right instead of getting mad."—Chicago Times-Herald.

Modern Improvements.

"I see the agent sold yez a carpet sweeper, Mrs. Maginnis. Is it as good as the ould fashioned broom?"

"It is an better, Mrs. Muldnckie. I can knock Maginnis twice as far wid it."—Chicago News.

Mystified.

"Mamma, my birthday comes this year on Monday, doesn't it?"

"Yes, dear."

"And last year it was on Sunday, wasn't it?"

"Yes, dear."

"Did it come on Saturday the year before last?"

"Yes, dear."

"Mamma, how many days in the week was I born on?"—King.

Shown Better by Her Tongue.

"Here is an article in the Sunday paper that says a woman's character can be determined by her nose."

"Well, there may be something in that, but there's a surer way. No one can make a mistake concerning a woman's character if he will look at the noses of other women who meet her. The extent to which they turn up at such times shows just what she is or isn't."—Chicago Times-Herald.

Oscar Lindquist is about again, after having been ill for some time.

C. Morren and S. Johnson transacted business in Crookston Monday.

K. F. Sandberg and wife went to Crookston on Monday last returning Wednesday.

Gust Sandberg visited his home and looked after interests here on Thanksgiving day.

Chas. Sandberg transacted business in Crookston Tuesday, returning home on Thanksgiving day.

A party was held the residence of Naplin Bros. Thanksgiving. All present reported a very enjoyable time.

Chas. Hagglund has gone to the woods. He had a party before leaving, all present reported a very enjoyable time.

Flax threshed now is not turning out as well as it was expected to. They charge twenty cents a bushel or $25 a day to thresh it.

Miss Gertie Melin left Friday for Crookston and Fargo. Her friend, Miss Many Olson, who has been visiting her for some time, accompanied her.

Rev. Mattson, pastor of the Swedish Lutheran church of Black Duck, left in his resignation to the deacons, last Tuesday at a meeting called for that purpose.

From way out West, they come to buy wood, some loads are already hauled out. Wood has been shipped to Wylie. The price will certainly be high here after some years.

Those who thresh now will have better straw for their cattle than those who threshed early, the older straw-piles being wet half way through. During threshing the majority praised the blowers, because no one was needed on the straw piles, now some speak unfavorably of them. By next fall, when threshing comes, they will undoubtedly be favored again.

Prevented A Tragedy.

Timely information given Mrs. Geo. Long, of New Straitsville, Ohio, prevented a dreadful tragedy and saved two lives. A frightful cough had long kept her awake every night. She had tried many remedies and doctors but steadily grew worse until urged to try Dr. King's New Discovery. One bottle wholly cured her, and she writes this marvelous medicine also cured Mr. Long of a severe attack of Pneumonia. Such cures are positive proof of the matchless merit of this grand remedy for curing all throat, chest and lung troubles. Only 50c. and $1.00. Every bottle guaranteed. Trial bottle free at W. A. ANIMALS ASLEEP.

The Attitudes Some of Them Assume During Slumber.

The chimpanzee, as far as I have been able to ascertain, never sleeps upon its back, its favorite position being on its side, with one arm under its head. In this respect it resembles children of from 4 to 10 years of age. The only gorilla which I have had an opportunity of observing also apparently preferred this attitude, but occasionally seemed to sleep comfortably in a crouching position, with its head bowed down between its knees. This latter attitude appears to be the one adopted by nearly all the lower monkeys.

When turned out at pasture, all horses, except those which are crippled by disease or injury, lie down at night with their legs folded beneath their bodies. Some of the short limbed and thick jointed animals, such as the elephant, hippopotamus and rhinoceros, find a difficulty in bending their legs under them after the manner of their more slender kindred. Hence they sleep upon their sides in a piglike attitude.

Bears, as far as I have been able to observe, have no characteristic sleeping attitude, for you see them lying in all sorts of grotesque positions, as if they found one quite as comfortable as another. Indeed, a well favored bear, covered with a good layer of fat and a thick coat of fur, may be said to carry his bed about with him, and any part of his skin will serve either for mattress or coverlet as occasion arises. Nevertheless, the bear, when sound asleep, tends to curl himself up with his nose and paws inward, and this is probably the attitude which in cold climates he adopts when hibernating in his den during the winter season. Kangaroos also appear to be quite indifferent as to the position of their bodies during sleep. Any sunny afternoon at the zoological gardens you may see them sprawling on the straw in all imaginable attitudes. The only things they seem to demand in order to be perfectly comfortable are reasonable warmth and plenty of elbow room.—Dr. Louis Robinson in Pearson's Magazine.

London's Donkey Famine of 1898.

The donkey famine in 1898 was one of the strangest scarcities that ever befell Britain. One cannot eat donkeys, but the dearth of them caused a terrible lot of inconvenience and sent the price of Neddy up to a prohibitive sum. There was an epidemic of disease among the donkeys of the towns, especially those animals belonging to poor people. This so thinned out the donkey roll call that these useful beasts became scarcer than they were ever known to be. It used to be said that no one has ever seen a dead donkey, but the proverb was broken that year—there were and quantity. The price of a good donkey jumped from £6 or £7 to £12 within three weeks, and soon donkeys were scarcely to be had at all.

Costers and other donkey owners held meetings to discuss the situation, but the price rose to £15, and many a poor man was forced to pay it. It was the worst year on record for costermongers. Nobody knows to what price the donkeys would have risen, but an enterprising firm of shippers imported some big freights of donkeys from Spain. These sold like wildfire, and in a fortnight the donkey trade was at its old level. Meanwhile the country districts had been emptied of donkeys to supply the town.—London Answers.

The Speed of British Railways.

The high grade rates of the big railways in Great Britain are shown in a table prepared by the Westminster Gazette. There is not a 60 miles an hour run in the lot, but the Caledonian heads the table with a 59 miles per hour run from Forfar to Perth, distance 32½ miles. The Great Northern comes next as a north going line with 55.3 miles from Petersborough to Finsbury Park. The biggest thing the Southwestern does is 54.3 miles from Okehampton to Yeoford junction—14 miles' run in 16 minutes. The big efforts of the Great Western are made from Paddington to Bath at 54.2 and to Leamington at the rate of 54.3. The Midland has a spurt from Kettering to Nottingham at 53.5, while the premier line, the London and Northwestern, enjoys an historic run from Penrith to Crewe, 123¼ miles, at the rate of 53.9 or a journey run of 2 hours 17 minutes.

True Sports Never Die.

Bicycling is almost as old as the present generation; golf is far older, though Americans in general seem not to have heard of it till recently; football was played in China more than 1,500 years ago and in younger nations ever since they heard of it, and archery and horsemanship hark back to prehistoric man and are instinctive in millions. These sports cannot die or even be killed, nor can any others that are liked; they are as irrepressible and immortal as the human impulse to get out of doors and do something.—Saturday Evening Post.

Three Days Too Late.

The Duke of Cumberland, whose reconciliation with the kaiser is said to have taken place, is a man of whom English people know little, though he might now have been the first personage in the empire had his father been born a week earlier than he was. He [illegible] the throne of England by three days, having been born on May 27, 1819, exactly 70 hours after Queen Victoria. Had the duke's father been born before the queen he would have been king of England instead of merely king

TIME AND SPACE are practically annihilated by the ocean cables and land telegraph systems which now belt the circumference of Old Earth in so many different directions. "Foreign parts" are no longer foreign in the old meaning of the term. Europe, Africa, Asia, are "next-door" to us. What happens there to-day we know to-morrow—if we read THE CHICAGO RECORD, whose Special Cable Correspondents are located in every important city in the world outside of the United States. No other American newspaper ever attempted so extensive a service; and it is supplemented by the regular foreign news service of The Associated Press. For accurate intelligence of the stirring events which are shaking the nations—of wars and rumors of wars—of the threatening dissolution of old governments and the establishment of new—of the onward sweep of the race in all parts of the world—the one medium of the most satisfactory information is the enterprising, "up-to-date" American newspaper, THE CHICAGO RECORD.

FREE A large map of the world on Mercator's Projection, about 16½x21 inches in size, beautifully printed in colors, with a large-scale map of Europe on the reverse side, will be mailed to any address free of charge on receipt of request accompanied by two 2-cent stamps to cover postage and wrapping. All matter for publication in THE GAZETTE must be handed in on or before Tuesday 6 p.m.

PATRONIZE THE HOME MERCHANTS.

A subject that should receive the earnest consideration of every resident of the city—the patronizing of home merchants in preference to those located in other cities. The local merchant should be patronized in preference to outsiders because he lives here and pays taxes here and the development of his business will greatly benefit the city and all who live in it. No industry or business establishment can be conducted here that does not benefit the whole community, and those who fail to patronize them are not good friends of the city. On the contrary they are tearing down the trade of Red Lake Falls and helping to build up foreign cities. There is no good reason why anyone should go out of Red Lake Falls for anything he wants. There are as good stores as can be found anywhere outside of the metropolitan cities and their prices are as low as elsewhere and on some classes of goods they are lower. For instance, on goods of the more expensive and less ordinary kinds not carried in stock but for which our local firms have agencies, much can be saved by buying here, as the agents are always satisfied with a net profit of five or ten per cent., which invariably places the prices below that of the largest department stores or mail order houses. This is especially true of such goods as furs, laces, tailor made suits, dress goods, diamonds, silverware, watches, etc. During our visits to the trading points like the Twin Cities, Chicago, St. Louis and other centres that get a large mail order business from the Northwest, we made special investigation into the retail prices on articles of some of the classes mentioned above, as well as on such goods as are regularly kept in stock by our merchants, and a comparison showed the unmistakable fact that generally speaking, on such articles as are kept on hand by our merchants, the prices run about even, while on classes of goods not kept in stock, but sold here by sample, catalogue, or on approval at a profit of a few per cent., there is no comparison—the difference in price being in every instance all on the side of the Red Lake Falls merchants. This may seem incredible, but it is a fact, nevertheless. So thoroughly were we convinced, that, for instance, we deferred the purchase of watches for the winners of our contest, until our return home from the metropolitan cities, giving the orders to P. E. Foldoe, on his merits. Mrs. Kaufer did likewise with her shopping list, on the merits of such local firms as Bangs & Co., Theo. LaBissoniere, Garceau Bros. and Lemieux Bros. We do not doubt that the same conditions hold good all down the line. Of course, the metropolitan firms and mail order houses have specialties that they advertise and sell below cost, to entrap the superficial, and offer certain counterfeits and cheap substitutes at prices much below those asked by our merchants for the genuine and good article that is worth perhaps twice as much or more. Competition in country towns is now so keen that buyers may be assured of right prices. And here we get back to the subject of loyalty to local institutions, which is pregnant with too much importance to aomit of adequate treatment in one brief article.

If any of our readers are guilty of the "mail order-habit" let them ask themselves if it is not something they are just a little bit ashamed of. Yet they are always found out. But it is never too late to mend.

POST-ELECTION MUSINGS.

In view of the great Republican landslide which we have so recently experienced, it might be worth while to look back over the ruins and gather up a hurried inventory of those prophets of disaster, whose wails and cries of woe befogged and beclouded the otherwise clear political horizon of ante-election days. Here we stumble across Carl Schurtz, that bundle of inconstancy and star acrobat, whose essays on the "Consent of the Governed," et cetera, inspired the onslaught which caused the insipient conflagration, known to us Americans as "Anti-Imperialism." This astute Dutchman was, when the storm (of ballots) came, still hugging the caudal appendage of our glorious Republic, hanging on for dear life, in his Herculean efforts to prevent her from plunging head foremost into the dark and yawning abyss of oblivion. But his endeavors avail not; he is gasping for breath; he awakes, and finds it is all a dream.

Continuing our way among the debris, we run up against Atkinson, whose studious research, plus worry, in his scientific exporation, discovered something, and as a result made the startling exposure that there is not enough potassium in the dirt to last 4,000 years, or thereabouts: so that after this lapse of time the human family will be in dire want of this ingredient. This fact together with one other, namely, that there was an attempt being stirred up to rear an empire upon the ruins of our once giant Republic caused this vigilant man many a sleepless night. Most of us still harbor the recollection of seeing this venerable theorist rushing out to flag our run-away Republic as she was speeding on her way to suicidal destruction. But General Voter, who engineered the excursion, was not deceived by false alarms, and our well-meaning but much mistaken and deluded flagman had to fall back and permit the Train of Progress uninterrupted passage to its destined end.

Leaving Atkinson and his potassium hulk, we approach Lentz, of Ohio, the state of statesmen. We remember this midsummer politician as standing guard over the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution, peering at these immortal documents through his powerful magnifying lenses, thereby distorting these grand state papers into lame and crippled pronunciamentos, under which our beloved country was denied the inalienable right to enter upon the path of growth, of progress, and of prosperity. Still unable to attune himself to the views of the American people as expressed in a popular verdict, this discredited torch-bearer looks a little wilted and disfigured, as he has, with the assistance of his constituency, been permitted to retire to the seclusion of his home, there, I hope, to give entertainment to no illwill towards his fellow countrymen who were unwilling to adopt his plans and specifications as to our duty in the premises.

It was heralded about during the last session of congress that there was a man in the Senate who used to get up mornings and blush for his country. He was at one time a sapient growth of Republicanism, but who at maturity ripened into a Populist of the pestiferous and pessimistic kind. His name is Pettigrew; Pettigrew of South Dakota. We found him here among the ruins. He is still blushing. But now the roseate hue which bathes his colossal cheek to the very temples, is occasioned by the fact that his misrepresented constituency refused to encore the spectacular and pyrothenical display which he let off while at the national capitol. He, too, in the quiet precincts of his domicile, is permitted to sit and nurse his wounds.

There are others, but too numerous to mention. Suffice it to say that we have here not a few of the beacon lights who were chiefly concerned in bolstering up the ghost of imperialism. I think it will be generally conceded that their individual plays were open to severe criticism, and that on the whole it will be the judgment of the careful and impartial historian that they lacked team work.

I am, yours smiling over the result,

ROMULUS.

Cold Steel or Death.

"There is but one small chance to save your life and that is through an operation," was the awful prospect set before Mrs. I. B. Hunt, of Lime Ridge, Wis., by her doctor after vainly trying to cure her of a frightful case of stomach trouble and yellow jaundice. He didn't count on the marvellous power of Electric Bitters to cure Stomach and Liver troubles, but she heard of it, took seven bottles was wholly cured, avoided the surgeon's knife, now weighs more and feels better, than ever. It's positively guaranteed to cure Stomach, Liver and Kidney troubles and never disappointe. Price 50c at W. A. Schreiter's drug store.

A Night of Terror.

"Awful anxiety was felt for the widow of the brave General Burnham of Machias, Me., when the doctors said she could not live till morning" writes Mrs. S. H. Lincoln, who attended her that fearful night. "All thought she must soon die from Pneumonia, but she begged for Dr. King's New Discovery, saying it had more then once saved her life, and had cured her of Consumption. After three small doses she slept easily all night, and its further use completely cured her." This marvelous medicine is guaranteed to cure all Throat, Chest and Lung diseases. Only 50c and $1.00. Trail bottle free at W. A. Schreiter's drug store.

Anton Pederson, an employe of the Thief River Falls Lumber Company, was here several days last week, assisting Manager Doran in making the regular annual inventory of the yard here. He finished his labors and returned home Saturday. Manager Doran is showing a fine year's business, owing largely to the careful and systematic methods employed by him, and to his popularity with patrons of the yard.

Bruno Desrosier, the well known Terrebonne farmer, brought a load of wheat to town Saturday, which he hauled in a tight box on a sleigh. Going down the first street hill, toward the elevator, his rig tipped over, dumping the wheat onto the street. Assisted by a volunteer broom brigade, and several shovelers, he soon had the wheat back, and Agent Crompe says the grade was not effected adversely, as it went No. 1.

County Auditor Zeh says the wolf bounty business is getting brisk again. The bounty is $5 a head until the first of the year, and $7 from then to April first. The county pays one third of the bounty and the state the other two thirds. At present the state is behind in cashing orders, on account of a deficiency in the appropriation, which is not large enough to cover the wolf business. The county issues warrants and pays the interest until they are cashed.

Ed Maloney received a telegraphic message Sunday, announcing that his brother John, who had been taken to the Northern Pacific hospital three days before, had died that morning. Mr. Maloney took the stage to Crookston, where he caught the east bound passenger. Deceased was well known here. Theo. Garceau was called to the telephone Saturday and there closed the deal with Land Agent Goodenough, several hundred miles away, disposing of his Lambert farm for $1500. Mr. Garceau says the long distance is good enough for him.

Peter Benoit, son of Charles Benoit, went to California Monday. He bought a return ticket from Agent Boudreault, of the Northern Pacific, which cost him $103.55. He will spend his time visiting his brother, Charles, in Watsonville.

C. W. Mead yesterday received a telegram announcing the death of his brotherinlaw, Mike McCann, of Devillo, N. D., which was occasioned by typhoid fever, and that six of his seven children are ill with the same disease.

Word comes from Mrs. J. F. Krost that she stood the shock of the operation on Monday, and is doing well, with every prospect for her recovery. One of the most famous surgeons of Chicago performed the operation, which was a very dangerous one.

Dr. Hugh McDonald, a class mate of Dr. Watson at McGill University, and who has made a name for himself in Minneapolis, visited our Mayor Friday. During his stay he assisted Dr. Watson in removing the little finger of Helen Schaefer's right hand, necessitated by the formation of a gangrenous growth. The patient has been doing well since the operation, and the hand is healing nicely.

A. Gooding, proprietor of the Gooding Milling property, and J.N. Miller, the St. James, Minn., capitalist, were in the city Friday, trying to agree on a deal for the property. Mr. Miller returned yesterday, and it is said is likely to buy the plant, which is one of the finest water power properties in the Northwest. It is worth $50,000, but is now being offered at $20,000.

Peder H. Swendson, one of the popular farmers of Numedal, made The Gazette a pleasant call, Saturday. He reports the flax harvest still in progress, and much threshing remaining unfinished. The ground is so soft that it is difficult to move threshing rigs, the frost having merely touched the surface. Louis Hanson had a breakdown Saturday, while moving his machine from Waslie's to Christianson's, occasioned by the wheels miring. Mr. Swanson likes The Gazette, and attested the fact by paying for it another year in advance.

DAVIS IS DEAD

MINNESOTA'S SENIOR SENATOR PASSES AWAY.

His Long Illness Terminates Apparently Without Pain—Unconscious to the Last. Surrounded by Relatives and Friends When the Summons Came—Sketch of His Life.

ST. PAUL, Nov. 28.—Cushman Kellogg Davis, Minnesota's foremost citizen, and one of the most distinguished figures in American public life, died at his home in this city at 8:45 o'clock Tuesday night. No sign of pain accompanied the approach of death, and, in fact, the sad inevitable came so peacefully that even the attending physicians could not assure themselves of death until three or four minutes later. Unconscious at the last Senator Davis did not, of course, recognize any of those of his family or friends who stood beside his bed when the summons came. A slight tremor, a faint gasp, and the man upon whom the eyes of an expectant nation, a bereaved city and a distressed world were fixed had quietly passed into the silent courts of eternity.

CUSHMAN K. DAVIS.

Surrounding the bed of the dying man for some time prior to the sad end and at its arrival were the bereaved wife, the aged and deeply stricken father, Major Davis; two sisters of the deceased, Mrs. T. T. Morford of Chicago and Mrs. Bartlett Tripp of Yankton, S. D.; Mrs. Dr. A. K. Skaro of Minneapolis, sister of Mrs. Davis; Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Severance, Mr. Severance having been a long-time law partner of the deceased; the two nurses and Doctors Stone and Lankester, who had battled with the disease which claimed the life of Senator Davis several months ago.

Came With Crushing Force.

The scene at the death-bed was a most trying one, and the burden of the fatal summons, though it had been expected throughout the day, came with crushing force to the aged parents and the stricken wife.

Frank B. Kellogg, a partner in the law firm of which Senator Davis was the senior member, arrived at the home a few minutes after the end had come.

All day the dying statesman was in a state of unconsciousness. During this time he had taken scarcely any nourishment, and medicines were suspended several hours previous to death.

For the past 10 days prior to death, Senator Davis had been in a delirious state, with occasional rallies, and for the past few days had experienced scarcely a rational moment. Little nourishment was given him during the last 24 hours of his life and he was obliged to receive medicine by injection. He slept peacefully up to within a few hours of his death, and met the end without a struggle or indication of pain. The doctors feared a convulsion at the last, but this was absent and death ensued gently and quietly.

CAREER OF SENATOR DAVIS

Held Many Positions of Honor in State and National Affairs.

Cushman Kellogg Davis was born in Henderson, Jefferson county, N. Y., June 16, 1838. In that year his parents moved to Waukesha, Wis., where his father farmed until 1850. After attending the common schools young Davis spent three years in Carroll college at Waukesha, preparing himself for the University of Michigan, from which he graduated in 1857. During his boyhood he held for some time a position as telegraph operator in what is now a suburb of Milwaukee. After his graduation he entered the law office of Alex W. Randall, afterwards war governor of Wisconsin.

In 1860 Mr. Davis began the practice of law and also took an active part in the campaign resulting in the election of Lincoln. Two years later, war having come, he closed his law office to enlist in the volunteer army. He served for two years in the Army of the Tennessee in Kentucky, Tennessee, Arkansas and Mississippi, part of the time on staff duty. When, in 1864, broken health compelled his retirement, he was first lieutenant of Company B, Twenty-eighth Wisconsin Volunteer infantry.

Going to St. Paul he formed a law partnership with his army chief, General W. A. Gorman, ex-governor of Minnesota territory. In 1868 he was elected to the state legislature and two years later was appointed United States district attorney, serving five years in that position.

Elected Governor of Minnesota.

In 1873, by a majority of one vote, he was nominated by the Republicans for governor and elected by a majority of 5,496. The campaign issue was then new, being whether the state could control the charges of railroads. Governor Davis asserted this right and such legislation was enacted and enforced during his term of office. During a protracted senatorial contest at that session Governor Davis was one of the candidates but Chief Justice McMillan was finally elected. It was at this time that the great grasshopper plague devastated Southwestern Minnesota and Governor Davis raised over $100,000 in money besides supplies for the victims of the plague.

Governor Davis declined a renomination and resumed the practice of law. His successor, Governor Pillsbury, retained him to argue in the United States supreme court the case of the state of Wisconsin against the city of Duluth and the state of Minnesota to restrain the opening of the present Duluth ship canal through which all the commerce of that port now passes. Mr. Davis won the suit for Minnesota. He continued in the practice of law until 1887, also giving considerable attention to politics. In 1884 he headed the Blaine delegation to Chicago where he made one of the nominating speeches for that candidate.

During 1886 many of the state newspapers advocated his election as United States senator and when the legislature of 1887 met Senator McMillan withdrew as a candidate for re-election and Mr. Davis received every vote.

Authority on International Law.

Senator Davis' first chairmanship in the senate was of the committee on pensions, which he held throughout his first term. He was the author of the pension law of 1890 which terminated the demands for excessive pension legislation and also satisfied the old soldiers. As a member of the committee on territories Senator Davis led the fight for the admission of the Dakotas to statehood, making his first speech in the senate on that subject.

As a student and an authority on international law Senator Davis furnished briefs to President Harrison and Secretary of State Blaine on the Chilian dispute and the Behring sea controversy. His advocacy of the new locks at the Sault Ste. Marie ship canal carried to a successful result legislation the wisdom of which has since been amply demonstrated.

In 1893 the Republican legislative caucus voted in favor of the re-election of Senator Davis, but before the legislature voted on the senatorship various influences intervened and he was finally elected by a majority of 1, although the Republicans had a majority of 17 on joint ballot.

Head of the Most Important Committee.

At the beginning of his second term Senator Davis was placed on the committee on foreign relations, and when Senator Sherman was transferred to the cabinet of President McKinley Senator Davis was placed at the head of the important committee.

In 1895-6 many friends of the senator pressed his name for the presidential nomination, but before the state convention to name delegates met he withdrew and McKinley delegates were sent from Minnesota.

During the past four years Senator Davis' position as chairman of the foreign relations committee of the senate and later as one of the Paris peace commissioners kept him prominently before the public of all nations. He was elected without opposition in 1899 for his third term.

Senator Davis has been twice married. His first wife was Miss Laura Bowman, and, after she had secured a divorce from him, he married, in 1880, Miss Anna Malcolm Agnew.

VIEWED BY THOUSANDS.

Remains of Senator Davis Lie in State at the Minnesota Capitol.

ST. PAUL, Nov. 30.—From 10 a. m. until 3 p. m. the remains of the late Senator Davis were viewed by thousands of his fellow citizens as they lay in state in the governor's room at the capitol. On the arrival of the cortege at 9:45 the capitol was surrounded by hundreds of people and the five hours allotted to the public scarcely sufficed to allow all who so desired to take a last glance at the dead senator.

The remains of Senator Davis were escorted from his late residence to the capitol by a military escort, preceded by a squad of mounted police. As active pallbearers a platoon of Battery A served.

At 3 o'clock, the hour for closing the doors of the state house, it was conservatively estimated that not less than 17,000 people had viewed the remains, and there was still a large crowd on the exterior awaiting the privilege of getting in. It was found necessary at 2 o'clock to send the people through the chamber in which the remains lay, in column of two.

SENATOR DAVIS' FUNERAL.

Remains of the Distinguished Minnesotan in Their Last Resting Place.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 1.—The funeral of Senator Cushman Kellogg Davis occurred from his late residence, 130 Farrington avenue, shortly after 11 a. m.

The services had been announced as private, but this was only partially true, as various delegations from the civic and state bodies, and from other organizations of which the dead man had been an honored member, were present to pay to him who had gone the last compliment in their power.

Rev. Charles D. Andrews and Rev. Theodore Sedgwick officiated, and the service was simple and unostentatious, in accordance with the wishes of the senator, who disliked ostentation of any kind.

Following the services at the house the casket containing the remains was placed in the hearse and borne to the cemetery. The procession which followed was the largest ever seen in St. Paul.

Judge Wyman Dead.

ONLY INDIANS TO CUT TIMBER ON CHIPPEWA RESERVATION.

Official Figures on President and Governor—Justice Collins Offered a Senatorship—Railroads to Establish Extensive Colonies—Warm Weather Interferes With Logging Operations—State News in General.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—In the absence of Secretary Hitchcock of the interior department, who is out of the city, Indian Commissioner Jones, in response to inquires, made a specific statement covering all the details of the proposed lumbering operations on the Chippewa reservations in Minnesota during the coming winter.

Reports have reached here to the effect that large lumber operators in the state are obtaining contracts and propose sending a thousand men to the reservations to cut timber. Commissioner Jones says there can be nothing in these reports, as the purpose of the department is to have no contracts let for logging by white lumbermen, or to allow any white laborers to participate in the logging operations, except those who may be required for foremen.

THE OFFICIAL FIGURES.

Van Sant's Plurality Over Lind in Minnesota 2,358.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 4.—Complete returns on governor and practically complete returns on presidential electors have been received by the secretary of state. The returns on governor show that Van Sant has a majority over Lind of 2,358. Van Sant's vote was 152,647, and Lind's 150,289.

With Beltrami county missing, McKinley's majority over Bryan is 76,145. The McKinley electors received a total of 187,280 votes, against 111,135 for those on the Bryan ticket. Of the 81 counties listed McKinley carried all but 5.

OPPOSED TO A CONTEST.

Governor Lind Prefers to Let Captain Van Sant Have the Place.

ST. PAUL, Nov. 30.—Governor Lind appeared before the Democratic state executive committee and expressed his well-known disinclination to contest the election of Captain Van Sant. It is reported that he said that nothing but a discovery of frauds or errors so gross as to make it his public duty to contest would persuade him to enter the strife.

SAID HE WILL REFUSE.

Judge Collins Tendered an Appointment as Successor to Davis.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 4.—Loren W. Collins (Rep.), associate justice of the state supreme court, has been offered the appointment of United States senator to succeed Cushman K. Davis. An intimate friend of Justice Collins stated that there was no doubt but that the appointment had been offered Mr. Collins by Governor Lind. Mr. Collins was not in the city and it could not be learned whether he would accept the appointment or not. His friends, however, believe that he will refuse it.

LOWRY A CANDIDATE.

Minneapolis Man Desires to Succeed Davis in the Senate.

DULUTH, Dec. 4.—G. G. Hartley of Duluth, a close friend and business associate of Thomas Lowry of Minneapolis, has returned from a trip to New York with the latter and stated positively to the Duluth Evening Herald that Mr. Lowry will be a candidate before the coming state legislature to succeed Cushman K. Davis in the United States senate.

TO ESTABLISH COLONIES.

Railroads Attempt to Settle Unoccupied Lands.

DULUTH, Dec. 1.—There is quite an important move on the part of the several railroads centering here that have lands for settlement, to get colonies established on these lands. The Northern Pacific in particular is trying to bring in people from the eastern and southern parts of Wisconsin, Iowa and other states, and from Northern Europe.

Several representatives of the latter class have been lately looking over lands with a view of establishing themselves in a very considerable way, with a large population. Some tracts in Carlton and Pine counties are under consideration for the purpose. There are also some colonies on a smaller scale planned for St. Louis county and several important deals have already taken place on lands lying between Carlton and Deerwood, on the western line of the Northern Pacific road.

SIOUX ARE CONSUMPTIVE.

Paymaster Johnson Thinks the Tribe Is Decreasing.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 2.—Paymaster Johnson passed through this city on his way to the Sisseton and Wahpeton reservations in the Dakotas, carrying with him $150,000 interest money, which he will apportion among the reds at the rate of $77 per capita. Mr. Johnson disagrees with Commissioner Jones, and says that the mortality from consumption among the Sioux Indians is steadily on the increase. Out of 1,954 men, women and children on one of the reservations, there were 55 deaths last year, mostly from consumption.

WINONA'S EPIDEMIC.

Three Hundred Cases of a Mild Form of Smallpox.

WINONA, Minn., Dec. 3.—Secretary Bracken of the state board of health, who was called to Winona to investigate the epidemic that is going the rounds in this city, gives out the statement that the disease is evidently smallpox of a mild character and that the per cent mortality as he has known the disease is about 3 per cent. It is said there are over 300 cases, mostly in the Fourth ward, which is largely a Polish settlement.

THE AMERICAN SOLDIER.

An English Description of Our Men and Officers in Action.

I think if there had been no fighting all the foreign observers would have gone back to their homes with a very poor opinion of the efficiency of the American troops. Luckily for General Chaffee and his soldiers there was fighting.

When you see an American private advancing under fire, you begin to think there is something in the idea that the fighting unit of the future is the individual. Private Silas P. Holt acts by himself, for himself. He and his companions make for a common objective not like stiff trained soldiers, but like panthers stalking a prey. Their eyes flash, their lithe bodies swing forward. There are murder and deadly intentness in every movement. When the American soldier lies down to fire, he does so with the intention of killing somebody. Most troops fire not at the enemy, but in the direction of the enemy. Not so the American.

Each man drew his watchful breath slow taken
'tween the teeth;
Trigger and eye and ear a-cock, knit brow and hard drawn lips.

That is a picture of the American soldier firing on his foe. But allied to their feline stealthiness the Americans in battle have a most reckless courage. At times they expose themselves with a strange contempt for death. An officer will take chances no European would care to take. The field battery was generally to be found in pieces where no one read in tactics would have dared to put it. General Chaffee and his staff always rode where the enemy was most likely to see and shoot at them.

Young and inexperienced correspondents were warned by older hands not to go during an action near prominent buildings, large graves or the American staff.—Taku Cor. London Telegraph.

Physicians and the Hall of Fame.

The Hall of Fame farce should give an excellent subject for some opera bouffe writer. It is plain that the judges have not been chosen for their fitness, have not taken their work seriously, have not been guided by a high and dignified ideal, but have been ruled by class prejudices, local prides and fantastic superficiality. They have thought of the word famous as indicating the person the most talked about, most read or that has happened to get himself before the popular attention. Hardly one judge seems to have asked himself who has best deserved fame, not one has inquired who has done the most good to his fellow men. The name of no woman is thought worthy of a place.

Then consider the blundering crudity itself of wishing for a Hall of Fame. The affair can have but one effect—that is, to inspire the young and ambitious to secure fame by the same means as these famous men have done. But the ethics, the religion of all noble action, is not to seek to do that which will bring human applause and renown, but that which will be right, prevent evil and better human life. Not a physician is to have his name in the New York Hall of Fame, and it is a matter of congratulation. And yet there have been a thousand physicians who have done a thousand times more good to their fellow men than many that are likely to be included, for instance, Edgar Allan Poe or Daniel Boone.—Philadelphia Medical Journal.

A Dress Chart.

Men who are likely to worry over questions of dress that arise in the complicated social life of New York may find every point settled for them on a new chart. This mentions first the occasions on which formal dress is necessary and then under the various subheadings, such as weddings, afternoon teas and the more or less ceremonious occasions, treats of the kind of coats, trousers, cravats, gloves or jewelry to be worn at these particular times. Informal dress is treated with the same thoroughness, and occasions included under this head are stag or club dinners, business hours and all athletic pursuits such as golf and bicycling. From an attentive study of this chart it is possible to get an authoritative expression on every detail of every kind of dress. Whether gold studs or mother of pearl should be worn at a certain time with evening dress, whether the gloves should be smooth or rough and whether they should be gray or brown are all explained in such systematic fashion that the man who is dressing in the greatest haste may make no mistake in any point if he only keeps this authoritative chart by the side of his mirror.—New York Sun.

The Earth.

The measurement of Mother Earth's exact size and figure is a monster feat of engineering just completed by Uncle Sam. It has cost him nearly 30 years of constant effort and fully $500,000.

The honor of announcing to humanity its most accurate knowledge as to just how large a mass is our great spinning top and just what is its form and shape falls solely to the surveyors and computers of our coast and geodetic survey.

Mother Earth's diameter through her equator is 7,926 miles; her height from pole to pole, 7,899 miles. In other words, she is broader than she is tall.—New York Telegram.

Woman the Weaker.

David S. Sage and wife of Lebanon, Ills., were killed in a storm four years ago. In a suit for a settlement of the estate of $10,000 the question arose which had died first. If Sage, then his wife's relatives would be entitled to her award, consisting of dower and homestead. If his wife died first, then her relatives would be entitled to nothing. There was no way of proving which had died first, and the court held that since woman is weaker than man Mrs. Sage must have died first.

Arms and The Woman

By Harold MacGrath

Copyright, 1900,
By Harold MacGrath.

"But you haven't told me," said I, as I took my place in the carriage, "how I am to become a guest at the dinner tomorrow evening."

"I spoke to the king this morning. I said that I had a caprice. He replied that if I would promise it to be my last he would grant it. I promised. I said that it was my desire to bring to the dinner a person who though without rank was a gentleman, one who would grace any gathering, kingly or otherwise. My word was sufficient. I knew before I asked you that you would come. Twenty-four hours from now we—that is, you and I—will be on the way to the French frontier. I shall be ever in your debt."

Silence fell upon us. I knew that I loved her with a love that was burning me up, consuming me. And the adventure was all so unheard of for these prosaic times! And so full of the charm of mystery was she that I had not been a man not to have fallen a victim. What possibilities suggested themselves to me as on we rode! Once across the frontier I should be free to confess my love for her. A princess? What of that? She would be only a woman—the woman I loved. I trembled. Something might happen so that she would have to turn to me. If the king refused to forgive her, she was mine! Ah, that plain carriage held a wonderful dream that night. At length—too shortly for me—the vehicle drew up in front of my hotel. As I was about to alight her hand stretched toward me. But instead of kissing it I pressed my lips on her round white arm. As though my lips burned, she drew back.

"Have a care, monsieur; have a care," she said icily. "Such a kiss has to be won."

I stammered an apology and stepped out. Then I heard a low laugh. "Good night, Mr. Hillars. You are a brave gentleman!"

The door closed, and the vehicle sped away into the darkness. I stood looking after it, bewildered. Her last words were spoken in pure English.

With the following evening came the dinner, and I as a guest—a nervous, self conscious guest who started at every footstep. I was presented to the king, who eyed me curiously. Seeing that I wore a medal such as his chancellor gives to men who sometimes do his country service, he spoke to me and inquired how I had obtained it. It was an affair similar to the Bulkistan, only there was not an army, but a mob. The princess was enchanting. I grew reckless and let her read my eyes more than once, but she pretended not to see what was in them. At dinner a toast was given to his majesty. It was made with those steins I showed you, Jack.

The princess said softly to me, kissing the rim of the stein she held, "My toast is not to the king, but to the gentleman!" I had both steins bundled up and left with the host together with my address.

It was not long after that the eventful moment for our flight arrived. I knew that I was basely to abuse the hospitality of the king. But what is a king to a man in love? Presently we two were alone in the garden, the princess and myself. She was whispering instructions, telling me that I was a man of courage.

"It is not too late to back out," she said.

"I would face a thousand kings rather," I replied.

We could see at the gate the carriage which was to take us to the station. Now came the moment when I was tried by the crucible and found to be dross. I committed the most foolish blunder of my life. My love suddenly overleaped its bounds. In a moment my arms were around her lithe body; my lips met hers squarely. After it was done she stood very still, as if incapable of understanding my offense. But I understood. I was overwhelmed with remorse, love and regret. I had made impossible what might have been.

"Your highness," I cried, "I could not help it! Before God I could not! It is because I love you better than anything in the world—you cannot be of it—and all this is impossible, this going away together."

Her bosom heaved, and her eyes flashed like a heated summer sky.

"I will give you one minute to leave this place," she said, her tones as even and as cold as sudden repression of wrath could make them. "I trusted you, and you have dared to take advantage of what seemed my helplessness. It is well indeed, for you that you committed this outrage before it is too late. I should have killed you then. I might have known. Could ever a woman trust a man?" She laughed contemptuously. "You would have made me a thing of scorn, and I trusted you!"

"As God is my judge," I cried, "my respect for you is as high as heaven itself! I love you. Is there nothing in that? I am but human. I am not a stone image. And you have tempted me beyond all control. Pardon what I have done. It was not the want of respect"—

"Spare me your protestations. I believe your minute is nearly gone," she interrupted.

And then—there was a crunch on the gravel behind us. The princess and I turned in dismay. We had forgotten all about the anonymous note. Two officers were approaching us and rapidly. The elder of the two came straight to me. I knew him to be as inexorable as his former master, the victor of Sedan. The princess looked on mechanically.

"Come," said the count in broken English. "I believe your carriage is at the gate."

I glanced at the princess. She might have been of stone for all the life she exhibited.

"Come; the comedy is a poor one," said the count.

I followed him out of the garden. My indifference to personal safety was due to a numbness which had taken hold of me.

"Get in," he said when we reached the carriage. I did so, and he got in after me. The driver appeared confused. It was not his fare, according to the agreement. "To the city," he was briefly told. "Your hotel?" turning to me. I named it. "Do you understand German?"

"But indifferently," I answered listlessly.

"It appears that you understand neither the language nor the people. Who are you?"

"That is my concern," I retorted. I was coming about and not unnaturally became vicious.

"It concerns me also," was the gruff reply.

"Have your own way about it."

"How came you by that medal?" pointing to my breast.

"Honestly," said I.

"Honestly or dishonestly, it is all the same." He made a move to detach it, and I caught his hand.

"Please don't do that. I am extremely irritable, and I might throw you out of the window. I can get back to my hotel without guidance."

"I am going to see you to your lodgings," asserted the count, rubbing his wrist, for I had put some power into my grasp.

"Still I might take it into my head to throw you out."

"You'd better not try."

"Are you afraid?"

"Yes. There would be a scandal. Not that I would care about the death of a miserable adventurer, but it might possibly reflect upon the virtue of her highness the Princess Hildegarde."

"What do you want?" I growled.

"I want to see if your passports are proper, so that you will have no difficulty in passing over the frontier."

"Perhaps it would be just as well to wake the American minister," I suggested.

"Not at all. If you were found dead, there might be a possibility of that. But I should explain to him, and he would understand that it was a case without diplomatic precedent."

"Well?"

"You are to leave this country at once, sir—that is, if you place any value upon your life."

"Oh, then it is really serious?"

"Very. It is a matter of life and death—to you. Moreover, you must never enter this country again. If you do, I will not give a pfennig for your life."

He found my passports in good order. I permitted him to rummage through some of my papers.

"Ach, a scribbler, too!" coming across some of my notes.

"Quite right, Herr General," said I. I submitted because I didn't care.

My luggage was packed off to the station, where he saw that my ticket was for Paris.

"Good morning," he said as I entered the carriage compartment. "The devil will soon come to his own. Ach!"

"My compliments to him when you see him!" I called back, not to be outdone in the matter of courtesy.

He found my passports in good order.

"And that is all, Jack," concluded Hillars. "For all these months not an hour has passed in which I have not cursed the folly of that moment. Instead of healing under the balm of philosophy the wound grows more painful every day. She did not love me, I know, but she would have been near me, and if the king had taken away her principality she would have needed me in a thousand ways, and it is not less than possible that in time she might have learned the lesson of love. But now—if she is the woman I believe her to be—she never could love me after what has happened, and, knowing this, I can't leave liquor alone and don't want to. In my cups I do not care."

"I feel sorry for you both," said I. "Has the prince married her yet?"

"No. It has been postponed. Next Monday I am going back. I am going in hopes of getting into trouble. I may never see her again perhaps. Tomorrow, tomorrow! Who knows? Well, I'm off to bed. Good night."

And I was left alone with my thoughts. They weren't very good company. Tomorrow indeed, I thought. I sat and smoked till my tongue smarted. I had troubles of my own and wondered how they would end. Poor Hillars! As I look back today I marvel that we could not see the end. The mystery of life seems simple to us who have lived most of it and can look down through the long years.

CHAPTER VI.

During the first year of my residence in London there happened few events worth chronicling. Shortly after my arrival Hillars disappeared. His two months' vacation stretched into 12, and I was directed to remain in London. As I knew that Hillars did not wish to be found, I made no inquiries. He was somewhere on the continent, but where no one knew. At one time a letter, dated at St. Petersburg, reached me, and at another time I was informed of his presence at Monte Carlo. In neither letter was there any mention of her serene highness the Princess Hildegarde of Hohenphalia. Since the night he recounted the adventure the wayward princess had never become the topic of conversation. I grew hopeful enough to believe that he had forgotten her. Occasionally I received a long letter from Phyllis. I always promptly answered it. To any one but me her letters would have proved interesting reading. It was not for what she wrote that I cared, it was the mere fact that she wrote. A man cannot find much pleasure in letters which begin with "Dear friend" and end with "Yours sincerely" when they come from the woman he loves.

In the preceding autumn I completed my first novel. I carried it around to publishers till I grew to hate it as one hates a Nemesis, and when finally I did place it, it was with a publisher who had just started in business and was necessarily obscure. I bowed politely to my dreams of literary fame and became wholly absorbed in my journalistic work. When the book came out, I could not but admire the excellence of the bookmaking, but as I looked through the reviews and found no mention save in "books received" I threw the book aside and vowed that it should be my last. The publisher wrote me that he was surprised that the book had not caught on, as he considered the story unusually clever. "Merit is one thing," he said, "but luck is another." I have found this to be true not only in literature, but in all walks of life where fame and money are the goals. Phyllis wrote me that she thought the book "just splendid," but I took her praise with a grain of salt, it being likely that she was partial to the author and that the real worth of the book was little in comparison with the fact that it was I who wrote it.

One morning in early June I found three letters on my desk. The first was from Hillars. He was in Vienna:

My Dear Son—There is another rumpus. The princess disappeared on the 20th of last month. They are hunting high and low for her and incidentally for me. Why me is more than I can understand, but I received a letter from Rockwell of the American legation warning me that if I remained in Austria I should be apprehended, put in jail, hanged and quartered for no other reason on earth than that they suspect my having something to do with her disappearance—due, I suppose, to that other miserable affair. Though I have hunted all over the continent, I have never seen the Princess Hildegarde since that night at U. Where shall I find her? I haven't the least idea, but as a last throw I am going to the principality of Hohenphalia, where she was born and over which she rules with infinite wisdom. The king is determined that she shall wed Prince Ernst. He would take away her principality but for the fact that there would be a wholesale disturbance to follow any such act. If I ever meet that watchdog of hers, the Count von Walden, the duffer who gave me my conge, there will be trouble. The world isn't large enough for two such men as we are. By the way, I played roulette at the Casino last night and won 3,000 francs. Well, au revoir, or adieu, as the case may be. They sell the worst whisky here you ever heard of. It's terrible to have an educated palate.

HILLARS.

So he was still desiring for something he could never have! I got out of patience with the fellow. Even if she loved him, what chance had he against the legions of the king? Hillars was a wild headed fellow, and if at liberty was not incapable of creating a disturbance. It might land him in jail or on the gallows. Still Hillars, with all his love of adventure, was not ordinarily reckless. Yet, if he met the princess, she would find a willing tool in him for her slightest caprice. Whatever happened the brunt would fall upon him. My opinion, formed from various stories I had heard of the princess, was not very flattering to her. The letter and its possibilities disturbed me.

The second letter was from headquarters in New York:

Dear Winthrop—We want a good Sunday special. Her serene highness the Princess Hildegarde of Hohenphalia has taken it into her head to disappear again. Go over and see Rockwell in B. He will give you a good yarn. It has never been in type yet, and I dare say that it will make good reading. London seems particularly dull just now, and you can easily [illegible]

"The Princess Hildegarde!" I cried aloud. "The deuce take the woman!"

"What's that?" asked my assistant, who had overheard my outburst.

"Oh, I am to go across on a special story," I said, with a snarl, "just as I was fixing for a week's fishing. I've got to concern myself with the Princess Hildegarde of Hohenphalia."

"Ah, the Princess Hildegarde!" said the young fellow, pushing back his hat and elevating his feet, a trick he had acquired while being reared in his native land, which was the state of Illinois, in America. "You want to be careful. Every one burns his fingers or singes his wings around that candle."

"What do you know about her?" I asked.

"A little. You see, about six months ago I discovered all regarding Hillars and his fall from grace. It was through the Reuter agency. Hillars got badly singed. An elopement of some sort between him and the princess was nipped in the bud. He was ordered to leave the country and warned never to return at the peril of his liberty. A description of him is with every post on the frontier. As for the princess, she is an interesting character. She was educated in this country and France. She speaks several languages. She is headstrong and willful, and her royal guardian is only too anxious to see her married and settled down. She masquerades in men's clothes when it pleases her, she can ride a horse like a trooper, she fences and shoots, she has fought two duels, and heaven alone knows what she has not done to disturb the tranquillity of the court. For a man she loved she would be a merry comrade. I saw her once in Paris. She is an extraordinarily beautiful woman. A man takes no end of risk when he concerns himself with her affairs, I can tell you. Hillars—well, I suppose it's none of my business. He must have had an exciting time of it," concluded the young man.

"I'll leave you in charge for a week or so," said I. "What little news there is at the houses you can cover. I'll take care of anything of importance that occurs abroad. I might as well pack up and get out tonight. A boat leaves Dover early in the morning."

Then I picked up the third and last letter. It was from Phyllis. It contained the enjoyable news that the Wentworths were coming abroad and that they would remain indefinitely at B——, where Mr. Wentworth had been appointed charge d'affaires under the American minister. They were to visit the Mediterranean before coming to London. They would be in town in October. The mere thought of seeing Phyllis made my heart throb. The next morning I put out from Dover. It was a rough passage for that time of the year, and I came near being seasick. A day or so in Paris brought me around, and I proceeded. As I passed the frontier I noticed that my passports were eagerly scanned and that I was closely scrutinized for some reason or other.

A smartly dressed officer occupied half of the carriage compartment with me. I tried to draw him into conversation, but he proved to be untalkative; so I busied myself with the latest issue of the Paris L'Illustration. I never glanced in the direction of the officer but what I found him staring intently at me. This irritated me. The incident was repeated so many times that I said:

"I trust herr will remember me in the days to come."

"Eh?" somewhat startled, I thought.

"I observed that you will possibly remember me in the days to come, or perhaps I resemble some one you know."

"Not in the least," was the haughty retort.

I shrugged and relit my pipe. The tobacco I had purchased in Paris, and it was of the customary vileness. Perhaps I could smoke out mein herr. But the task resulted in a boomerang. He drew out a huge china pipe and began smoking tobacco which was even viler than mine, if that could be possible. Soon I let down the window.

"Does the smoke disturb herr?" he asked, puffing forth great clouds of smoke. There was a shade of raillery in his tones.

"It would not," I answered, "if it came from tobacco." He subsided. Whenever there was a stop of any length, I stepped out and walked the platform. The officer invariably followed my example. I pondered over this each time I re-entered the carriage. At last my irritation turned into wrath.

"Are you aware that your actions are very annoying?"

"How, sir?" proudly.

"You stare me out of countenance, you refrain from entering into conversation and by the way you follow me in and out of the carriage one would say that you were watching me. All this is not common politeness."

"Herr jests," he replied with a forced smile. "If I desire not to converse, that is my business. As for getting in and out of the carriage, have I no rights as a passenger?"

It was I who subsided. A minute passed.

"But why do you stare at me?" I asked.

"I do not stare at you. I have no paper and tried to read yours at a distance. I am willing to apologize for that."

"Oh, that is different," I said. I tossed the paper to him. "You are welcome to the paper."

I covertly watched him as he tried to read the French. By and by he passed the paper back.

"I am not a very good French scholar, and the French are tiresome."

"They would not have been if they had had a general who thought more of fighting than of wearing pretty clothes."

"Oh, it would not have mattered," confidently.

Burlington Route

Canadian Excursions.

If you are going to Eastern Canada this winter, it will help you to read and act on this Important Information.

The Best Route for comfort and quick time is by way of St. Paul and Chicago—through the States.

The Best Railroad is the Burlington, because its accommodations are excellent, its tracks smooth and connections sure.

Reclining Chair Cars are run on all Burlington Route trains, and no extra charge is made for seats. They are more roomy and comfortable than similar cars on other lines. Uniformed porters are in attendance to insure the comfort of travelers.

Leaving St. Paul.—Burlington trains leave St. Paul at 8:15 a. m. except Sunday, and 8:05 p. m. daily, arriving at Chicago in ample time to connect with the most convenient trains for Canadian points.

The Cost.—The price of a ticket to Montreal—or any place west of that city—and return, will be only Forty Dollars.

Tickets can be purchased of your home ticket agent, who will cheerfully give rates and informations. Patrons should ask for and see that their tickets read via the Burlington Route, between St. Paul and Chicago.

Date of Sale.—December 1 to December 31, 1900.

Limit of Tickets.—Each ticket is good for return within three months from date of sale.

Extension of Time can be arranged for with the Canadian ticket agent at your destination, upon payment of a small extra charge.

East of Montreal, to points in Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, the rate will be something above $40.00. The extra rate can be ascertained by applying to your ticket agent.

Our Agent.—Mr. A. L. Eidemiller, our Traveling Passenger Agent, will be at the Clarendon Hotel, Winnipeg, or Hotel Dacotah, Grand Forks, N. D., until December 24th. Application can be made to him for any further information needed.

COUNTY NEWS NOTES.
BY OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENTS.

River Falls.

Louis Larson is baling hay in St. Hilaire.

Mr. Cunningham was in to St. Hilaire Friday.

A. G. Ness left for Roseau county on Thursday for a short visit.

L. T. Bergh came home to spend Thanksgiving with his family.

Wheat is going into St. Hilaire and lumber coming out every day now.

Chris Hall is visiting the farmers, buying rock for the St. Hilaire Lumber Company.

L. R. Raamsness was in St. Hilaire Friday after lumber for his new residence on the East side.

Several loads of cordwood were hauled to St. Hilaire today from the western part of the county.

Threshing is progressing well on the east side now, and a few more days of this fine weather will see it finished.

Gunner Ness Tuesday left for his home in Roseau county, accompanied by his brother Albert, who also has a homestead there.

Emil Dahl came over from Euclid Friday to visit his father, Carl Dahl, and to buy some of the fine bluestem wheat raised here for seed.

Gust Knutson, Freeman, Brevik, and others of our farmers on the east side bought Henry Cuun's threshing outfit and hauled it over the steel bridge on Friday.

Many persons have had the experience of Peter Sherman, of North Stratford, N. H., who says, "for years I suffered torture with chronic indigestion, but Kodol Dyspepsia Cure made a well man of me." It digests what you eat and is a sure cure for every form of stomach trouble. It gives relief at once even in the worst cases and can't help but do you good.—W. A. Schreiter.

Commissioner Jones, of the Indian office, contradicts the theory that the Indians in this country are decreasing in number, and brings facts and figures to prove that since 1870, the first Indian census, the population has been stationary. He further argues that there are practically the same number of Indians now as when Columbus discovered America.

Andrew Berg, one of the first settlers of St. Hilaire, died Thursday evening at 10 o'clock of typhoid fever. The funeral took place Sunday, the remains being interred in the Swedish cemetery on the East side. The funeral service held in the Norwegian Lutheran church was conducted by Rev. Lunde, who spoke in both Norwegian and English. Rev. Aastad, of Thief River Falls, was among the audience, which filled the church.

The Spectator says: We are in receipt of a letter from Wm. Iarce, an old employe of the St. Hilaire Lumber Company, who is looking after their interests in the pine woods north of Solway, writes of having about eight inches of snow over there but very little cold weather, the rivers and large lakes being still open on the 23d and the swamps scarcely able to carry the weight of a man. Cutting and skidding well under way but not so far advanced as at this date last year.

Miss A. P. Erickson has returned from a month's visit at her old home in Redwood Falls, Carver Co. Minn.

C. A. Nelson and Chas. Englund were transient in Crookston Wednesday, on pleasure and business combined.

Mr. and Mr. E. J. Larson made a shopping expedition to Wylie, Wednesday, laying in supplies for the winter.

Miss Teckla Erickson left for Grand Forks last Wednesday for a fortnight sojourn in the land across the "Ruby."

A number of our Nimrods were out hunting jackrabbits on Sunday. They consider themselves lucky as three of the fleet-footed cotton-tails were sent "across the line."

A number of our young folks drove to the home of Gust Naplin and enjoyed the Thanksgiving party given by our bachelor friend. As usual a royal good time was had.

Mother Rumor has it again that ere long we will hear the merry chime of wedding bells in our peaceful bailiwick: and as a consequence the boys are busy tuning up their musical instruments, and our tailor must work night and day to get costumes and paraphernalia ready for the occasion.

Chas. Hord is back from North Dakota where he has been working this year.

It is reported that the dance held at Swanson Bros.' Saturday, Nov. 24, was a grand success.

Mr. and Mrs. Ole H. Find are the happy parents of a bouncing baby boy, born on the 2nd inst.

Mrs. Ernest Swanson went to Crookston last Saturday to see her husband, who is under the doctor's care.

There is some talk of having a Christmas tree in the schoolhouse of district 9. I trust the affair will materialize, and in that event a happy time may be expected.

John Roland proudly presented a big wolf to the town clerk, Monday, for a certificate, which would entitle him to the bounty of $5 from the county. He caught the wolf in a trap.

Peder T. Pederson and A. N. K. Anderson, who have been working with the Swanson & Jacobson threshing rig for some time, returned home last Wednesday, well pleased at the hospitality shown by the people on their run.

Ole Banken, of Strandquist, Marshall county, is visiting with John Sjordal for a short while. He will leave shortly for Northwood, Iowa, his former home, but will return early in the spring to make further improvements on his homestead.

When the stomach is tired out—it must have a rest, but we cannot live without food. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure "digests what you eat," so that you can eat all the good food that you want while it is restoring your digestive organs to health. It is the only preparation that digests all kinds of food. W. A. Schreiter.

L. Lee drove to Erskine Saturday.

Odin Jacobson was a business visitor at Erskine Wednesday.

Leopold Lee has departed for the pineries, where he intends to remain for the rest of the winter.

A party took place at O. Gauthier's last Saturday evening. Those present enjoyed themselves with dancing and other amusements: all had a good time.

Thanksgiving day was observed by a number of our farmers by going to church and hearing Rev. O. Kolstoe deliver his Thanksgiving sermon—a most excellent one.

A number of church members went to Red Lake Falls Friday with wheat and hauled home some lumber, paper heating stove and other things necessary for the church building.

Saturday forenoon Gilbert Pederson was seen driving south at a terrible speed, returning late in the afternoon at such a rate that his partner was in great danger of being left on the road somewhere among the bushes.

Now is the time when croup and lung troubles prove rapidly fatal. The only harmless remedy that produces immediate results is One Minute Cough Cure. It is very pleasant to take and can be relied upon to quickly cure coughs, colds and lung diseases. It will prevent consumption. W. A. Schreiter.

The basket party for the benefit of the church, turned out to be one of the best ever held in this vicinity. Some fine singing under the leadership of Odin Jacobson, was rendered. The young folks enjoyed themselves until late in the morning. All present report a most pleasant time. About $22 was netted.

State Wins After All in the Anderson Decision.

Relative to the decision of the supreme court in the Anderson tax law Attorney General Douglas says: "On the broader questions involving the state's rights of taxation the opinion sustains practically every important position we have taken. It thus becomes a strong victory for the state upon the broadest grounds. So satisfactory, in fact, is the decision that I have given up my purpose to ask for a rehearing and rest content in what we have accomplished. Reduced to its simplest terms the decision holds:

First, that the original contracts with the St. Paul and Duluth and the Northern Pacific roads were void. Second, that these contracts were vitalized by the constitutional amendment adopted in 1871: and third, that this amendment carried with it the right to amend the contracts or repeal them entirely. Of course this right of amendment is subject to limitations and one of these limitations was traversed by the Anderson bill, which is declared unconstitutional. But the right of the state to raise or lower the gross earnings tax rate, or repeal it entirely, is clearly and succinctly affirmed by the decision in several places. This is what we have contended for from the start and we do not ask more.

"As for the Anderson law, which must now be wiped from the statue books, it has served its purpose and served it well. In the first place, it has forced the railroads to sell practically all of their unused lands. These lands are now paying taxes to the state and will of course continue to do so in spite of the decision. So that the formal point at issue, decided against the state, has ceased to be important. In the second place, the litigation over the law has served to secure from the court of highest resort a ruling as to the powers of the state in the taxation of the railroads which is of the utmost importance. It is a curious fact that the grounds upon which the federal court overthrew the law were not suggested by any of the attorneys for the railroads. The points did not enter into the arguments in the case, although I believe Daniel Lawler made a somewhat similar point in a case in the lower court recently.

This statement of the attorney general will come as a great surprise, since it was feared from the telegraphed synopsis of the decision that the state had suffered a decisive defeat and would be unable to terminate the contracts which have caused the retention of the gross earnings tax law. It will be remembered that at the last session of the legislature one of the principal arguments used against the repeal of the law was that such repeal would be unconstitutional. This argument is no longer possible and the coming legislature may repeal the law as it sees fit, or may raise the rate of taxation.

County Commissioners.

The Board held its last meeting for 1900, this week convening Monday, and adjourning yesterday at noon.

Chas. Gustafson was awarded the contract to furnish 20 cords of poplar wood at $2.25 per cord.

The auditor was instructed to advertise for bids for county publishing and job printing.

Bonds of county officers for the ensuing year were fixed as follows:

Auditor	$ 5,000
Treasurer	50,000
Register of Deeds	5,000
Co. Attorney	1,000
Sheriff	5,000
Judge of Probate	1,000
Coroner	1,000
Surveyor	500

Demann, Hebert and Hansen were appointed a committee to look up suitable grounds and buildings for a poor farm.

Notice.

The regular annual meeting of the stock-holders of this bank for the purpose of electing directors for the ensuing year will be held in the banking rooms on Tuesday January 8th, 1901, between the hours of 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Washington Pine.

Mr. John Hanson and Ole Laknas returned last Friday from the state of Washington, where they found a fine outlook in regard to pine timber. Mr. Hanson left some time ago for the west in quest of timber and struck Idaho first. Not finding anything there to suit him, he went on to Washington, then to Oregon and even to northern California. Returning to Washington, upon careful investigation he found great opportunities in the way of timber business and was joined later by O. Laknas, Paul Slovarp and Martin Hestness. All four have taken timber and stone claims there and Hestness has filed a homestead right, which Slovarp intents to do, they remaining in that state when the other two returned.

Some time next month, Mr. Hanson intends to take a party out there and locate them on valuable claims. There is a great quantity of yellow pine timber to be found close to an important tributary of the Columbia River, the quarter sections ranging from 1,500,000 to 4,000,000 feet, and as the timber is close to landings and worth as much as the logs are here when in the water, it would seem that there were opportunities for the right men out there. Mr. Hanson brought a number of fine kodak views of the country home with him.—Thirteen Towns.

Will Be a Good Horse Now.

The refractory bay horse belonging to Louis Sieff, which has been giving us regular weekly items in the runaway line for some time past, is no more, and although there were few tears shed when the news of his departure from this earthly sphere was announced, still, the reporter feels that one of his sure sources of news is gone—unless, indeed, the black partner of the equine, who has shared the publicity with his unfortunate mate, should take it upon himself to keep up the record. This team was used by Banker Duffy and a companion the day before, and they found the horses playing out on them, necessitating a change at Majerés'. The next day a driver was sent out after them, and he succeeded in reaching town and getting as far as Healy & Bourdon's, when the bay horse dropped dead in the street. It is thought that the animal must have sustained injuries in some of the runaways which it participated in, and that this was the cause of its sudden demise.

Forfeited Tax Sale Decision.

The supreme court has handed down a decision on the forfeited tax sale law in relation to the sixty days' notice of expiration of redemption. The decision says that owners of property sold at the forfeited tax sale for the 1895 taxes and for taxes of previous years are entitled to a sixty days notice and can redeem sixty days after the service of the expiration of redemption notice. Anyone who purchased land at the forfeited tax sale held last May is required to serve notice upon the person against whom the land was assessed. Providing the person can not be found a notice will have to be published in a newspaper.

Thief River Falls Bank Organized

L. C. Simons informs The Gazette that the new bank at Thief River Falls is about ready for business. The Kratku building has been decided upon as the location, but a brick building will be put up in the spring.

The board of directors is Sven Swenson, Rasmus Oen, L. C. Simons, C.C. Jackson, O. M. Richardson. Mr. Swenson is president, Mr. Oen vice president and Mr. Simons will act as cashier temporarily. A cashier will be selected who is a non-resident at present, and Mr. Simons expects the new man to take his place in a few days.

Rapp's Blowout.

C. G. Rapp, of St. Hilaire, who was elected representative of this, the 61st legislative district, at the last election, celebrated the happy event last Friday night by giving a grand ball and banquet at the Hotel Markham. Beautiful invitations were sent out to his friends and programs artistically gotten up were handed to the guests. Thirty-five Red Lake Falls people participated in Mr. Rapp's hospitality, and they pronounce the affair a great social success. At twelve, covers were laid for the party in the dining room of the hotel and a repast served that would do credit to any occasion. Charlie paid the freight.

ANDERSON TAXATION BILL KNOCKED OUT BY SUPREME COURT.

White Earth Reservation Opened to Settlement—Accident to the New Peavey Concrete Elevator at Duluth—Murderer Wallert Pleads Guilty at Henderson—News of the State in General.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—An opinion in the case of Fred Stearns, county auditor of Aitkin county, Minn., vs. the State of Minnesota, was handed down in the supreme court of the United States by Justice Brewer. The case came to this court on error from the supreme court of the state of Minnesota. It was brought up at the instance of certain railroad companies and involved the question of whether real estate belonging to them and not used in the operation of their roads is subject to taxation according to its value or is excepted by virtue of a contract alleged to have been made several years ago through legislation by the state, providing that railroad companies should pay 3 per cent on their gross earnings in lieu of taxes on all property. The taxes of the St. Paul and Duluth Railroad company were immediately involved in this case. The case also included the question of the validity of the Minnesota state law of 1895 repealing the former contract law and seeking to separate the lands of railroads from their other property still retaining the 3 per cent tax on gross earnings. The effect of the opinion is to hold the law of 1895 invalid. In passing upon the case the court held that the state had been admitted to the sisterhood of states under the usual compact and that as long as the title of its lands remains in the United States, those lands are exempt from taxation. So far as the land involved in this case is concerned, it was stated that it had been granted to the state by congress and by the state to the St. Paul and Duluth company. Soon afterwards, the justice continued, the state had enacted legislation providing that railroads in the state should pay 3 per cent on their gross earnings in lieu of all other taxes upon their property. The opinion by Justice Brewer sustained the view that the original legislation was in the nature of a contract which was binding and which could not be invalidated by the act of 1895, seeking to repeal it. This latter act, therefore, was pronounced repugnant to the fed- Constitution and void in this respect.

For Purposes of Taxation,

WHITE EARTH RESERVE.

Land in Four Townships Thrown Open to Settlement.

CROOKSTON, Minn., Dec. 6.—The agricultural lands in townships 143, 144, 145 and 146, range 37 west, being the four ceded townships on White Earth reservation, were thrown open to settlement at 9 a. m. and by noon nearly every available piece of land had been filed upon. A line began forming at the door of the United States land office at 1 a. m. and at 9 o'clock there were fully 150 men in waiting for the opening of the doors of the land office.

The officials had adopted the rule of allowing but four would-be settlers in the office at one time and each squad was quickly disposed of. Everything passed off with the utmost regularity and very quietly.

THE WALL GIVES WAY.

New Peavey Elevator Annex at Duluth Sustains a Heavy Loss.

DULUTH, Dec. 10.—Shortly after 3 p. m. there was a bad caving in of one of the walls of the new Peavey annex on Rice's point. The annex is composed of 15 bins of concrete construction. They are 90 feet in height and 33 feet in diameter, and held about 75,000 bushels of wheat.

One of the intermediate spaces was filled with grain to within about five feet of the top. Evidently there was some defect in the wall, for it gave way at a point some distance down from the top, and this mass in falling struck the opposite wall of the bin and plugged a hole in it, and through this some of the concrete debris and about 3,000 bushels of grain poured out on the ice.

WALLERT PLEADS GUILTY

Murderer of His Wife and Stepchildren May Cheat the Gallows.

HENDERSON, Minn., Dec. 7.—The work of selecting a jury for the Wallert murder trial began during the afternoon, when it was suspended from an entirely unexpected cause. Wallert, acting on the advice of his attorneys, pleaded guilty to murder in the first degree and begged the court for the privilege of making a statement, which was granted. It is expected he will escape with a life sentence. Wallert, it will be remembered, brutally murdered his wife and her four children on the night of Aug. 19 last, near Arlington. Otto Steinborn, the 15-year-old son, who also received severe wounds at the time, was the chief witness for the state.

More Money for St. Paul.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Secretary Gage has sent sent to congress an estimate for $100,000 additional to complete the St. Paul postoffice, thus increasing the amount $1,150,000. The house committee on public buildings and grounds will adopt a favorable report on the Stevens' bill to retain the old postoffice building and remodel the same for federal purposes.

Clapp's Candidacy.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 8.—Former Attorney General Moses E. Clapp announces that he is a candidate for United States senator, to succeed the late Senator C. K. Davis.

WINNING MANY PRIZES.

Animals Bred by Agricultural College Students at the Livestock Show.

CHICAGO, Dec. 6.—Judging of the various classes of blooded animals on exhibition at the international livestock exposition at Dexter Park pavilion was continued during the day. The exhibitions of the agricultural colleges of Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota and Iowa are regarded as one of the most important features of the exposition and the animals bred and raised by the students of these institutions, about 100 in number, were examined with great interest by stock raisers. In a number of classes they have received first, second and third prizes, something never before attained by agricultural colleges.

STATUE OF HERMANN.

May Be Removed From New Ulm to Minneapolis.

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 9.—The Journal says: The Sons of Hermann of the United States are seriously considering a proposition to remove the handsome monument of Hermann, erected at New Ulm, May 26, 1897, to Minnehaha park, Minneapolis. The matter has been taken up in earnest by different lodges throughout the state and country and there is every indication that it will be favorably acted upon by spring. The argument has been made that the monument in its present location is too much out of the way and that it could be seen by thousands here who never visit New Ulm.

BIG MILLS FOR DULUTH.

A Philadelphia Corporation to Spend $5,000,000 There.

DULUTH, Dec. 11.—The Charles G. Howe Consumers' Flour Milling company of Philadelphia is the name of a corporation which in its prospectus plans to build mills of an aggregate capacity of 35,000 barrels a day at the head of the lakes. The capital is $5,000,000, and the proposed mills are estimated to cost $3,500,000. The company will also handle provisions extensively.

Found Natural Gas.

BUTTERFIELD, Minn., Dec. 10.—Natural gas has been discovered in the well owned by the Northwestern road at this place. A pump repairer had occasion to open the well to make some repairs. He lighted a match, when there was an explosion which wrecked the building which covered the well and gave the man a narrow escape from death. A stream of fire shot into the air to a height of 100 feet and burned with a steady flame until the aperture was closed and the air shut off.

The Minnesota Speakership.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 6.—The speakership contest was practically brought to a close at noon, when Albert Berg notified his friends that he would not go further with his candidacy. Mr. Berg's decision in the premises was precipitated by the action of the Hennepin delegation in indorsing Dowling. The latter's election is practically assured.

Will Cripple County Finances.

DULUTH, Dec. 7.—The decision of the supreme court of the United States on the Anderson law will leave this county crippled somewhat on next year's taxes. The railroad property affected in this county has been taxed about $20,000 a year since the law went into effect, and this year's levies include that property.

MESSENGER IN JAIL.

Young Iowa Man Confesses to Stealing From an Express Company.

KEOKUK, Ia., Dec. 10.—Harry Taylor, a messenger on the Adams express run between this city and Des Moines, is in jail, under indictment for stealing a package of $1,000 from the company on the night of Sept. 24.

Young Taylor, who is the son of prominent people, has confessed his crime. He admits having obtained the combination of the safe. After securing the package of money he gave half of it to a demented brother.

The latter recently created a disturbance in a theater here and when he was arrested and searched at the station, $500 was found in his clothes. This gave the company's detectives their first clew in what had been a most mysterious case.

EVIDENCE IS STRONGER.

Investigation of the Stanley Murder Still Proceeding.

THORPE, Wis., Dec. 11.—The chain of evidence around Arthur Cupps and Ole Gustad, who were arrested in St. Paul on suspicion of having murdered Ollie Odell, a resort keeper near Stanley, daily tightens. Sheriff Tuft has found witnesses who say they saw the men at Stanley on the the night of the murder, and that they were in the neighborhood of the resort during the night. The coroner's jury is still in session. The prisoners have waived the preliminary examination and will have a trial on Dec. 17.

Named by Governor Scofield.

LA CROSSE, Wis., Dec. 11.—Governor Scofield has appointed J. J. Fruit of this city judge of the Sixth judicial district, to succeed the late Judge Wyman. Attorney E. C. Higbee was endorsed by the La Crosse County Bar association, but Mr. Fruit's appointment was expected.

Dies at the Bedside of a Patient.

CUMBERLAND, Wis., Dec. 10.—Dr. Walter C. Pease, one of the oldest and most prominent physicians in Northern Wisconsin, dropped dead from heart disease at the bedside of a sick patient. Dr. Pease came to Wisconsin in 1859 and was well known throughout the state.

Injured by Falling Building.

CLINTON, Ia., Dec. 7.—The roof on a building being erected here collapsed during the afternoon, seriously and perhaps fatally injuring Hiram Bates and Charles Ryner. Five men fell with the roof a distance of 25 feet.

NEWS IN MINNESOTA

A serious accident occurred at the new concrete Peavey elevator at Duluth, which resulted in the partial wrecking of three of the bins.

A petition is being circulated and already has the required two-thirds signatures for the change of the village organization of Marshall to a city plan of government.

Stanley R. Kitchel, one of Minneapolis' well known attorneys, died last week after a lingering illness. Mr. Kitchel had been in poor health for the past two or three years.

John N. Brown, a 9-months-old baby of Providence, R. I., is heir to $1,750,000 in personal property. Included in the list of his properties is about $1,000,000 worth of Duluth real estate.

A number of jugs of water taken from a well being drilled at Fox Lake, Faribault county, contain natural gas. A man handling the water from the well was seriously injured by its explosion.

It is announced that the national meeting of the Young People's Union, United Presbyterian church, has selected Winona as the next place of meeting, in 1901, to be held the second week in August.

Attorney General Douglass has signed the application for a quo warranto writ to test the legal right to office of present St. Paul city officials. The claim is made that under the new charter the old officials hold over.

Polk county's new courthouse has been completed and accepted by the board of county commissioners. The building was erected by the Gross Construction company, and is one of the finest in the state, costing about $75,000.

John G. Gronewald, one of Minnesota's pioneers, died last week in St. Paul. Mr. Gronewald was a contractor and builder and secured many government contracts. He built Fort Cross, Fort Pembina, Fort Custer and Fort Ripley.

The Charles G. Howe Consumers' Flour Milling company of Philadelphia is the name of a corporation which in its prospectus plans to build mills of an aggregate capacity of 35,000 barrels a day at Duluth. The capital is $5,000,000, and the proposed mills are estimated to cost $3,500,000.

Nathalia Wheeler, a 6-year-old child of such abnormal head development as to attract much attention among physicians and others, died at Minneapolis Friday. The child was particularly precocious, and could speak the English and Swedish languages fluently. The head measurement was 38¾ inches.

During the next 10 days St. Paul will receive about 500,000 Christmas trees, over one-half of which will be sent to other cities throughout the state. The advance guard has already arrived. Most of the trees are being brought from Eastern Canada, the Soo line having virtually a monopoly of the business.

According to statistics furnished by Superintendent Lewis of the state department of public instruction, the wages of teachers in Minnesota common schools and smaller graded schools have increased 22.28 per cent during the past year. The aggregate amount paid to them has been $3,842,927.23, and this was divided among 12,000 teachers.

Mrs. Louise Schulze died at her home in St. Paul Saturday. The deceased was one of the pioneer women of St. Paul, having resided in the city for more than 40 years. During the Indian uprising in 1862 Mrs. Schulze had several narrow escapes. Her husband was killed and she received a knife wound and was left for dead in her home near Beaver creek.

The village of Tower, on the Duluth and Iron Range road, had a narrow escape from total destruction by fire Saturday. Fire originated in a pile of shavings at some distance from the yards of the Tower Lumber company. A high wind was blowing at the time and carried sparks into the lumber. In an incredibly short time about 10,000,000 feet of lumber, valued at $130,000, was consumed. Change of wind saved the town.

ORDER FOR HEARING AND NOTICE OF APPLICATION FOR APPOINTMENT OF ADMINISTRATOR.

State of Minnesota, } ss.
County of Red Lake. } In Probate Court. Special Term, Dec. 4th 1900.

In the Matter of the Estate of Jane Lacoursiere, Deceased.

On receiving and filing the petition of Hercule Lacoursiere, of Red Lake county, representing, among other things, that Jane Lacoursiere, late of Lake Pleasant, on the 27th day of January A. D. 1896, at the town of Lake Pleasant county of Red Lake, died intestate, and being a resident of this county at the time of her death, leaving goods, chattels and estate within this county, and that the said petitioner is the surviving husband of said deceased, and praying that administration of said estate be to [illegible] granted;

It is ordered, that the said petition be heard before this court, on Monday, the 31st day of Dec., A. D. 1900, at ten o'clock A. M., at the probate office in said county.

Ordered further, that notice thereof be given to the heirs of said deceased, and to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week, for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the Red Lake Falls Gazette, a weekly newspaper, printed and published at Red Lake Falls, in said county.

Dated at Red Lake Falls, Minn., the 4th day of December A. D. 1900.

By the Court,
(Seal) (d6-27) J. T. Knight, Judge of Probate.

CANCELLATION NOTICE.

Default has occurred and now exists in the terms and conditions of that certain contract dated the twenty-second day of July A. D. 1899 executed by D. S. B. Arms and The Woman

By Harold MacGrath

Copyright, 1900,
By Harold MacGrath.

"Prussia was once humbled by a Frenchman." I was irritating him with a purpose in view.

"Bah!"

"The only reason the French were beaten was because they did not think the German race worth troubling about."

He laughed pleasantly. "You Americans have a strange idea of the difference between the German and the Frenchman."

This was just what I wanted.

"And who informed you that I was an American?"

He was disconcerted. "Why," he said lamely, "it is easily apparent, the difference between the American and the Englishman." Then, as though a bright idea had come to him: "The English never engage in conversation with strangers while traveling. Americans are more sociable."

"They are? Then I advise them to follow the example set by the Englishman—never try to get up a conversation while traveling with a German. It is a disagreeable task." And I settled back behind my paper.

How had he found out that I was an American? Was I known? And for what reason was I known? To my knowledge I had never committed any offense to the extent that I must be watched like a suspect. What his object was and how he came to know that I was an American were mysteries to me. I was glad that the journey would last but an hour or so longer. The train arrived at the capital late at night. As I went to inquire about my luggage I saw my late fellow passenger joined by another officer. The two began talking earnestly, giving me occasional sidelong glances. The mystery was deepening. In passing them I caught words which sounded like "under another name" and "positive it is he." This was anything but reassuring to me. At length they disappeared, only to meet me outside the station. It got into my head that I was a marked man. A feeling of discomfort took possession of me. Germans are troublesome when they get an idea. I was glad to get into the carriage which was to take me to my hotel. The driver seemed to have some difficulty in starting the horse, but I gave this no attention. When the vehicle did start, it was with a rapidity which alarmed me. Corner after corner was turned, and the lights went by in flashes. It was taking a long time to reach my hotel, I thought. Suddenly it dawned upon me that the direction we were going was contrary to my instructions. I tried to open the window, but it refused to move. Then I hammered on the pane, but the driver was deaf or purposely so.

"Hi, there!" I thoughtlessly yelled in English. "Where the devil are you going?"

No one paid any attention to my cries. It was becoming a serious matter.

The lights grew fewer and fewer, and presently there were no lights at all. We were, I judged, somewhere on the suburbs. I became desperate and smashed a window. The carriage stopped so abruptly that I went sprawling to the bottom. I was in anything but a peaceful frame of mind, as they say, when the door swung open and I beheld standing at the side of it the officer who had accompanied me from the frontier.

"What tomfoolery is this?" I demanded. I was thoroughly incensed.

"It means that herr will act peacefully or be in danger of a broken head," was the mind easing reply of my quondam fellow passenger. The driver then came down from the box, and I saw that he was the officer who had joined us at the station.

"If it is a frolic," I said, "one of your beer hall frolics, the sooner it is ended the better for you."

The two laughed as if what I had said was one of the funniest things imaginable.

"Get out!"

"With pleasure!" said I.

Directly one of them lay with his back to the ground and the other was locked in my embrace. I had not spent four years on the college campus for intellectual benefits only. And indignation lent me additional strength. My opponent was a powerful man, but I held him in a grip of rage. Truthfully I began to enjoy the situation. There is something exhilarating in the fighting blood which rises in us now and then. This exhilaration, however, brought about my fall. In the struggle I forgot the other, who meantime had recovered his star gemmed senses. A crack from the butt of his pistol rendered me remarkably quiet and docile. In fact, all became a vacancy till the next morning, and then I was conscious of a terrible headache and of a room with a window through which a cat might have climbed without endangering its spine—a very dexterous cat.

"Well," I mused, softly nursing the lump on my head, "here's the devil to pay and not a cent to pay him with."

It was evident that, without knowing it, I had become a very important personage.

CHAPTER VII.

I saw some rye bread, cold meat and a pitcher of water on the table, and I made a sandwich and washed it down with a few swallows of the cool liquid. I had a fever, and the water chilled it. There was a lump on the back of my head as large as an egg. With what water remained I dampened my handkerchief and wound it around the injury. Then I made a systematic search through my clothes. Not a single article of my belongings was missing. I was rather sorry, for it lent a deeper significance to my incarceration. After this I proceeded to take an inventory of my surroundings. Below and beyond the little window I saw a wide expanse of beautiful gardens, fine oaks and firs, velvet lawns and white pebbled roads. Marble fountains made them merry in the roseate hue of early morning. A gardener was busy among some hedges, but beyond the sound of my voice. I was a prisoner in no common jail, then, but in the garret of a private residence. Having satisfied myself that there was no possible escape, I returned to my pallet and lay down. Why I was here a prisoner I knew not. I thought over all I had written the past twelvemonth, but nothing recurred to me which would make me liable to arrest. But, then, I had not been arrested. I had been kidnaped, nothing less. Nothing had been asked of me. I had made no statement. It had been all too sudden. Presently I heard footsteps in the corridors, and the door opened. It was mine enemy. He locked the door and thrust the key into his pocket. One of his eyes was decidedly mouse colored. The knuckles of my hand were yet sore. I smiled. He saw the smile, his jaws hardening and his eyes threatening.

"I am sorry," I said. "I should have hit you on the point of the chin, but I was in a great hurry. Did you ever try raw meat as a poultice?"

"Enough of this," he snapped, laying a pistol on the table. I was considered dangerous. It was something to know that. "You must answer my questions."

"Must?"

"Must."

"Young man, you have no tact. You are not an accomplished villain," said I pleasantly. "You should begin by asking me how I spent the night and if there was not something you could do for my material comfort. Perhaps, however, you will first answer a few questions of mine."

"There are only two men whose questions I answer," he said.

"And who might they be?"

"My commander and the king. I will answer one question—the reason you are here. You are a menace to the tranquillity of the state."

It was mine enemy. He locked the door and thrust the key into his pocket.

"Oh, then I have the honor of being what is called a prisoner of state? Be careful," I cried suddenly; "that pistol might go off, and then the American minister might ask you in turn some questions—disagreeable ones too."

"The American minister would never know anything about it," said he gruffly. "But have no fear. I should hesitate to soil an innocent leaden bullet in your carcass."

"Be gentle," I advised, "or when we meet again I shall feel it my duty to dull the luster of your other eye."

"Bah!" he ejaculated. "We are indebted to the French for the word 'canaille,' which applies to all Americans and Englishmen."

"Now," said I, climbing off the pallet, "I shall certainly do it."

"I warn you not to approach me!" he cried, his fingers closing over the pistol.

"Well, I promise not to do it now," I declared, going over to the window. I found some satisfaction in his nervousness. It told me that he feared me. "What place is this—a palace?"

"Answer this question, sir: Why did you cross the frontier when you were expressly forbidden to do so?"

"I forbidden to cross the frontier!" My astonishment was indescribable. "Young man, you have made a blunder of some sort. I am not a socialist or an anarchist. I have never been forbidden to cross the frontier of any country. Your chancellor is one of the best friends I have in the world. I went to school with his son."

He rocked to and fro on the table, laughing honestly and heartily. "You do not lack impudence. Are you or are you not the London correspondent of the New York ——?"

"I certainly am."

"You admit it?" eagerly.

"I see no earthly reason why I should not."

"When did you last visit this city?"

"Several years ago."

"Several years ago?" incredulously.

"Exactly. Have you ever seen me before?"

"No. But it was a little less than two years ago when you were here."

"It is scarcely polite," said I, "to question the veracity of a man you never saw before and of whom you know positively nothing." Suddenly my head began to throb again, and I grew dizzy. "You hit me rather soundly with that pistol. Still your eye ought to be a recompense."

He replied with a scowl, "Perhaps your name is"—

"Winthrop. John Winthrop, if that will throw any light on the subject."

"One name is as good as another," with a smile of unbelief.

"That is true. What's in a name? There is little difference, after all, between the names of the nobility and the rabble."

"You are determined to irritate me beyond measure," said he. A German is the most sensitive man in the world as regards his title.

"Grant that I have some cause. And perhaps," observing him from the corner of my eye, "it is because you smoke such vile tobacco."

Remembering the incident in the railway carriage, he smiled in spite of the gravity of the situation. "It was the best I had," he said, "and then it was done in self defense. I'll give you credit for being a fearless individual. But you haven't answered my question."

"What question?"

"Why you returned to this country when you were expressly forbidden to do so."

"I answered that," said I. "And now let me tell you that you may go on asking questions till the crack of doom, but no answer will I give you till you have told me why I am here—I, who do not know you or what your business is or what I am supposed to have done."

He began to look doubtful. He thumped the table with the butt of his pistol.

"Do you persist in affirming that your name is Winthrop?"

"These gardens are very fine. I could see them better," said I, "if the window was larger."

"Perhaps," he cried impatiently, "you do not know where she is?"

"She?" I looked him over carefully. There was a perfectly sane light in his eyes. "Am I crazy, or is it you? She? I know nothing about any she!"

"Do you dare deny that you know of the whereabouts of her serene highness the Princess Hildegarde and that you did not come here with the purpose to aid her to escape the will of his majesty? And do you mean—oh, here, read this!" flinging me a cablegram.

The veil of mystery fell away from my eyes. I had been mistaken for Hillars. Truly, things were growing interesting. I bent and picked up the cablegram and read:

> Count von Walden—He has left London and is on his way to the capital. Your idea to allow him to cross the frontier is a good one. Undoubtedly he knows where the princess is in hiding. In trapping him you will ultimately trap her. Keep me informed.

The name signed was that of a well known military attache at the embassy in London. I tossed back the cablegram.

"Well?" triumphantly.

"No, it is not well. It is all very bad, and particularly for you. Your London informant is decidedly off the track. The man you are looking for is in Vienna."

"I do not believe you. It is a trick!"

"Yes, it is a trick, and I am taking it, and you have lost a point, to say nothing of the time and labor and a black eye. If you had asked all these questions yesterday, I should have told you that Mr. Hillars"—

"Yes, that's the name!" he interrupted.

"I should have told you that he is no longer the London representative of my paper. It is true that the description of Hillars and myself tallies somewhat, only my hair is dark, while his is light, what there is left of it, and he is a handsomer man than I. All this I should have told you with pleasure, and you would have been saved no end of trouble. I presume that there is nothing left for you to do but to carry me back to the city. To quell any further doubt, here are my passports, and if these are not satisfactory, why, take me before Prince O——, your chancellor."

He was irresolute and half inclined to believe me. "I do not know what to do. You know, then, the gentleman I am seeking?"

"Yes."

"Would he enter this country under an assumed name?"

"No. He is a man who loves excitement. Whatever he does is done openly. Had it been he instead of me he would have thrown you out of the carriage at the first sign on your part that you were watching him. He is a very strong man."

"If he is stronger than you, I am half glad that I got the wrong man. You strike a pretty hard blow. But whether you are the man I want or not you will have to remain till this afternoon, when the count will put in appearance. I dare say it is possible that I have made a mistake. But I could not do otherwise in face of my instructions."

"The princess seems to me more trouble than she is worth."

"It is possible that you have never seen her highness?" he said, hinting a smile. "She is worth all the trouble in the world."

"If a man loved her," I suggested.

"And what man does not who has seen her and talked to her?" he replied, pacing.

"The interest, then, you take in her discovery is not all due to that imposed upon you by Count von Walden?"

I could not resist this thrust.

"The subject is one that does not admit discussion," squaring his shoulders.

"Suppose we talk of something that does not concern her. All this is a blunder for which you are partly to blame. I have a bad lump on my head, and you have a black eye; but, as you did what you believed to be your duty and as I did what every man does when self preservation becomes his first thought, let us cry quits. Come, what do you say to a game of cards? Let us play ecarte, or I will teach you the noble game of poker. To tell you the truth, I am becoming dreadfully bored."

"Believe me, I bear you no ill will," he said, "and I am inclined to your side of the story. Whoever you are, you have the bearing of a gentleman, and now that we have come to an understanding I shall treat you as such. I have a pack of cards down stairs. I'll go and get them. This is not my house or I should have placed you in better quarters. I shall leave the door unlocked," a question in his eyes.

"Rest assured that I shall return to the city as I came—in a carriage—and, to be honest, I am anxious to see the Count von Walden, who poses as the princess' watchdog."

And when he came back and found me still sitting on the pallet his face cleared. We played for small sums, and the morning passed away rather pleasantly than otherwise. The young officer explained to me that he held an important position at court and that he was entitled to prefix baron to his name.

"The king is getting out of all patience with her highness," he said. "This makes the second time the marriage has been postponed. Such occurrences are extremely annoying to his majesty, who does not relish having his commands so flagrantly disregarded. I shouldn't be surprised if he forced her into the marriage."

"When he knows how distasteful this marriage is to her, why does he not let the matter go?"

"It is too late now. Royalty, having given its word, never retracts it. Events which the king wills must come to pass or he loses a part of his royal dignity. And then a king cannot very well be subservient to the will of a subject."

"But has she no rights as a petty sovereign?" I asked.

"Only those which the king is kind enough to give her. She is but a tenant—the rulers of Hohenphalia are but guests of his majesty. It is to be regretted, but it cannot be helped."

That afternoon, as I lay on my pallet, it seemed to me that in some unaccountable way I was destined to become concerned in the affairs of her serene highness. I had never seen the woman, not even a picture of her. Certainly she must be worth loving, inasmuch as she was worth trouble. I have always found it to be the troublesome woman who has the largest train of lovers. Troublesome, they are interesting; interesting, they are lovable.

It was more than a year since last I saw Phyllis. Yet my love for her knew no diminution. I began to understand why Hillars traveled all over the continent to get a glimpse of the woman he loved. With the pleasant thought that I should see Phyllis again I dozed. I was half asleep when I was aroused by loud voices in the corridor.

"But I do not believe him to be the man," I heard my jailer declare.

"Bah! I know there is no mistake," roared a voice which was accustomed to command. "He's been trying to hoodwink you. Watch the surprise in his face when he sees me, the cursed meddler and scribbler. It would be a pleasure to witness his hanging. Come, show him to me."

"Yes; come along, my dear old warhorse," I murmured, turning my face toward the wall. "There is a nice little surprise party in here waiting for you." The door opened.

"Unlocked!" bawled the count. "What does this mean, baron?"

"He gave his word as a gentleman," was the quiet reply.

"Gentleman? Ach! I'll take a look at the gentleman," said the count, stepping up to the pallet and shaking me roughly by the shoulder. "Wake up!"

I sat up so as not to miss the comedy which was about to set its scenes upon the grim visage of the count. As his eyes met mine his jaw fell.

"A thousand devils! Who are you?"

"I couldn't swear," said I meekly. "Everybody hereabout insists that I am some one else. The situation warrants a complete explanation. Perhaps you can give it." I should have laughed but for those flashing eyes.

"You are a blockhead!" he said to his subaltern.

"He is the man, according to your London correspondent," responded the other, with some show of temper. "I cannot see that the fault lies at my door. You told me that he would enter the country under an assumed name."

"I presume the affair is ended so far as I am concerned," I said, shaking the lameness from my legs.

"Of course, of course!" replied the count, pulling at his gray mustache, which flared out on either side like the whiskers of a cat.

"I should like to return to the city at once," I added.

"Certainly. I regret that you have been the victim of a blunder for which some one shall suffer. Your compatriot has caused me a deal of trouble."

"I assure you that he is in nowise connected with the present matter. According to his latest advices, he is at Vienna."

"I should be most happy to believe that," was the count's rejoinder, which inferred that he didn't believe it.

"My friend seems to be a dangerous person."

"All men of brains, coupled with impudence, are dangerous, and I give

Burlington Route

Canadian Excursions.

If you are going to Eastern Canada this winter, it will help you to read and act on this Important Information.

The Best Route for comfort and quick time is by way of St. Paul and Chicago—through the States.

The Best Railroad is the Burlington, because its accommodations are excellent, its tracks smooth and connections sure.

Reclining Chair Cars are run on all Burlington Route trains, and no extra charge is made for seats. They are more roomy and comfortable than similar cars on other lines. Uniformed porters are in attendance to insure the comfort of travelers.

Leaving St. Paul.—Burlington trains leave St. Paul at 8:15 a. m. except Sunday, and 8:05 p. m. daily, arriving at Chicago in ample time to connect with the most convenient trains for Canadian points.

The Cost.—The price of a ticket to Montreal—or any place west of that city—and return, will be only Forty Dollars.

Tickets can be purchased of your home ticket agent, who will cheerfully give rates and informations. Patrons should ask for and see that their tickets read via the Burlington Route, between St. Paul and Chicago.

Date of Sale.—December 3 to December 31, 1900.

Limit of Tickets.—Each ticket is good for return within three months from date of sale.

Extension of Time can be arranged for with the Canadian ticket agent at your destination, upon payment of a small extra charge.

East of Montreal, to points in Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, the rate will be something above $40.00. This extra rate can be ascertained by applying to your ticket agent.

Our Agent.—Mr. A. L. Eidemiller, our Traveling Passenger Agent, will be at the Clarendon Hotel, Winnipeg, or Hotel Dacotah, Grand Forks, N.D., until December 24th. Application can be made to him for any further information needed.

ADVERTISING MADE HIM A RICH MAN.

The editor of the Popular Bluff, Mo., Republican relates these facts of his early acquaintance with the firm of B. Nugent & Bro., of St. Louis: "When we were publishing a paper in Mt Vernon, Ill., in 1872, on the second floor, a store opened in the room under our office. The senior proprietor came up stairs and contracted for 3 columns of space for 12 months, with locals and 2,500 dodgers each week. He remarked that it was a snap to get into a town where other business men did not advertise. The firm started out on borrowed capital. In three years it had money enough to start two stores, one in Sedalia and one in St. Louis. It dissolved partnership and each partner took a field to himself. Byron Nugent was the partner who made the contract, and is now the senior member of B.Nugent & Bro., the great St. Louis house. He not only owns his store, building and grounds, but has erected a nice little cottage home that cost him $87,000. We must say that some of the old mossbacks who were in business in Mt. Vernon before Byron Nugent ever saw that place, and who never advertised, are still in business and grumbling about dull trade and hard times."

A POOR-FARM.

The county commissioners have decided to establish a Poor Farm. It seems that the drain on the county on account of the poor is excessive, and after due deliberation the members of the board have come to the conclusion that a poor farm would be practically self sustaining, and would be the means of relieving the strained situation. The committee in charge of the matter has two places in view—the Francois LaBissoniere farm directly south of the city, and the old Marchildon place a little west of this. It is the purpose to make a lease, with privilege of purchase at a set price. The Board have gone into the matter thoroughly and when they finally act the taxpayers whom they represent may rest assured that the county's interests have been well taken care of. The poor have cost the county for twelve months, outside of medical attendance, some $3500.

The Fergus Falls Journal is right in the matter of taxing mortgages. It says: "Missouri has adopted a constitutional amendment which will make it possible to have owners of mortgages bear a portion of the burden of taxation. The New York legislature considered a bill for taxing mortgages but it failed to pass. There are no valid reasons why a person who has a thousand dollars loaned out should not pay taxes on that money just the same as the one who has it invested in lands, buildings, manufacturing enterprises, or banks. The idea of having notes, bonds and mortgages listed for taxation before they were collectable or valid may be unconstitutional, but it comes very near being just and right. The Pioneer Press in opposing the taxation of mortgages says the mortgages may be all some poor widow may have. It is equally true that the equity in the farm on which rests the mortgage may be all some other poor widow may have, and there is no reason why she should bear all the burden. No argument in favor of letting any class of property escape its just portion of taxation will hold water.

Ask your ticket agent about Great Northern holiday excursions. You cannot afford to travel by any other line.

TEACHER'S WAGES.

The wages of teachers in Minnesota common schools and the smaller graded schools increased 22.28 per cent. during the past year over the amount previously paid.

The aggregate amount paid to them was $3,842,987.23. This was divided among 12,000 teachers; in the rural districts the advance of wages was even greater.

Supt. Lewis, of the state department of public instruction, states that several of the lowest salaried teachers are receiving $5 a month more than they ever did.

The increase in salaries has resulted from an increased demand for competent instructors, in Mr. Lewis' opinion, and form the bonus paid by the state, under a special law, to school districts employing teachers with first grade certificates.

The number of schools qualifying for state bonuses was larger this year than ever before, and the number of schools taught by teachers not entirely competent smaller than for many years.

A special from Washington says that Senator Nelson has introduced a bill allowing homestead settlers on the Minnesota Indian reservations to commute their entries, provided that the money received on commutation shall be applied for the benefit of the Indians in accordance with the Nelson act of 1899. The homesteaders who live on their lands five years get them free under the Eddy act of 1900.

10. Declamation, Katie Berthiaume.
11. Close, song by Society.

The Seniors, Juniors and High School teachers were very pleasantly entertained at Miss Eleanor Findeisen's home on Friday evening. All present were requested to entertain for five minutes the fore part of the evening. After this each received a booklet with thirty four names of fish in hidden form and were to be guessed by the guests. Miss Brown received the head prize and Catherine Pirath the booby. A dainty lunch was served at 11 o'clock after which all departed for home, claiming to have spent a very enjoyable evening. A noticeable feature of the party was that of the eighteen guests present all but one were ladies. We don't know whether to condone with or envy that one boy.

The Freshman class have elected the following list of officers:

President, Maud C. Findeisen.
Vice President, Wm. O. Hunt.
Secretary, Alice M. Newton.
Treasurer, Verne M. Healy.
Committees, Finance, Blanche Berthiaume, Emma Cyr, and Orilla Hennemuth.
Program, Rosie Beautrow, Rosie Cyr, Emma Wagner.
Social, Dan J. Johnson, J. Drew Marshall, Eddie Paul.
Debate, Dan J. Johnson, J. Drew Marshall, Eddie Paul.

The society will meet every Wednesday after school.

The name adopted is "Hititleiti."

The class has adopted the following yell:

Rub a-dub-dub,
Rub-a-dub-dub,
Hurrah for the Hititleiti.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

CONGRESSIONAL DOINGS.

The house has passed the Groot oleomargarine bill.

The senate has begun work on the ship subsidy bill.

Congressman Morris is opposed to the plan for a national park in Minnesota.

A bill providing for the adoption in the United States of the metric system of weights and measures has been favorably reported to the house.

McCall of Massachusetts (Rep.) made a sensational speech on the army bill in the house, attacking the whole Philippine policy of the administration.

A bill has been passed in the senate permitting Commanders McCalla and Wise of the United States navy to accept decorations from the emperor of Germany.

The house committee on naval affairs has unanimously selected for chairman Representative Foss of Illinois. The position was made vacant by the resignation of Mr. Bentelle of Maine.

It is expected that the forthcoming naval appropriation bill now being framed by the house committee on naval affairs will contain provision for two more battleships and two armored cruisers.

The war revenue reduction bill has been introduced in the house. It provides for an estimated reduction of $40,000,000, wiping out practically all the stamp taxes and cutting the tax on beer 20 per cent.

The bill for the reorganization of the army passed the house Thursday by a vote of 166 to 133. Three Democrats voted for the measure and one Republican against it. An amendment was adopted prohibiting the canteen.

BRITISH-BOER WAR NEWS.

DO WE WANT A SALOON?

As far as we know, Wylie has been free from liquor dealers for the last few years, and the distance to any of the cities or towns around us had to be made in order to obtain any intoxicating drinks. We, during this time, saw very few persons tumbling on the street in drunkeness; horses have seldom been standing on our streets, late at night, freezing, with the blanket under their feet: everything has passed on peacefully.

What would a saloon mean to this place? As the farmers and their sons come here to get their mail, or bring in their produce, many of them will, instead of going home, as they do now, be some friend's companion at the saloon counter. There they give their money to such business men as are a disgrace to all business. In return they get what will never do them a bit of good, usually harm. Each glass they pay for makes the heart beat faster and the pocket-book grow thinner, and threatening to ruin both body and soul, it leaves its victim running the risk of filling a drunkard's grave. Within the reach of a saloon, every young man's morals and character is endangered, every young lady is uncertain of being a wife in a peaceful home, every present home liable to be a drunkard's, in which gloomy atmosphere a mother without food and clothing is breathing with heavy sobs, and her children crying by her side.

All know that a drunken person is, in such a state, below any animal. Shall then the soil on which Wylie stands be stamped with the seal of a saloon? We hold that such a house is not worthy of taking the place on which grows the beautiful flowers and green grass of which kingdom, great men like Linne, is king: is not worthy of having a cubic foot of the majestic trees that grows in the stately forest, for they belong to the same kingdom. Do we want it then? Do we want to see our fellow neighbor tumbling around on the sidewalks of our little village, or lying in the gutters? Shall we have such an agent here to imperil our peaceful communities, and will the people of this advanced age endorse it? Shall more clouds arise to obscure the sun of enlightenment which otherwise shines brightly over our starry banner?

We have termed the saloon traffic a disgrace to all business, and have certainly a right to do it when there are a billion dollars or more going each year to care for the 80,000 paupers, the 300,000 criminals and the 30,000 idiots, and to bury the 80,000 drunkards. These round figures represent wrecks and ruins on an American soil desolated by this mortal enemy, the Liquor Traffic. Are we willing to add to these figures, and open a place of such a kind for our young folks, in this, our town?.

Stop to think! think what your citizenship means; think of the terrible conqueror which is threatening to forge his fetters to enslave you; think of that moral pestilence of which man the crown of creation is the distributive agent. See the distaster and imminent danger and say "No! We shall want no crying mothers and begging children with husbands and fathers, sons and brothers hurrying to a premature grave, in this part of the land of the noble and the free."

Martin Erickson transacted business in St. Hilaire Saturday.

Nils Person transacted business in St. Hilaire last week, Wednesday.

Chas. Johnson transacted business in Crookston Thursday and Friday.

Read our Wylie merchants' advertisements: patronize your home dealers.

"Painter" Erickson came on the train from Crookston Friday, after a short stay there.

John Peterson went to Crookston Wednesday and returned Thursday of last week with a load of lumber.

Chas. Carlson who has made a few days' visit with friends and acquaintances in Black River, went to Crookston last week.

We need not report the new depot Wylie got the other day. Nothing else in Wylie has so been known through other papers as the "Pump house from White Lake."

Axel Philip Sandberg, one of our lively young men, is gone to Crookston to attend school He has spoken of taking up the commercial course. Good luck to the new student.

Chas. Eklund was going to thresh Gust Sandberg's flax last Friday but it was full of ice and snow and consequently not fit for market, so they left it alone. They have spoken of selling it as hay.

Mr. Inquisitive: Hello Jack! Well has Wylie got a new depot?

Jack: Mah, that there thing is only an old shack that has served as a pumping house way back, I don't know, in the time of Nebukadnezer.

Mr. I: O. I have read of the hanging gardens of Babylon constructed by Nebukadnezer to please his wife.

Jack: Well you see Jim knows his premises here are low. If he intends to pump out the water from the steet here in the spring I have thought to furnish some beerkegs to fetch it off in.

Mr. I: Good if we get a pumping house here I think we shall soon have a depot.

Prevented A Tragedy.

Timely information given Mrs. Geo. Long, of New Straitsville, Ohio, prevented a dreadful tragedy and saved two lives. A frightful cough had long kept her awake every night. She had tried many remedies and doctors but steadily grew worse until urged to try Dr. King's New Discovery. One bottle wholly cured her, and she writes this marvelous medicine also cured Mr. Long of a severe attack of Pneumonia. Such cures are positive proof of the matchless merit of this grand remedy for curing all throat, chest and lung troubles. Only 50c. and $1.00. Every bottle guaranteed. Trial bottle free at W. A. Schreiter's Drug Store.

For the Farmer.

One of the greatest attractions for people who contemplate moving to the city is the fact that they can buy on easy terms a home of their own, says The National Stockman and Farmer. Nearly every town of any size has its real estate dealers who, as a rule, handle the most of the realty that is transferred in the town and are constantly advertising and pushing the business, offering bargains or alleged bargains on "terms to suit the purchasers." New additions to villages, towns and cities are found in places of any energy and push, and in such additions are generally found lots that can be secured at prices and terms that will suit the pocketbook of almost any one.

It is quite different in the country. A man with small capital in many sections cannot find a chance to buy a small farm. If he does, the purchase is often prohibited by the cash payment required, and the time payments are so arranged that there is but little show for meeting them by the earnings of the farm. This combination has discouraged many an honest, industrious man of moderate means from trying to secure a home of his own and has turned the faces of some of the best men in the country toward the cities where conditions are different.

This condition could be remedied to the direct benefit of all concerned. There are lots of landowners in every section of the country who are land poor. They own and control more land than they can work to advantage. They hang on to it like grim death until the sheriff comes to their relief or they are fortunate enough to find some man who has a sum of money large enough to pay one-third down and a bank account good enough to take the risk of getting the balance together in one and two years. There are plenty of large farms throughout the country which could be made to pay for themselves within a few years if divided up properly and placed in the hands of ambitious men who would appreciate an opportunity to secure and pay for a home of their own.

Satisfactory Dairy Ration.

One of the most perplexing questions for the average dairy farmer is the feed ration, says Morgan S. Joslyn in The American Agriculturist. The cost of production must be considered and also the general results. Shall it be of the finely chopped material or will it be the coarse feed? I will give below the ration used by one of the leading farmers of southern New York and his mode of giving. He arises at 5 o'clock in the morning, goes to the barn and milks, after which he gives his herd of 30 cows three quarts apiece of gluten meal. He returns to the house and eats his breakfast. Then he gives half a bushel of ensilage and after this is eaten five pounds of cornstalks. This amount is given twice a day, morning and night. At noon two quarts of gluten are fed with cornstalks, making in all eight quarts gluten meal, one bushel ensilage and 15 pounds of stalks to a cow. This, I think, is a very good ration, for it includes all those foods which go to make up a good diet, and a thrifty condition is always secured when it is used.

My own milk is delivered at the local co-operative creamery and during the past year averaged me $70 per cow, surely not a bad showing for a dry summer. Ours is one of the most successful creameries in the state. It sells its butter at the highest price, deducts the cost of help and making and uses the Babcock butter fat test in distributing the money return among its patrons. This is conceded to be the best method in use, and it certainly has been satisfactory here.

Permanent Farm Improvements.

There are some very desirable improvements that the farmer might like to make in his buildings or his surroundings that seem almost out of his reach because they cannot be made without an expenditure of ready money greater than he has at command, says The American Cultivator, and there are others that require but little more than the labor and are within the means of every one. A few fruit or shade trees or shrubs set about the house, a space made for a flower garden where seeds may be sown in fall or spring, a clearing up of the rubbish of old wagons and tools and waste lumber around house and barn or mending gates and fences will make the place seem more homelike and as if civilized people lived there and less like a Boer or an Indian camp. Then it will cost but little to set some of the bush fruits, and a grapevine or two, and in a few years they will add to the table luxuries enough to make the farm more pleasant as well as more profitable. These improvements can be made even when lumber for new buildings or the paint for old ones is unattainable.

Sowing Lawns.

In seeding down a lawn in the fall winter wheat may be sown with the grass seed, and it will not only prevent the soil from washing, but give the ground a beautiful fresh green sward early in the spring, which may be kept clipped, but will remain until the grass is well grown among it. The wheat will keep down the weeds, and the change from the green of the wheat to that of the grass will be so gradual as to be scarcely noticeable.

Cold Steel or Death.

"There is but one small chance to save your life and that is through an operation," was the awful prospect set before Mrs. I. B. Hunt, of Lime Ridge, Wis., by her doctor after vainly trying to cure her of a frightful case of stomach trouble and yellow jaundice. He didn't count on the marvelous power of Electric Bitters to cure Stomach and Liver troubles, but she heard of it, took seven bottles, was wholly cured, avoided the surgeon's knife, now weighs more and feels better than ever. It's positively guaranteed to cure Stomach, Liver and Kidney troubles and never disappoints. Price 50c at W. A. Schreiter's drug store.

The most effective little liver pills made are DeWitt's Little Early Risers. They never gripe. W. A. [illegible]

Louis Nickoll has lost one of his horses, he left them on his claim this fall to take care of themselves, or for some of his neighbors to do it, with this result.

When you need a soothing and, healing antiseptic application for any purpose, use the original DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, a well known cure for piles and skin diseases. It heals sores without leaving a scar. Beware of counterfeits. W. A. Schreiter.

River Falls.

Martin Hanson finished threshing on Thursday and reports a fine crop.

P. Sanders had a sleigh breakdown on Mr. Moe's farm while threshing for Ole Cliffgard, who owned the land before.

James Gilberson has been hauling hay to St. Hilaire for some time and made a fine profit on his summer's work, as hay is worth money this year.

Wheat is coming in towards St. Hilaire at a great rate. The farmers seem to have some very fine crops after all, this year.

Mr. Roy finished threshing Friday night. His wheat is some of the best seen up here yet. He has nearly 13 hundred bushels. This was on the Hougen farm on the East side.

The St. Hilaire hardware men must have a big trade in oil cans, as many of the farmers did not leave town without a 5 gallon can now that kerosene is only 10 cents a gallon.

Aug. Swenson put up the foundation for Mr. Bramsness' new house on Friday, and on Saturday Mr Thompson and Mr. Sandmoen, two St Hilaire carpenters got the building pretty well started, in spite of the cold weather.

or
Or Our Saviour In Art.

Cost nearly $100,000 to produce. Contains nearly 100 full page engravings of our Saviour and His Mother by the world's greatest painters. True copies of the greatest Masterpieces in the art galleries of Europe. Every picture is as beautiful as a sunrise over the hilltops. Contains description of the paintings, biography of the painters, the names and locations of the galleries in Europe where the originals may be seen. Also contains a Child's Department, including a Child's Story of the Christ and His Mother, beautifully written, to fit each picture. This wonderful book, matchless in its purity and beauty, appeals to every mother's heart, and in every Christian home where there are children the book sells itself. Christian men and women are making money rapidly taking orders. A Christian man or woman can in this community soon make $1,000 taking orders for Christmas presents. Mrs. Waite, our agent in Massachusetts, has sold over $3,000 worth of the books in a very short time. Mrs. Sackett, our agent in New York, has sold over $1,500 worth of the books in a very short time. The book is printed on velvet-finished paper, beautifully bound in Cardinal Red and gold, and adorned with Golden Roses and Lilies. It is without doubt, the most beautiful book of this century. Write for terms quickly and get the management of that territory. You can work on salary or commission, and when you prove your success we will promote you to the position of Manager and Correspondent, at a permanent salary, to devote your time to attending agents and the correspondence. Says the Crookston Times: Information reached the city last evening that a man named Benson had been found frozen to death in the town of Lambert, north of that village. Full details of the case could not be procured, but the information gained was to the effect that the man had driven to Red Lake Falls the previous day and had left for home in an intoxicated condition and the supposition was that he had fallen from his wagon enroute home and had been stunned or else was so completely under the influence of liquor that he lay where he fell and froze to death.

DEATH IN FLAMES.

WILFRID DUCHARME, AGED 22 MONTHS, DIES MONDAY NIGHT

FROM EFFECTS OF BURNS SUSTAINED IN ABSENCE OF MOTHER.

Moses Ducharme, of Badger Creek, came into the city Tuesday and to a group of sympathizing friends told the sad story of the death of his little son, aged twenty two months, resulting from severe burns. Mr. Ducharme was in the city Monday, returning from Crookston, where he went as a witness in the damage suit against Lake Pleasent township. About four o'clock a messenger came for him, with the sad news that his little son was at the point of death. It seems that the mother and one other child, aged four, together with little Wilfrid, were at home alone. About ten a.m. the mother went out for a pail of water, remaining but four or five minutes. On her return she was met by the older child, telling her what had happened. Before she reached the house, Wilfrid ran to her for help. He was enveloped in flames from head to foot, his clothing being on fire. The mother tore the burning clothes from the child as quickly as she could, but not until his body was baked from his knees up. Dr. Tessier was hastily summoned, but it was soon seen that the child was beyond all human aid, and at midnight death relieved the little sufferer. It is not known how the accident occurred, the elder child merely telling that it was from a spark from the stove. The bereaved parents have the heartfelt sympathy of a host of warm friends. Wilfrid was an unusually large, handsome and bright boy, and their loss is felt most keenly, especially coming as it did in this cruel way.

Weddings Galore.

Three weddings in one day is the record held by the Rev. S. J. S. Moore, since yesterday. It was a busy day, but he was equal to the demands made upon him.

The first was the marriage of Mr. Almen Hendrix, of Fargo, N. D., and Ester A. Johnson, of this city, at the home of the bride's parents. At 9:30 a. m., the bride, leaning on the arm of her father, L. Johnson, and attended by her two brothers, was met in the parlor by the groom. Here they were awaited by the officiating clergyman, who pronounced the words that made them man and wife. After congratulations the wedding party, including the pastor and his wife, were seated to an elegant wedding breakfast. The appointments were noticeably in harmony with the dignity and refinement of the participants.

The newly wedded couple will make their home at Fargo, where the groom is engaged in business.

The next wedding was that of Fred Wagner, of Fisher, and Hattie O'Niel, a sister of Mrs. Clement Mercier, of this township, who were at the manse, awaiting the minister's return. Promptly at eleven o'clock the contracting parties presented themselves before the clergyman, in the cozy parlor of the parsonage, and plighted their troth, surrounded by a sympathetic group. Scarcely had the officiating clergyman made out the marriage certificate when he was called to the home of John Johnson, where his sister in law, Anna Leppert, of this city, and William Alberts, of near Crookston, were to be united in the bonds of matrimony, at high noon. After the ceremony, which was performed in the presence of the near friends and relatives of the happy couple, a wedding dinner was served by Mr. and Mrs. Johnson. Mr. and Mrs. Alberts will make their future home on the groom's farm near Crookston.

The Rev. Moore then took the train for Crookston with his friend Rev. Flach, to meet his daughter Edith, who is returning from MacAllister College, to spend the holidays.

A Night of Terror.

"Awful anxiety was felt for the widow of the brave General Burnham of Machias, Me., when the doctors said she could not live till morning" writes Mrs. S. H. Lincoln, who attended her that fearful night. "All thought she must soon die from Pneumonia, but she begged for Dr. King's New Discovery, saying it had more than once saved her life, and had cured her of Consumption. After three small doses she slept easily all night, and its further use completely cured her." This marvelous medicine is guaranteed to cure all Throat, Chest and Lung diseases. Only 50c and $1.00. NEWS OF THE WEEK

BRITISH-BOER WAR NEWS.

General Kitchener reports that the Boers under Dewet have again eluded Knox.

The Boers who attacked Vryheid, Dec. 10, lost 100 killed and wounded before they retired.

Sir Alfred Milner has been gazetted administrator of the Orange River Colony and the Transvaal.

Lord Kitchener is reported to have sent a fresh and urgent request to the government to send every available mounted man to South Africa.

Colonel Momfield, moving on Vryheid, defeated the Boers with heavy loss, driving them from Scheeper's nek and capturing a quantity of arms.

Communication by rail between Pretoria and Lourenzo Marques is entirely cut off, the Boers infesting nearly the whole of the line to the Portuguese border.

General Kitchener reports that General Clements has arrived at Commando Nek after losing 5 officers and 9 men killed and 18 officers and 555 men taken prisoners by Commandant Delarey's force.

A portion of Brabant's Horse, consisting mainly of raw recruits, engaged a superior force of Boers, Dec. 13, near Zastron, Orange River Colony, losing 4 killed, 16 wounded and 120 taken prisoners.

A train proceeding from Natal to Johannesburg, loaded with horses for the British, was held up by 150 Boers near Vlaklaagte. The burghers made the horses jump out of the trucks and captured 180 of them.

Lord Kitchener reports that after severe fighting at Nooitgedacht General Clements' forces were compelled to retire by Commandant Delarey with a force of 2,500 men. Five officers were killed, but the other casualties are not reported.

The British troops at Koomatipoort are standing to arms in the expectancy of an attack by a Boer force of 1,500 which is in that vicinity. It is believed to be the intention of this force to make a dash upon the town. The situation is regarded as serious.

Lord Kitchener reports that the commander at Lichtenburg reports that in an attack on the British column there the Boer commander, General Lettmer, and two other Boers were killed. Attacks on Bethlehem and Vrede were repulsed and the Boers had 10 killed and 14 wounded.

TALK WITHOUT WIRES.

Remarkable Experiments in Telephoning at Minneapolis.

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 18.—Telephoning without wires was given a most rigid test and was successful in the face of adverse conditions. Men talked across the Mississippi river, a distance of more than 1,000 feet, despite a cutting wind and extremely cold weather, two factors operating against success. The fact that the experiment was successful in the face of obstacles makes it clear that a revolution in the present methods is possible.

The experiment can hardly be called wireless telephoning, for it is necessary to use some wire and the ordinary transmitters and receivers. Lengths of wire—150 feet—were stretched on each side of the river, and to these were attached the transmitters and receivers. The voice vibrations on one wire were carried across and registered upon the other.

your friend credit for being as brave as he is impudent. But, come; my carriage is at your service. You are a journalist, but you will promise not to make public this unfortunate mistake."

I acquiesced. When the count and I parted company, I had not the vaguest idea that we should ever hold conversation again. The result of the adventure was I sent a very interesting story to New York, omitting my part in it. This done, I wired my assistant in London not to expect me for some time yet. The truth was I determined to hunt for Hillars and incidentally for her serene highness the Princess Hildegarde of Hohenphalia.

CHAPTER VIII.

As I came along the road, the dust of which had been laid that afternoon by an odorous summer rain, the principal thing which struck my eyes was the quaintness and unquestioned age of the old inn. It was a relic of the days when feudal lords still warred with one another and the united kingdom was undreamed of. It looked to be 300 years old and might have been more. From time to time it had undergone various repairs, as shown by the new stone and signs of modern masonry, the slate peeping out among the moss covered tiles. It sat back from the highway and was surrounded by thick rows of untrimmed hedges and was partly concealed from view by oaks and chestnuts. The gardens were full of roses all in bloom, and their perfume hung heavy on the moist air. And within a stone's throw of the rear the Danube noiselessly slid along its green banks. All I knew about the inn was that it had been by a whim of nature the birthplace of that beautiful, erratic and irresponsible young person, her serene highness the Princess Hildegarde. It was here I thought to find Hillars, though it was idle curiosity as much as anything which led me to the place.

The village was five miles below. I could see the turrets of the castle which belonged to the princess. She was very wealthy and owned as many as three strongholds in the petty principality of Hohenphalia. Capricious indeed must have been the woman who was ready to relinquish them for freedom.

The innkeeper was a pleasant, ruddy checked old man who had seen service. He greeted me with some surprise. Tourists, he said, seldom made this forgotten, out of the way village an objective point. I received a room which commanded a fine view of the river and a stretch of the broad highway. I was the only guest. This very loneliness pleased me. My travel stained suit I exchanged for knickerbockers and a belted jacket. I went down to supper. It was a simple affair, and I was made to feel at home. From the dining room I caught a momentary flash of white skirts in the barroom.

"Ah," I thought, "a barmaid! If she is pretty, it will be a diversion."

In the course of my wanderings I had seen few barmaids worth looking at twice. When the table was cleared, I lit a cigar and strolled into the gardens. The evening air was delicious with the smell of flowers still wet with rain. The spirit of the breeze softly whispered among the branches above me. Far up in the darkening blues a hawk circled. The west was a thread of yellow flame; the moon rose over the hills in the east; Diana on the heels of Apollo! And the river! It was as though nature had suddenly become lavish in her bounty and had sent a stream of melting silver trailing over all the land. There is nothing more beautiful to see than placid water as it reflects a summer's twilight. The blue Danube! Who has heard that magic name without the remembrance of a face close to your own, an arm, bare, white, dazzling, resting and gleaming like marble on your broadcloth sleeve and, above all, the dreamy, swinging strains of Strauss? There was a face once which had rested near mine. Heigho! I lingered with my cigar and watched the night reveal itself.

And then, right in the midst of my dreams, a small foot planted itself. I turned my head and saw a woman. On seeing the bright end of my cigar, she stopped. She stood so that the light of the moon fell full upon her face. My cigar trembled and fell.

"Phyllis!" I cried, springing to my feet, almost dumfounded, my heart nigh suffocating me in its desire to leap forth. "Phyllis!—and here? What does this mean?"

The woman looked at me with a puzzled frown, but did not answer. Then as I started toward her with outstretched arms she turned and fled into the shadows, leaving with me nothing but the echo of her laughter, the softest, sweetest laughter! I made no effort to follow her, because I was not quite sure that I had seen anything.

"Moonlight!" I laughed discordantly. Phyllis in this deserted place? I saw how impossible that was. I had been dreaming. The spirit of some wood nymph had visited me and for a brief space had borrowed the features of the woman I loved. In vain I searched the grove. The vision was nowhere to be found. I went back to the inn somewhat shaken up. Several old veterans were seated in the barroom, smoking bad tobacco and drinking a final bout. Their jargon was unintelligible to me.

"Where's your barmaid?" I asked of the innkeeper.

His faded blue eyes scanned me sharply. I read a question in them and wondered. "She went into the garden to get a breath of fresh air," he said. "She does not like the smoke."

It annoyed me. I had seen some one, then. What would Phyllis, proud Phyllis, say, I mused, when she heard that a barmaid was her prototype? This thought had scarcely left me when the door in the rear of the bar opened and in came the barmaid herself. No, it was not Phyllis, but the resemblance was so startling that I caught my breath and stared at her with a persistency which bordered on rudeness. The barmaid was blond, whereas Phyllis was neither blond nor brunette, but stood between the extremes, and there was a difference in the eyes. I could see that even in the insufficient light.

Supper was a simple affair, and I was made to feel at home.

"Good evening, fraulein," said I, with apparent composure. "And what might your name be?"

"It is Gretchen, if it please you," with a courtesy. I had a vague idea that this courtesy was made mockingly.

"Gretchen? I have heard the name before," said I, "and you remind me of some one I have seen."

"Herr has been to the great city."

B—— is the greatest city in the world to the provincial.

"Yes," said I, "but you remind me of no one I ever saw there."

She plucked a leaf from the rose she wore and began nibbling at it. Her mouth was smaller than the one belonging to Phyllis.

"The person to whom I refer," I went on, "lives in America, where your compatriots brew fine beer and wax rich."

"Ah, herr is an American! I like Americans," archly. "They are so liberal."

I laughed, but I did not tell her why. All foreigners have a great love of Americans, "they are so liberal."

"So you find Americans liberal? Is it with money or with compliments?"

Said Gretchen, "The one when they haven't the other." A very bright barmaid, thought I. Then I said, "Is this your home?"

"Yes," said Gretchen: "I was born here, and I have tended the roses for ever so long."

"I have heard of Gretchen of the steins, but I never before heard of a Gretchen of the roses."

"Herr must have a large store of compliments on hand to begin thus early."

"It is a part of my capital," said I. "Once in Switzerland I complimented an innkeeper, and when my bill was presented I found that all extras had been crossed off."

Gretchen laughed. It was a low laugh—a laugh which appeared to me as having been aroused not at what I had said, but at something which had recurred to her. I wanted to hear it again, so I said: "I suppose you have a stein here from which the king has drunk. All taverns and inns have them."

Gretchen only smiled, but the smile was worth something. "No; the king has never been within five miles of this inn."

"So much the worse for the king."

"And why that?"

"The king has missed seeing Gretchen."

It was then Gretchen laughed.

"I have never heard compliments like herr's before."

"Why, I have any amount of them. I'll drink half a liter to your health."

She filled one of the old blue earthen steins.

"I haven't seen your roses in the gardens, but I'll drink to those in your cheeks," said I, and I drew back the pewter lid.

"How long does herr intend to stay?" asked Gretchen.

"To the day is the evil thereof."

"Ah, one must be happy with nothing to do."

"Then you have the ambition common to all; to sit around and let others wait upon you?"

"No, that is not my ambition. I wish only to wait upon my own desires and not those of the—the others."

"It is all the same," said I. "Some must serve, others must be served."

When I went up stairs to my room, it was my belief that a week or so at the inn would not hang heavy on my hands. I had forgotten for the moment the princess or that I was hunting for Hillars. It is strange how a face may upset one's plans. Gretchen's likeness to Phyllis, whom I loved, upset mine for many days to come.

As I gazed from my window the next morning I beheld the old innkeeper and Gretchen engaged in earnest conversation. He appeared to be pleading—nay, entreating—while she merely shook her head and laughed. Finally the old man lifted his hands to heaven and disappeared around the wing. When I came down, Gretchen was in the gardens culling roses. She said they were for the table.

"Very well," said I. "Give me one now."

"You may have them all at the table."

"But I shall not want them then."

She gave me an enigmatical glance, then cut a rose for me which was withered and worm eaten.

"Gretchen is unkind," I observed.

"What matters it whether the rose be fresh or withered? It dies sooner or later. Nothing lasts, not even the world itself. You wish a rose not because it is a rose, fresh and fragrant, but because I give it to you."

"You wrong me, Gretchen. I love a rose better than I love a woman. It never smiles falsely, the rose, or plays with the hearts of men. I love a rose because it is sweet and because it was made for man's pleasure and not for his pain."

"That sounds like a copy book," laughed Gretchen. "The withered rose should teach you a lesson."

"What lesson?"

"That whatever a woman gives to man withers in the exchange—a rose, a woman's love."

Said I reproachfully: "You are spoiling a very pretty picture. What do you know about philosophy?"

"What does herr know about roses?" defiantly.

"Much. One cannot pick too many fresh ones. And let me tell you a lesson which you should have learned among these roses. Nature teaches us to love all things fresh and beautiful—a rose, a face, a woman's love."

"Here," holding forth a great red rose.

"No," said I; "I'll keep this one."

She said nothing, but went on snipping a red rose here, a white one there. She wore gloves several sizes too large for her, so I judged that her hands were small and tender, perhaps white. And there was a grace in her movements, despite the ungainly dress and shoes, which suggested a more intimate knowledge of velvets and silks than of calico. In my mind's eye I placed her at the side of Phyllis. Phyllis reminded me of a Venus whom nature had whimsically left unfinished. Then she had turned from Venus to Diana, and Gretchen became evolved, a Diana slim and willowy. A sculptor would have said that Phyllis might have been a goddess and Gretchen a wood nymph had not nature suddenly changed her plans. What I admired in Phyllis was her imperfect beauties. What I admired in Gretchen was her beautiful perfections. And they were so alike and yet so different. Have you ever seen a body of fresh water ruffled by a sudden gust of wind, the cool blue green tint which follows? Then you have seen the color of Gretchen's eyes. Have you ever seen ripe wheat in a sun shower? Then you have seen the color of Gretchen's hair. All in all, I was forced to admit that, from an impartial and artistic view, Gretchen the barmaid was far more beautiful than Phyllis. From the standpoint of a lover it was altogether a different matter.

"Gretchen," said I, "you are very good looking."

"It would not be difficult to tell herr's nationality."

"Which means"—

"That the American says in one sentence what it would take a German or a Frenchman several hundred sentences to say." Gretchen was growing more interesting every minute.

"Then your mirror and I are not the only ones who have told you that you are as beautiful as Hebe herself?"

"I am not Hebe," coldly. "I am a poor barmaid, and I never spill any wine."

"So you understand mythology?" I cried in wonder.

"Does herr think that all barmaids are as ignorant as fiction and ill meaning novelists depict them? I have had a fair education."

"If I ever was guilty of thinking so," said I, answering her question, "I promise never to think so again."

"And now will herr go to his breakfast and let me attend to my duties?"

"Not without regret," I said gallantly. I bowed to her as they bowed in the days of the beaus, while she looked on suspiciously. At the breakfast table I proceeded to bombard the innkeeper. I wanted to know more about Gretchen. "Is Gretchen your daughter?" I began.

THE MADONNA IN ART

VARIED CONCEPTIONS BY THE WORLD'S GREATEST PAINTERS.

Raphael's Sistine Madonna and the "Madonna della Sedia"—A Story About Murillo's "Madonna of the Napkin."

There is one subject for a picture which has never grown old or tiresome. It was seen in the rough daubs of the painters of the dark ages when melted wax and coarse wood were the artist's materials and the knowledge of anatomy was a fearful thing akin to witchcraft; it is seen nowadays hung in the Salon, painted on fine canvas with paints that are almost luminous, drawn by master hands and signed by master names. The Madonna and the Child—no subject has ever stirred the hearts of men as this one has, because no subject could be so universally understood. The scholar and the prince, the peasant woman and the little child, none fails to grasp its meaning, and through the hearts of all it sends a kindred thrill.

It would be impossible to make a collection of all the Madonnas that have been painted. There would be at least a thousand, and they are scattered all over the world, from Raphaels of priceless value to the modest canvases which adorn village churches. There have been many controversies, too, regarding the merit of the paintings, some preferring the modern Madonnas and some the ancient.

"What is the greatest Madonna ever painted?" I asked a fashionable engraver. He pointed to an etching of the Sistine Madonna.

"And what is the Madonna that you have the most call for?" I pursued. He pointed to the same picture.

There is no doubt about it. It is the pearl of them all, the crowning work of Raphael's long procession of Virgins. The others were but studies for this one. With the dignity of a mother and of a queen she holds her son in her arms and shows him to the world, as if hurt and angered by its sin. He presses closer to her, with divine indignation in his eyes, but there is a look in the Virgin's face of infinite compassion, as if she understood the miseries of men and would be their mediator.

Another of Raphael's works was set before me—the "Madonna della Sedia," or the Madonna with the chair, and about this there is a pretty story. In Italy there lived a peasant named Mary. She was a good girl in every way—industrious, devout and charitable. One day she found a hermit lying ill on the mountain side, and as a reward for the help she gave him he blessed her, so the legend goes, and prophesied that one day she would be painted as the mother of God. Years passed by, and as she sat in the garden one sunny afternoon with her baby in her arms and her little boy playing about her knee a handsome young man entered the gate and paused in admiration on seeing the group.

HEAD OF THE SISTINE MADONNA.
[By Raphael.]

"I am Raphael Sanzio," he said, doffing his velvet cap, "and I would like to paint you as you sit there." And that was the original of the Virgin, the Child and the little St. John in the "Madonna della Sedia."

If I had not been speaking particularly of Madonnas with the Child, I should have placed Murillo's "Immaculate Conception" next to the Sistine Madonna in popularity, for certainly this great masterpiece is appreciated. There is, however, a less well known Virgin of Murillo about which there is a curious story. As he was about to leave a monastery where he had been executing an altar piece, the cook, a fervent brother, begged the artist to paint him a little Madonna. The prayer was such an earnest one that Murillo could not refuse. There was no canvas on hand, so seizing a napkin he painted on it a rough sketch of the Virgin. The features were of such beauty that it was carefully preserved and is to this day known as the "Madonna of the Napkin."

MADONNA AND CHILD.
[By Grosse.]

Among the modern paintings the Madonna of Bodenhausen, with her long flowing hair and her sweet faced Child, is a great favorite. True, the girlishness of the Virgin detracts somewhat from her dignity, but that is the modern idea. "The Virgin of Deliverance," by Hebert, is a masterpiece and is one of the very best of the modern conceptions of Mary, combining as it does great dignity with sweetness. The German artist Grosse, who spent some of the best years of his life studying Raphael, has painted an admirable Madonna, but perhaps of all living artists Bouguereau's talent for painting beautiful young girls and little children enables him to give us the most poetic and beautiful Virgin.

Burlington Route

Canadian Excursions.

If you are going to Eastern Canada this winter, it will help you to read and act on this Important Information.

The Best Route for comfort and quick time is by way of St. Paul and Chicago—through the States.

The Best Railroad is the Burlington, because its accommodations are excellent, its tracks smooth and connections sure.

Reclining Chair Cars are run on all Burlington Route trains, and no extra charge is made for seats. They are more roomy and comfortable than similar cars on other lines. Uniformed porters are in attendance to insure the comfort of travelers.

Leaving St. Paul.—Burlington trains leave St. Paul at 8:15 a. m. except Sunday, and 8:05 p. m. daily, arriving at Chicago in ample time to connect with the most convenient trains for Canadian points.

The Cost.—The price of a ticket to Montreal—or any place west of that city—and return, will be only Forty Dollars.

Tickets can be purchased of your home ticket agent, who will cheerfully give rates and informations. Patrons should ask for and see that their tickets read via the Burlington Route, between St. Paul and Chicago.

Date of Sale.—December 3 to December 31, 1900.

Limit of Tickets.—Each ticket is good for return within three months from date of sale.

Extension of Time can be arranged for with the Canadian ticket agent at your destination, upon payment of a small extra charge.

East of Montreal, to points in Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, the rate will be something above $40.00. The extra rate can be ascertained by applying to your ticket agent.

Our Agent.—Mr. A. L. Eidemiller, our Traveling Passenger Agent, will be at the Clarendon Hotel, Winnipeg, or Hotel Dacotah, Grand Forks, N. D., until December 24th. Application can be made to him for any further information needed.

MERRY CHRISTMAS!

The Gazette wishes all its readers a Merry Christmas, for the 17th year—and never was the wish more hearty and laden with greater sincerity. "Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men," will soon resound throughout the whole world. Christmas chimes will wake the echo, early next Tuesday morning, and to us who are here to enjoy their significance, they will breathe a spirit according to our conception of the sentiments and true import of the august occasion. The Christmas bells will ring for hearts that are weighted with cares and trials, perhaps for homes that miss a dear one whose place can never again be filled; they will riag for others whose cup of happiness seems full to o'erflowing—but to all they should breathe the same consolation. Christmas may be merry for all, not in a temporal, but in a higher sense. The grief stricken as well as the happy should feel the same elation while contemplating the chorus of angels chanting to the world their hymn of joy "Peace on earth, good will to men." To the Christian, then, realizing the value of the proffered gift, that peace that the world cannot give, right approoriate is the greeting "A Merry Chsistmas." While we may not be able to fathom the mysteries of nature, much less the mysteries of religion, we may enjoy to the full the blessings of both.

Let "Peace on earth, good will to men," and a true appreciation of the significance of the occasion, be the sentiment, and a merry Christmas must follow, as daylight follows the sun.

NOT FOR QUITTERS.

If there is one enterprise on this earth that a "quitters" should leave severely alone, it is advertising. To make a success of advertising, one must be prepared to stick to it like a barnacle to a boat's bottom. He should know before be begins it, that ne must spend money—lots of it. Somebody should tell him, also, that he cannot hope to reap results commensurate with his expenditure, early in the game. It is the man who has money to invest profitably; who believes the investment will pay, and then, beginning to spend money, stays in the game to the finish, who makes a success of advertising. Advertising doesn't jerk. It pulls. It begins very gently at first. So gently in fact, that you can hardly notice it. But the pull is steady. It increases day by day, and year by year, until it finally exerts an irresistible power. It may be likened to a team trying to start a heavy load. A thousand spasmodic, jerky pulls will not budge the load; while one-half the power exerted in steady effort will start and keep it moving.

Says S. G. Rosenbaum, junior partner of the National Cloak Co.: "Advertising is the entire cause of our success. We expend $100,000 a year in advertising. The volume of our business is close unto one million dollars each year. Our name 'The National Cloak Company' is our principal asset. We regard those four little words to be worth hundreds of thousands of dollars. And it is advertising alone that has given them this value. There have been infringers on our name, the best proof of its worth But we have always succeeded in enjoining them from its use, the courts sustaining our contention that the name was ours, and ours only; and that we, having giving it its value, are entitled to its sole use."

Governor Lind has issued a proclamation providing that the people of Polk county may vote at the general election in November, 1902, on the question of establishing Columbia county, with McIntosh as the county seat. There was a rival petition, calling for the setting off of the same townships in the eastern part of Polk county, but making Fosston the county seat. The Columbia county petition had 1,844 names and that of Nelson county 1,656, so Columbia and McIntosh won.

Col. Wilkinson, advertising agent of the Burlington, is among the candidates for Deputy Grand Master of the Odd Fellows, and his selection would be a popular one. No name brought out recently in the fraternal societies has aroused so much enthusiasm and we notice our exchanges all over the state speak in warm praise of the worthy old warrior. Our acquaintance, which extends over a period of eight years, satisfies us that any order would honor itself in honoring him. He has been an active member of the I. O. O. F. in this state and Iowa continuously for thirty-two years.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Emery Levack, on Wednesday, a daughter.

Miss Adele Lacoe, of this city, was operated on Thursday at Dr. Holte's hospital, Crookston, by Dr. Jules Gendron, of this city, and Dr. H. Holte, of Crookston. Dr. Denniston administered chloroform. The operation although a dangerous one, was entirely successful, and in spite of the fears of some of her friends, Dr. Gendron's diagnosis was proven correct, and there is every indication that the patient will recover.

Clerk of Court Perrault signed his name and affixed his official seal to the document, Saturday, entitling Chas. Krause, of Norman county, and Annie Olson, of Red Lake county, to wed. This is the fifth case within a week of a Red Lake county girl being carried away by an alien. It will soon be in order for our county commissioners to erect a high tariff obstruction, to discourage this tendency, and to foster our infant industries.

The case of Vandriu vs. Lake Pleasant township occupied Thursday, Friday and Saturday of last week in the Polk county district court, and a verdict was arrived at by the jury Sunday morning at three o'clock—in favor of the defendant, with costs taxed against the plaintiff. It was a damage suit for $1200, for alleged flooding of plaintiff's land. The fact that it was a natural water course was the winning point for the township. Van R. Brown and A.R. Wilkinson represented the township, and A. A. Miller, the plaintiff.

When ma begins to tiptoe round
'N we begin to hear
A certain hushy, whisp'rin sound
About this time of year,
We know that she 'n Sandy Claus
Are fixin things to do,
'N so we never peek, because
They never want us to.

When sister Mary goes about
A-hintin that she wishes
She had a teapot with a spout
To match her set of dishes,
We know it's time for us to write
Our letters 'n to set 'em
Beside the hearth where, in the night,
Ole Sandy Claus'll get 'em.

When all the seats in Sunday school
Are filled 'ith girls 'n boys
'N no one ever breaks a rule
'N makes a bit of noise,
We know it can't be very long
Till Sandy will appear
'N pass his presents to the throng
That comes but once a year.

When Aunt Melindy comes 'n brings
The children 'n the bird,
'N she 'n ma make popcorn strings,
We never say a word,
But anybody ought to see
That she has come to stay
Till time to have the Chris'mus tree,
Which can't be far away.

When pa comes sneakin 'crost the lot
A-lookin guilty, so 't
You'd think he'd stole the things he's got
Inside his overcoat,
We know it's time for us to run
'N carry in the wood
'N see that all our chores are done
'N otherwise be good.

County Auditor Zeb returned Saturday from attendance at the State Auditor's convention, and reports a very large and enthusiastic gathering. Mr. Zeh caught a bad cold on the trip that has resulted in an attack of bronchitis. He has been confined to bed the greater part of the week and is still unable to be out.

Mrs. F. B. Newton and daughter Alice will leave Saturday for Cleveland, Ohio, for a holiday visit. Miss Florence, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Newton, will, on January 15th, be married to Harry Canfield, who is well known here, he having been a resident of this city a year ago. Mr. Newton expects to join the other members of the family at Cleveland, where the wedding will take place.

A report given out by the promotors of the Halvorson-Richards logging railway, now in operation from Nebish to Red Lake, Beltrami county, is to the effect that it is the intention to extend the line from Nebish south and east to connect with the Minnesota & International at Tenstrike. A. A. White and other townsite boomers are interested in the latter place, and it will undoubtedly make a thrifty little business point if the road is extended. Such an extension would tap a country rich in pine and other valuable timber, as well as one well adapted to agriculture.

Contractor L. Johnson returned to the city Friday, having finished his season's work. He has erected brick blocks in Twin Valley and Ada this season, using brick of his own manufacture. The Ada block is a store building, which required 600,000 in its construction.

Mrs. Adam Zeh returned yesterday from Chicago, where she has been with her sister, Mrs. J. F. Krost, who was operated upon at one of the hospitals two weeks ago. Mrs. Krost is on the road to recovery, although her chances of living through the operation she submitted to were only eight in a hundred. Her many friends here and elsewhere will be glad to learn the good news of her prospective recovery.

Joe Dufault, of Gentilly township, was in the city Monday. Mr. Dufault reports that this was a very prosperous year for his family. They own 800 acres of land lying on the Red Lake river, and this year threshed 5,900 bushels of No. 1 hard wheat. They had in crop 325 acres, and some of this gave as high an average as 34 bushels to the acre. Like many of the Gentilly farmers, Mr. Dufault finds Red Lake Falls a good trading point, and says he will now be able to keep tab on bargains by scanning The Gazette's advertising columns.

From now until Dec. 22nd, the Great Northern Ry. will have on sale tickets to the Twin Cities and return at a very low rate for the round trip to enables teachers to spend the holidays at home in the east. These rates will also enable parties desiring to do so to attend the State Educational Association St. Paul Dec. 26-28, tickets good to return up to and including January 9th. See O. Thomas, Agent.

Edward St. Michael, one of the bright young men of Louisville township, who has been a constant reader of The Gazette for many years, called in last Thursday to pay for his paper another year in advance. Mr. St. Michael says the directors of the Louisville creamery are preparing for a good run in the spring, and the patrons are increasing their herds of good milch cows, even in the face of scarcity of feed. The dairy interests of Red Lake County will soon be one of the main factors in its advancement and prosperity.

Indian officers, headed by Captain Mercier, have just finished payment of the great Chippewa reservation Indians at Cass Lake, Red Lake and the upper Mississippi and a payment of $5 was made to every Chippewa individual on the reservation. THE BANQUET AT THE HOME.

BY HOWARD FIELDING.

[Copyright, 1900, by C. W. Hooke.]

Philosophers prove the infinity of space by asking you to think of the end of it as a wall with nothing upon the other side. This is declared to be unthinkable. There can be no final place, no wall with a void beyond.

I know better, for I have seen that wall. I came to it in October, 1899. There was nothing on the farther side and very little on the nearer. It was not an end, but a continuance, that was inconceivable to me.

My business had come to an end. No philosopher could deny that. My nervous system was done for. I seemed to see it taken out of my body and tacked up on that final wall like the skin of a squirrel on a barn door.

I was 30 years old, and I felt 130. When my friends asked me what I was going to do, I simply yawned at them.

It was at this time that some one recommended me to Miss Glendon. People have absolutely no conscience in such matters. The young lady was informed that I was a trustworthy and efficient man, a victim of misfortunes that would have been too much for anybody, and she credited the tale.

Miss Glendon was an orphan 21 years old and very pretty. Her income is somewhat more than a dollar per minute, and there are 525,600 minutes in a year. She is said to give about 12 hours a day to charity.

The gentleman who mentioned my name to Miss Glendon persuaded me, at her request, to go with him to call upon her. I was too feebleminded to resist. To the best of my recollection, I did not clearly understand where I was going until I found myself in the lady's presence.

The sight of Miss Glendon produced a considerable effect upon me. She possesses magnificent health and reveals, even to such eyes as mine were then, the energy of a noble and finely balanced nature.

I forgot for a few minutes that the unthinkable wall stood in front of me, and I was conscious, with a mild surprise, of talking like a living and rational human being.

After half an hour of generalities Miss Glendon asked me if I would undertake the management of her children's home, a very admirable charity which she had established about a year before. She had heard that I had had charge of a boys' school in Massachusetts for a couple of years after concluding my college course and that I had done wonderful work. She knew that I held a medical diploma, though I had practiced but little. The knowledge would be of great advantage, in her opinion. Altogether she spoke of my desultory and purposeless career as if it were the very thing she had been in search of, and she apologized with great delicacy for venturing to offer me a position in which pecuniary reward would not be at all equal to my deserts. Then she named a really handsome salary and paused for my reply.

THE SIGHT OF MISS GLENDON PRODUCED A CONSIDERABLE EFFECT ON ME.

Now, the fact is that I would have welcomed such a haven. hove all, I would have sacrificed for the sake of sharing any sort of work in which Miss Glendon was engaged, but I am honest in the main, and this thing was not possible. I told Miss Glendon frankly that I was fitter to be an inmate of her home than the head of it; that I was utterly broken down and prematurely in my second childhood and that, in brief, the institution could not fall into worse hands than mine if the manager were chosen by chance out of the directory.

It appeared that my friend had prepared her for this reply. He had told her that I was a bit the worse for past anxiety and unwisely worried about my health, but that there was really nothing the matter. All I needed was a little encouragement.

Accepting this view, Miss Glendon proceeded to encourage me. She told me how well I was looking, and, as a matter of fact, I actually did look as rugged as an ox. In earlier years I was very strong, and the muscular shell still stood, as the bark of a tree will sometimes stand when the heart of it is dust. Fifty times while she was talking to me I had to shake my wits together and with a spasmodic effort remember where I was and what had happened, yet I talked as straight as a tight string, as my friend informed me afterward, "except," he added, "for that foolishness about your health."

The upshot of it was that I became the manager of that institution, and my act was a crime. I was no more fit for it then a deaf man to lead an orchestra. However, the novelty of it buoyed me up for a few days, so that none of my subordinates knew that I was out of my wits.

The work was really extremely attractive to one who had come out defeated from the selfish strife of money winning, and if I had been only a little less battered and worn I would have been a fairly efficient person. Even as I was, the force within me might have proved sufficient but for the increasing rush of work incident to the coming holidays.

Miss Glendon had high ideas of the Christmas time, and her plans for making it memorable in the home were well considered, but exceedingly comprehensive. Moreover, she looked to me for suggestions, and I was becoming increasingly eager to serve her well.

But when a man's mind is in such a condition that he can't depend upon remembering his own name if asked for it in a hurry there is little use in expecting him to lay plans or even to carry out those of another person. I began to worry about the matter, to dream of it and to talk aloud about it, to my own great shame.

Then I resigned and was laughed at by Miss Glendon, who assured me that my success had passed her utmost expectations. So nothing remained but to go on, a wooden automaton that must run its course and then drop where it stood.

And it didn't want to break down! Let me assure you that I had no appetite for such a performance. I strove hard against it and wore out in striving the very strength I needed.

On Christmas day I was at my very worst. I wandered from room to room, giving orders that others seemed to think were rational, though I had little understanding of them myself. We had many visitors, and I greeted them, and they said p easant conventional things, as if they ored nothing amiss in me.

And then, as it seemed to me suddenly, we were in the long dining room. The children were taking their places; the visitors lined the walls, enjoying the sight of so much happiness.

There were 60 children, and they looked to me like 600. The room seemed to stretch away a mile at least to where Miss Glendon sat at the far end of the table with her eyes upon me.

I had risen to speak, but why I did not know. Every one was waiting.

I could not remember what I had meant to say nor why I had decided to speak at all. I merely knew that this was the end of me, and the tears came into my eyes.

Then in the stillness I heard a strange cracking sound. I felt a slight jar. There was a faint cry from among the densest crowd of visitors. One of the children near me screamed in a shrill voice, "The floor's sinkin down!"

"MAGNIFICENT!" SHE SOBBED.

Far away I could see Miss Glendon's face as white as paper. I was mildly interested, half awakened. It came to me like a commonplace that the cellar extended only half the length of the house.

"Sit still," said I in a tone of ordinary conversation. "There is no cellar under us."

Rather the tone than the words reassured them. The rush that had been imminent did not come. Some of the more nervous visitors edged away by the two doors that were available. I saw Miss Glendon whispering to some of the girls, who went out quietly.

The housekeeper standing in the door said, "I want ten of the biggest boys to help me with something."

I told them off mechanically, with my pointing finger, and they went out. By this time there were not more than half as many people in the room and scarcely a third as much weight as formerly upon the floor.

"We have decided to serve dinner in the other room," said Miss Glendon in a clear, high tone.

Then there was a rush, but not what might have been. I walked as in a trance to the door where she stood while the last child passed out. Then she closed the door and clasped her arms impulsively around me.

"Magnificent!" she sobbed. "The finest lie God ever put into a man's mouth!"

"Eternal heaven," I cried, "it's this end of the house that the cellar is under! I—I had forgotten!"

But she would never believe it. She said it was my modesty. She got an opinion from the carpenter that the floor must have fallen and cost a dozen lives and no man knoweth how many broken bones but for my coolness and ready wit.

It is all nonsense, but I can't prove it, and the less readily because I began upon that day to recover. I don't know why. Perhaps it was the natural course of the malady; perhaps Providence had no further need of me in the character of a lunatic. At any rate, I am well today and should be more than happy but for the false halo that I wear in the eyes of the woman I love.

BROKE ALL RECORDS

ORE SHIPMENTS FROM MINNESOTA FOR THE PAST SEASON.

Murderer Wallert Sentenced to Hang at Henderson—Timber Sales May Be Set Aside—Telephoning Without Wires—Petition to Open Red Lake Reservation—State News in General.

DULUTH, Dec 18.—The total amount of iron ore shipped from the mines of Minnesota for the season of 1900 was 9,451,095 gross tons, as compared with 8,216,383 gross tons in 1899, an increase of 1,234,762 gross tons. The Mesaba range shipped 7,795,296 and the Vermillion range 1,655,799 gross tons. The estimated value of the ore sent forward from Minnesota mines this year was $26,000,000. One of the most striking features of the ore production and shipments in Minnesota this year is the enormous shipments from the Mesaba range. The range shipped its first ore in 1892 and the total shipments from this range to date have been 31,385,838 gross tons. The Vermillion range, which began shipping in 1884, has shipped a total of 15,191,159 gross tons. The Mesaba range in nine years has shipped twice as much as the Vermillion range in seventeen years.

WALLERT WILL HANG.

Murderer of His Wife and Children Sentenced by Judge Cadwell.

HENDERSON, Minn., Dec. 12.—Theodore Wallert, who murdered his wife and four children Aug. 19, has been sentenced by Judge Cadwell to be hanged, his plea of guilty not availing him, as the presiding judge was not disposed to consider the spirit of the law, the letter of which was long since repealed by the state legislature, giving a murderer a chance to save his neck by saving the county the cost of a long trial and doubtful conviction.

Wallert, asked if he had anything to say before sentence should be pronounced, gave a long and rambling story of his life, and admitted the homicide, without exhibiting apparent emotion at the terrible crime which he wrought.

The date of execution must be fixed by the governor.

MAY DISAPPROVE SALES.

Government Notifies Buyers Not to Take Possession.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—The recent pine land sale at Crookston, Minn., may be disapproved. Land Commissioner Hermann has sent a telegram to the United States land office at the Minnesota town, stating that the regularity and validity of all sales of White Earth pine lands would depend upon the approval of the department, and that the purchasers should be notified not to take possession until such approval.

The cause of this action by the department is taken to mean that the government thinks that the purchasers at the sale got more than they should have had for their money. It is stated that the value of the timber sold was $390,000, whereas the price paid was only $250,000.

TALK WITHOUT WIRES.

Remarkable Experiments in Telephoning at Minneapolis.

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 18.—Telephoning without wires was given a most rigid test and was successful in the face of adverse conditions. Men talked across the Mississippi river, a distance of more than 1,000 feet, despite a cutting wind and extremely cold weather, two factors operating against success. The fact that the experiment was successful in the face of obstacles makes it clear that a revolution in the present methods is possible.

The experiment can hardly be called wireless telephoning, for it is necessary to use some wire and the ordinary transmitters and receivers. Lengths of wire—150 feet—were stretched on each side of the river, and to these were attached the transmitters and receivers. The voice vibrations on one wire were carried across and registered upon the other.

PETITION IS CIRCULATING.

Congress Asked to Open the Abandoned Red Lake Reservation.

THIEF RIVER FALLS, Minn., Dec. 18.—A petition to congress is being circulated asking that action be taken to secure the opening for settlement and cultivation of the agricultural land lying within the counties of Polk, Red Lake and Marshall, now reserved for, but abandoned by, the Red Lake band of Chippewa Indians, and being the western portion of the Red Lake Indian reservation.

The lands in question comprise about 11 townships, or 254,440 acres, more or less, sufficient to provide farms of 160 acres each for about 1,584 settlers.

FAVORS THE CANTEEN.

Archbishop Ireland Calls on the Senate Committee on Military.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—In the senate committee on military the hearing on the army reorganization bill was continued, and in addition to a number of army officers, Archbishop Ireland and Bishop McGolrick were heard. The two prelates spoke only on the provision of the bill prohibiting the establishment of canteens at post exchanges. Both of them pronounced the provision unwise and expressed the opinion that the canteen is in the interest of temperance and good morals in the army. Archbishop Ireland based his remarks especially upon his observations of affairs at Fort Snelling, near his home, at St. Paul.

Hamilton Is Indicted.

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 13.—The grand jury has indicted Frank H. Hamilton, the newspaper man, for the murder of Leonard R. Day, in the West hotel billiard room Nov. 25. The charge is murder in the first degree.

ENDORSE R. G. EVANS.

Minneapolis Legislators Will Support Him for Senator.

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 14.—The Hennepin delegation held a meeting in the board of trade rooms and at this meeting 16 of the 19 Republican members of the legislature from Hennepin county voted to endorse Robert G. Evans as the delegation's candidate for the seat in the United States senate made vacant by the death of Senator C. K. Davis.

The name of Thomas H. Shevlin, who had been looked upon as the strongest candidate opposing Mr. Evans' claim for the endorsement of the delegation, was not considered at the caucus.

IN MEMORY OF DAVIS.

Senate Will Listen to Eulogies of the Deceased Member Jan. 12.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—Mr. Nelson (Minn.) gave notice when the senate convened that on Jan. 12 he will present resolutions relative to the death of his colleague, Mr. Davis, and asked that business be suspended to pronounce eulogies on the distinguished services of the deceased.

Considerable minor routine business was disposed of and then, at 12:25 p. m., on motion of Mr. Lodge (Mass.) the senate went into executive session to further consider the Hay-Pauncefote treaty.

TO PASS DULUTH UP.

Northern Steamship Company Will Run From Chicago to Buffalo.

DULUTH, Dec. 14.—An unconfirmed report regarding next year's plans of the Northern Steamship company, of which James J. Hill is president, has reached Duluth. It is said that the big passenger boats Northwest and Northland will run between Chicago and Buffalo instead of Duluth and Buffalo. The prospective travel to the Pan-American exposition at Buffalo is said to inspire the change.

WOULD WITHDRAW IT.

Great Northern Makes a Request Regarding the Colonist Rate.

CHICAGO, Dec. 18.—The Great Northern railroad, it is stated, has addressed identical notes to the Northern Pacific and the Soo roads asking them to agree to the withdrawal of the round trip colonist rate west of St. Paul. The colonist rate during the two years it has been in force has caused considerable rate demoralization.

Northwestern Flour Output.

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 18.—According to The Northwestern Miller the flour output at Minneapolis last week was 204,225 barrels, against 226,195 barrels for the corresponding week of 1899. Superior-Duluth mills last week ground 11,400 barrels against no production for the corresponding week of 1899. Sales last week nearly doubled the production. Though the business was largely domestic, at old prices, some made one-third their sales export.

Receiver Placed in Charge.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 16.—Judge Lochren of the United States district court, has made an order appointing a receiver for the Minnesota Thresher Manufacturing company. The order recites that the business will be carried on by the receiver and the company placed upon a firm financial basis. The Threshing company is the well known Stillwater corporation that has done business in Minnesota for 25 years.

Hill Becomes an Erie Director.

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.—At a meeting of the board of directors of the Erie Railway company James J. Hill of the Great Northern Railway company, Norman B. Ream of Chicago, a director of the Baltimore and Ohio and Pullman company, and Robert Bafon of J. P. Morgan & Co., were elected directors in the place of Messrs. Quinterd, Godwin and Williamson.

Burglar Makes a Big Haul.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 17.—The residence of Theodore L. Hays, manager of the Grand Opera House, was entered by a sneakthief Saturday evening and cash and jewels aggregating $1,500 were secured by the robber. More than a year ago Mr. Hays sustained a similar loss in a similar manner.

SIX BURNED TO DEATH.

North Dakota Indians Use Gasoline for Kerosene.

CANNON BALL, N. D., Dec. 18.—An Indian family, consisting of father, mother and four children, burned to death from an explosion of gasoline. Another family of father, mother and one child are frightfully burned and will probably die.

The Benton Transportation company last summer had five tanks of gasoline on the river bank at Bismarck awaiting a gasoline boat. The bank caved and all the tanks went into the river. One of these an Indian named War Bonnet (now dead) found and began selling its contents out to the Indians for kerosene oil. Saturday night he lit a match to fill a measure and an explosion followed. A woman and her four children were burned to a crisp. The house and its contents were destroyed.

Was Senator Davis' Teacher.

GREEN BAY, Wis., Dec. 15.—Malcolm Sellers, who has been well known throughout the state of Wisconsin for over half a century, is dead, aged 81 years. He served in the legislature in 1850 and was a teacher at Carroll college, having for a pupil among others Cushman K. Davis, the late Minnesota senator.

In Honor of an Iowa Woman.

GETTYSBURG, Pa., Dec. 15.—The Woman's Relief Corps of Iowa has arranged to erect a monument here in honor of Jennie Wade, the only woman killed during the battle of Gettysburg. The monument will be erected in the spring and will be dedicated on July 3, 1901, the 38th anniversary of the battle.

WYLIE GAZETTE.

Edited by H. P. JOHNSON, Wylie, Minn.

A department devoted to the interests of Wylie and the district tributary. Subscriptions received by H. P. Johnson.

As this issue probably reaches the homes of its readers on or near Christmas eve, this department, although yet in its infancy, asks you kindly to accept its wish to you all —a Merry Christmas. With Christmas comes the end of the year. The end or finishing part of a thing should be made its climax. Among the holidays ends the year. What better days could you have to end your old year in; what days more appropriate for festivals, parties and social enjoyment than these, so old and historic, with their tales and sentiments, from the early days of the Christian era? With a vision of illustrious banquets, highly enjoyable festivals, many attractive weddings, and a prevailing happiness around every fireside, we again in our enthusiasm say to our readers, "A Merry Christmas!"

CHRISTMAS ON INDIAN ISLAND.

BY W. E S. FALES.

The fierce tribe of Penobscot warriors which once dominated Maine, New Brunswick and Quebec is now represented by a thriving civilized community on Indian island not far from Bangor, in the commonwealth of Maine. Here for nearly a century they have been trained and educated by the devout Roman Catholic sisters, aided by a few priests from our own people. They have become civilized and Christianized and are today among the best citizens of the state. They are proud of their lineage, and they speak, read and write English.

In matters of faith they are devout Romanists and observe the festivals of their church with fidelity and zeal. Their priestly advisers with commendable wisdom have encouraged all of their old rites which are poetic, entertaining or marked by the love of nature.

Christmas is the great day of their year. No small boy with delirious visions of Santa Claus looks forward to the festival with more delight than these children of the forest. The week before homes and churches are trimmed with evergreens and flowers, the decorations uniting the conventional methods of the great cities with the freer and more graceful styles of their own race. The Indian blood comes out in the profuse use of antlers, elk horns, deer heads, bows and arrows, stained porcupine quills, eagle feathers and birch bark panels for decorative purposes.

AN INDIAN ISLAND BELLE IN CHRISTMAS ATTIRE.

Their own band gives what may be called a continuous concert, playing the latest compositions and more especially the anthem songs and dances written by the Penobscot composer and musician, Hon. Horace Nicolar, formerly a representative of the tribe in the state legislature. The performers are Indians, and the music has a strange flavor of the ancient moon dance and war dance.

Everybody gives Christmas gifts to everybody else, and in the giving there is considerable common sense, utility rather than mere ornament being the feature of the presents.

Christmas afternoon there is always a dress parade. Young men and young women warmly dressed in half Indian costume stroll up and down the snowy streets, skate upon the waters which surround their home or ride in sleighs. They are a fine looking procession. The men are tall, erect and muscular and the women bright eyed, exquisitely proportioned and as graceful as swans. Some of the belles would be stars in New York drawing rooms.

Prevented A Tragedy.

Timely information given Mrs. Geo. Long, of New Straitsville, Ohio, prevented a dreadful tragedy and saved two lives. A frightful cough had long kept her awake every night. She had tried many remedies and doctors but steadily grew worse until urged to try Dr. King's New Discovery. One bottle wholly cured her, and she writes this marvelous medicine also cured Mr. Long of a severe attack of Pneumonia. Such cures are positive proof of the matchless merit of this grand remedy for curing all throat, chest and lung troubles. Only 50c. and $1.00. Every bottle guaranteed. Trial bottle free at W. A. Now is the time when croup and lung troubles prove rapidly fatal. The only harmless remedy that produces immediate results is One Minute Cough Cure. It is very pleasant to take and can be relied upon to quickly cure coughs, colds and lung diseases. It will prevent consumption. W. A.Schreiter.

The annual meeting of the Lanstads church was held on Dec. 10, in the church, with Rev. A.M. Lunde in the chair and C. Aass,as secretary. Christian Jensen was elected trustee in place of N.K.Anderson whose term expired. The trustees and treasurer presented their reports,which showed good collections, all bills paid except $130 on the preacher's residence in St. Hilaire on which this congregation holds a half interest. It was agreed to tax each family $8.10 and pay the debt at once. The preacher's salary was raised $25. This is prosperity and strong faith in the work of Christ.

Cold Steel or Death.

"There is but one small chance to save your life and that is through an operation," was the awful prospect set before Mrs. I. B. Hunt, of Lime Ridge, Wis., by her doctor after vainly trying to cure her of a frightful case of stomach trouble and yellow jaundice. He didn't count on the marvellous power of Electric Bitters to cure Stomach and Liver troubles, but she heard of it, took seven bottles was wholly cured, avoided the surgeon's knife, now weighs more and feels better than ever. It's positively guaranteed to cure Stomach,Liver and Kidney troubles and never disappoints. Price 50c at W. A. Schreiter's drug store.

Pound Social.

One of the very pleasant occasions of the season was the Pound Social at the residence of Rev. Moore on Friday evening of last week. The members and friends of the Presbyterian church "pounded" their pastor. Some brought one pound and some fifty as the case might be. But when it was all put together it made quite an addition to the larder of the manse. The evening was spent by the younger and older people in the most pleasant social way. Games and recitations formed the amusements of the hour. One of the special features was the "peanut walk" in which all participated, L. C. Simons and H.H. Zalser carried off the prize for steady nerve and ability to carry the largest load at one time. The kind friends who thus remembered their minister have the hearty thanks of the pastor and his wife,and they will ever be welcome to his home whether they come with or without "pounds."

Help is needed at once when a person's life is in danger. A neglected cough or cold may soon become serious and should be stopped at once. One Minute Cough Cure quickly cures colds and coughs and the worst cases of croup, bronchitis, grip and other throat and lung troubles. W. A. Schreiter.

Sheriff Sampson went up to Norden, Friday, to take in custody Fred. Olson, who had the option of serving thirty days in jail, or paying a fine of thirty dollars on the old case of destroying Gilbert Olson's fence, and letting his cattle run at large. Fred was landed in the county jail, but was soon released on a writ of habeas corpus—this for the second time.

Red Lake White Fish.

Conrad Lajambe came down from Red Lake Tuesday,with a load of 3200 white fish as ballast. He sold 500 pounds to Theo.LaBissoniere and the balance was shipped to Grand Forks, where it finds a ready sale. Mr. Lajambe says the fish are caught by the Indians, with large pound nets. Openings are made in the ice a couple of feet wide, and many feet long, where the nets are sunk, and the fish are hauled out by hundreds,and have scarcely ceased to wriggle when offered for sale here and at the Forks. In fact, it is said that when thawed out,some of the fish have been known to come to life, so fresh are they. The market will be regularly supplied here, and this is welcome intelligence, as no finer delicacy could be wished than this fresh Red Lake white fish. With a supply of such fish and at our very door, it is proper that our people experience the benefits, instead of importing fish from the Coast, that are not only expensive but never as fresh and edible.

Glanders in Louisville.

A. D. Berry,clerk of Louisville,says that Edwin Davidson, a member of the veterinary board of North Dakota, was called to Louisville last Saturday to investigate the cases of glanders among horses there. In one stable there were nine horses, and it was feared that they were all effected. The Maline test, which consists in injecting a fluid under the skin, was applied, and it was found that only three of the horses was effected —one belonging to Napoleon Beauchaine and the other to Joseph LaLiberty.

The Maline test is said to be infallible. In cases where the disease exists, the horses show effects in from six to twelve hours, by becoming stiff and all broken down, whereas if the animal is free from the disease, no amount of the fluid has any effect. The three horses found to have the disease were killed, and the stable was quarantined for three weeks, after the lapse of which time the test will be again applied. The horses killed, Mr.Berry says, were apparently in fine condition, and he thinks the disease is much more prevalent in this section than is generally supposed. Any horse that shows signs of running from the nose should be given the test. The disease is contagious, and is apt to spread rapidly.

ORDER FOR HEARING AND NOTICE OF APPLICATION FOR APPOINTMENT OF ADMINISTRATOR.

State of Minnesota, } ss
County of Red Lake, }

In Probate Court,
Special Term,
Dec.17, 1900.

In the matter of the estate of Peter Mercier
deceased.

On receiving and filing the petition of Clement P. Mercier,of the county of Red Lake representing, among other things, that Peter Mercier, late of Red Lake Falls, Red Lake County on the 25th day of August, A. D. 1896, at Red Lake Falls, died in-testate, and being a resident of this county at the time of his death leaving goods, chattels and estate within this county, and that the said petitioner is a son of said deceased, and praying that administration of said estate be to him, Clement P. Mercier, granted;

It is ordered that said petition be heard before this court on Monday, the 14th day of January, A. D. 1901, at 10 o'clock A. M., at the probate office in said county.

Ordered further, that notice thereof be given to the heirs of said deceased, and to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week, for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the Red Lake Falls Gazette, a weekly newspaper, printed and published at Red Lake Falls in said county.

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE ON FILING PETITION TO SELL LAND.

State of Minnesota } ss
County of Red Lake }

In Probate Court
Special Term
Dec. 19th, 1900.

In the matter of the estate of Louis Moranville, deceased.On reading and filing the petition of Telesphore Moranville, executor of the estate of Lewis Moranville, setting forth the amount of personal estate that has come into his hands, the disposition thereof, and how much remains undisposed of; the amount of debts outstanding against said deceased, as far as the same can be ascertained; the legacies unpaid, and a description of all the real estate, (excepting the homestead), of which said deceased died seized, and the condition and value of the respective portions or lots thereof; the persons interested in said estate with their residences, and praying that license be to him granted to sell all of the real estate of Louis Moranville in said county.

And it appearing by said petition that there is not sufficient personal estate in the hands of said Executor to pay said debts, legacies or expenses of administration, and that it is necessary, for the payment of said debts, legacies or expenses, to sell all of said real estate.

It is therefore ordered that all persons interested in said estate appear before this court on Monday the 14th day of Jan. A. D. 1901, at ten o'clock a. m., at the court house in Red Lake Falls, in said county, then and there to show cause, (if any there be) why license should not be granted to said Telesphore Moranville to sell so much real estate of said deceased as shall be necessary to pay such debts, legacies and expenses.

And it is further ordered that this order shall be published once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the Gazette, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Red Lake Falls in said county.

Dated at Red Lake Falls, Minn., the 19th day of Dec., A. D. 1900.

By the Court.

Against Lee.

A decision in the mandamus appeal of H. W. Lee against the city of Thief River Falls, in which it is held that a judgment recovered against a village after it had been reincorporated cannot be collected, and that such proceedings to enforce payment cannot test the validity of its reincorporation, was one of seven filed in supreme court on Friday by Justice Lewis.

The case was brought in district court, Attorney Lee suing on a judgment obtained against the village, after the government was changed to that of a city. And it was decided by Judge Watts that the city was not holden, and also that the validity of the proceedings by which incorporation as a city could not be attacked by the proceedings in Mr. Lee's case. The supreme court affims in both particulars.

Increase Its Capital.

The Great Northern Railway Company on Friday filed a resolution of its directorate with the secretary of state, increasing the capital stock of the system from 990,000 shares of $100 each to 1,000,000 shares. The increase was decided upon at a meeting of the directors Oct. 16th.

The increase of stock was conditioned upon the assent of three-fourths of the company's shares. The documents filed show this has been obtained. The proceeds from the increase of capital will be used to improve the condition of additions to the Great Northern system.

Pouliot-Lizotte Nuptials.

Mr. Aller Pouliot, of this city, and Miss Susan Lizotte, of Louisville, were married Wednesday morning at the Louisville Catholic church, the Rev. E. Fayolle officiating. The affair was a very quiet one, and only a few of the near relatives of the contracting parties being present. Nicholas Pouliot and Peter Pouliot, father and brother of the groom, having been the only relatives from this city in attendance. The young people have both lived their lives among us, and count their friends only by the number of their acquaintances. The Gazette extends congratulations.

Death of Mrs. P. Morrissette.

Mrs. P. Morrissette, nee Miss Josephine Eleanor LaFreniere, died at Colorado Springs on Saturday, Dec. 22, at 6:45 a. m. The remains were brought to this city, arriving here Christmas day, accompanied by Mr. Morrissette and his two children. The remains were taken to the home of Mrs. O. LaFreniere, mother of the deceased. The funeral occurred this morning at 10:30, from St. Joseph's church, where a requiem mass was sung interment being made in St. Mary's cemetery.

Josephine Eleanor LaFreniere was born April 30, 1873 at Penetanguishene, Ont., Ca., coming to Red Lake Falls with her parents in 1880. Aug. 12, 1892 she was married to Peter Morrissette and the couple made their home at Thief River Falls.

Beautiful, ambitious, and winsome, the young bride soon drew to herself a host of warm friends. In 1899 she was attacked with consumption, as the result of a cold taken on returning from a trip on cars. Soon after she went to Colorado Springs for her health, and was so much benefited that she thought it safe to return in the spring of 1900. Last fall the family moved back to Colorado and remained there until the time of her death. Deceasad was able to be about until three days prior to her death, when she took to the bed.

A husband and two children, Audrey, aged 7, and Romaine Grace, aged 3, are left to mourn her loss.

The sad affair has cast a gloom over the entire community, and all realize the sorrow at the old home, where the dark clouds hover in striking contrast to the merry Christmas spirit abroad in the world. To the young husband thus left deserted by his helpmate at the threshold of a prosperous and happy career, do our sympathies especially turn.

He will make his future home at Cass Lake, where he has an interest in the business now being conducted by his brother, L. N. Morrissette, formerly of this city.

The family desire to express, through The Gazette, their appreciation of the help and sympathy of their friends, manifested in so many ways in this time of sorrow.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

BRITISH-BOER WAR NEWS.

The Boers attacked Zuufontein Dec. 18, but were beaten off.

Lord Kitchener reports that the Boer invasion of Cape Colony is checked.

Two Boer commandos have invaded Cape Colony at a point a hundred miles apart.

The Boer rebellion in Cape Colony continues to spread. Colesburg has been occupied by the burghers.

Sir Alfred Milner has informed the British war department that the situation in South Africa is extremely critical.

The London Evening Standard says a report has reached London that Kimberley is seriously threatened by the Boers.

It is reported that General Knox has been forced to abandon pursuit of General Dewet, owing to the situation created in Cape Colony by the Boers crossing the Orange river.

Virtually all the districts of Cape Colony in the vicinity of the Orange river are in more or less open revolt, and there is likely to be sharp fighting on a rather large scale before the Boer invasion is crushed.

The seriousness of the situation in South Africa is indicated by an announcement made by the war office of a large increase in the force to operate against the Boers. Australia and New Zealand are asked to send further contingents.

It is reported that at Verndale General French has routed 2,500 Boers with 4 guns and a pompom. Verndale is 20 miles northwest of Krugersdorp. The fight took place Dec. 19. The British had 14 wounded and the Boers fled in disorder with about 50 killed.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

A detachment of the Seventeenth Lancers, which mutinied last week at Ballincollig, Ireland, has embarked for South Africa on the troopship Idaho. The men were escorted on board by a detachment of infantry with fixed bayonets.

THE CRISIS IN CHINA.

Dr. Morrison, wiring the London Times from Peking, Saturday, says that Chinese officials say that China will accept all the conditions of the joint note without "losing her face."

The joint note of the ministers of the powers, embodying the conditions which the Chinese government must accept prior to the initiation of peace negotiations, have been signed by all the foreign ministers and the text made public.

At a meeting of the foreign ministers Dec. 19, everything in regard to the terms of the joint note was agreed to, including the British modifications. The ministers refuse to disclose anything in connection with the matter, believing that the home governments should give the particulars to the public.

CUBA AND PORTO RICO.

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE ON FILING PETITION TO SELL LAND.

State of Minnesota } ss
County of Red Lake }
In Probate Court
Special Term
Dec. 19th, 1900.

In the matter of the estate of Louis Moranville, deceased. On reading and filing the petition of Telesphore Moranville, executor of the estate of Lewis Moranville, setting forth the amount of personal estate that has come into his hands, the disposition thereof, and how much remains undisposed of; the amount of debts outstanding against said deceased, as far as the same can be ascertained; the legacies unpaid, and a description of all the real estate, (excepting the homestead), of which said deceased died seized, and the condition and value of the respective portions or lots thereof; the persons interested in said estate with their residences, and praying that license be to him granted to sell all of the real estate of Louis Moranville in said county.

And it appearing by said petition that there is not sufficient personal estate in the hands of said Executor to pay said debts, legacies or expenses of administration, and that it is necessary, for the payment of said debts, legacies or expenses, to sell all of said real estate,

It is therefore ordered that all persons interested in said estate appear before this court on Monday the 14th day of Jan. A. D. 1901, at ten o'clock a. m., at the court house in Red Lake Falls, in said county, then and there to show cause, (if any there be) why license should not be granted to said Telesphore Moranville to sell so much real estate of said deceased as shall be necessary to pay such debts, legacies and expenses.

And it is further ordered that this order shall be published once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the Gazette, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Red Lake Falls in said county.

Dated at Red Lake Falls, Minn., the 19th day of Dec., A. D. 1900.

By the Court,
(Seal) J. T. KNIGHT
n22-d13 Judge of Probate.

Arms and The Woman

By Harold MacGrath

Copyright, 1900,
By Harold MacGrath.

"No; I am only her godfather," he said. "Does herr wish another egg?"

"Thanks. She is very well educated for a barmaid."

"Yes. Does herr wish Rhine wine?"

"Coffee is plenty. Has Gretchen seen many Americans?"

"Few. Perhaps herr would like a knoblauch with salt and vinegar?"

It occurred to me that Gretchen was not to be discussed, so I made for another channel. "I have heard," said I, "that once upon a time a princess was born in this inn."

The old fellow elevated both eyebrows and shoulders—a deprecating movement. "They say that of every inn. It has become a trade." If I had known the old man, I might have said that he was sarcastic.

"Then there is no truth in it?" disappointedly.

"Oh, I do not say there is no truth in the statement. If herr will pardon me, it is something I do not like to talk about."

"Ah, then there is a mystery!" I cried, with lively interest, pushing back my chair. But the innkeeper shook his head determinedly.

"Very well," I laughed; "I shall ask Gretchen."

He smiled. The smile said, "Much good it will do you." Gretchen was in the barroom arranging some roses over the fireplace. Her hands were bare; they were small and white and surprisingly well kept.

"Gretchen," said I, "I want you to tell me the legend of the inn."

"The legend?"

"Yes; about the princess who was born here."

Gretchen laughed a merry laugh. The laugh said, "You are an amusing person!"

"Ah, the American is always after legends when he has tired of collecting antiquities. Was there a princess born here? Perhaps. At any rate it is not a legend. History nor peasantry makes mention of it. Will herr be so kind as to carry the ladder to the mantel so I may wind the clock?"

I do so. Even at this early stage I could see that Gretchen had the faculty of making persons forget what they were seeking and by the mere sound of her voice. And it was I who wound the clock.

"Gretchen has a secret," said I.

"Gretchen," said I, "time lags. Make a servant out of me this morning."

"Herr does the barmaid too much honor," with lowered eyes.

"I am in the habit of doing anything I please."

"Ah, herr is one of those millionaires I have read about!"

"Yes, I am very rich." I laughed, but Gretchen did not see the point.

"Come, then, with me, and you shall weed the knoblauch patch." She was laughing at me, but I was not to be abashed.

"To the patch be it, then!" I cried. "An onion would smell as sweet under any other name."

So Gretchen and I went into the onion patch, and I weeded and hoed and hoed and weeded till my back ached and my hands were the color of the soil. Nothing was done satisfactorily to Gretchen. It was "There, you have ruined the row back of you!" or "Pull the weeds more gently!" and sometimes, "Ach, could your friends see you now!" I suppose that I did not make a pretty picture. The perspiration would run down my face. I would forget the condition of my hands and push back my hair, which fell like a mop over my brow, whereat she would laugh. Once I took her hand and helped her to jump over a row. I was surprised at the strength of her grasp.

"What does herr do for a living? He works so badly as a gardener."

"I am a journalist," I answered, leaning on my hoe and breathing heavily.

"Ach, one of those men who tell such dreadful stories about kings and princes, who cause men to go to war with each other, who rouse the ignorant to deeds of violence—one of those men who are more powerful than a king because they can undo him?" She drew away from me.

"Hold on!" I cried, dropping the hoe. "What do you know about it?"

"Enough," sadly. "I read the papers. I always look with fear upon one of those men who can do so much good and yet who would do so much evil."

I had never looked at it in that light before.

"It seems to me, Gretchen," I said quietly, "that you are about as much [illegible] as I am a [illegible] of knoblauches." The color of excitement fled from Gretchen's cheeks, her eyes grew troubled, and she looked away.

"Gretchen has a secret," said I. "It is nothing to me what Gretchen's secret is. I shall respect it and continue to think of her only as a barmaid with—with a superior education." I shouldered the hoe. "Come, let us go back. I'm thirsty."

"Thank you, herr," was the soft reply. Then Gretchen became as dumb, and our return to the inn was made in silence. Once there, however, she recovered. "I am sorry to have put you at such a disadvantage," glancing at my clothes, which were covered with brown earth.

"Let that be the least of your troubles!" I cried gayly. Then I hummed in English:

"So, ho, dear Gretchen, winsome lass,
I want no tricky wine,
But amber nectar bring to me,
Whose rich bouquet will cling to me,
Whose spirit voice will sing to me
From out the mug divine!
So, here's your toll—a kiss—away,
You Hebe of the Rhine!
No goblet's gold means cheer to me;
Let no cut glass get near to me;
Go, Gretchen, haste the beer to me
And put it in the stein!"

I thought I saw a smile on her lips, but it was gone before I was certain.

"Gott im himmel!" gasped the astonished innkeeper as I went into the barroom. I still had the hoe over my shoulder.

"Never mind, mein host. I've been weeding your knoblauch patch as a method of killing time."

"But"— He looked at Gretchen in dismay.

"It was I who led him there," said Gretchen in answer to his inquiring eyes.

A significant glance passed between them. There was a question in his, a command in hers. I pretended to be examining the faded tints in the stein I held in my hand. I was thinking, "Since when has an innkeeper waited on the wishes of his barmaid?"

There was a mystery after all.

CHAPTER IX.

I took my pipe and strolled along the river bank. What had I stumbled into? Here was an old inn with rather a feudal air, but it was only one in a thousand, a common feature throughout the continent, and yet why had the gods, when they cast out Hebe, chosen this particular inn for her mortal residence? The pipe solves many riddles, and then sometimes it creates a density. I put my pipe into my pocket and cogitated. Gretchen had brought about a new order of things. A philosophical barmaid was certainly a novelty. That Gretchen was philosophical I had learned in the rose gardens; that she was also used to giving commands I had learned in the onion patch. Hitherto I had held the onion in contempt; already I had begun to respect it. Above all, Gretchen was a mystery, the most alluring kind of mystery—a woman who was not what she seemed. How we men love mysteries which are given the outward semblance of a Diana or a Venus! By and by my journalistic instinct awoke. Who are those who fear the newspapers? Certainly it is not the guiltless. Of what was Gretchen guilty? The innkeeper knew. Was she one of those many conspirators who abound in the kingdom? She was beautiful enough for anything. And whence came the remarkable likeness between her and Phyllis? Here was a mystery indeed. I had a week before me. In that time I might learn something about Gretchen even if I could solve nothing. I admit that it is true that had Gretchen been plain it would not have been worth the trouble. But she had too heavenly a face, too wonderful an eye, too delicious a mouth, not to note her with concern.

I did not see Gretchen again that day, but as I was watching the moon climb up, thinking of her and smoking a few pipes as an incense to her shrine, I heard her voice beneath my window. It was accompanied by the bass voice of the innkeeper.

"But he is a journalist. Is he safe? Is anything safe from them?" came to my ears in a worried accent, a bass. So the innkeeper, too, was a socialist!

Said an impatient contralto, "So long as I have no fear why should you?"

"Ach, you will be found out and dragged back!" was the lamentation in a throaty baritone. Anxiety raises a bass voice at least two pitches. "If you would but return to the hills where there is absolute safety!"

"No, I will not go back there, where everything is so dull and dead. I have lived too long not to read a face at a glance. His eyes are honest."

"Thanks, Gretchen," murmured I from above. I was playing the listener. But, then, she was only a barmaid.

"And it is so long," went on the contralto, "since I have seen a man—a strong one—I wish to see if my power is gone."

"Aha!" thought I. "So you have already laid plans for my capitulation, Gretchen?"

"But," said the bass voice once more, "supposing some of the military should straggle along? There might be one who has seen you before. Alas, I despair! You will not hide yourself; you will stay here till they find you."

I fell to wondering what in the world Gretchen had done. "I have not been [illegible] village since I was a little girl. Dressed as I am, who would recognize me? No one at the castle, for there is no one there but the steward. Would you send me away?"

"God forbid! But this American? You say you can read faces. How about the other one?"

Silence.

"Yes, how about him?"

Said Gretchen: "We are not infallible. And perhaps I was then much to blame."

"No, we are not infallible. That is the reason why you should take no chance," was the final argument of the innkeeper.

"Hush!" said Gretchen.

"Confound the pipe!" I muttered. It had fallen over the window sill.

Five minutes passed. I heard no sound. Glancing from the side of the window I saw that Gretchen and the innkeeper were gone.

Yes, there wasn't any doubt about it; Gretchen was a conspirator. The police were hunting for her, and she was threatened with discovery. It was beyond my imagination what she could have done. Moreover, she was rather courting danger. The military post was only five miles down the river. The one thing which bothered me was the "him" who had suddenly intruded upon the scene, invisible, but there, like Banquo's ghost. Perhaps her beauty had lured some fellow to follow her fortunes, and his overzeal or lack of it had brought ruin to some plot.

"Gretchen," said I as I jumped into bed, "whoever he was, he must have been a duffer."

Her serene highness the Princess Hildegarde was in Jericho, and Hillars along with her, where I had consigned them.

Next morning Gretchen waited upon me at breakfast. She was quiet and answered my questions in monosyllables. Presently she laid something at the side of my plate. It was my pipe. I looked at her, but the leads of my eyes could not plumb the depths in hers.

"Thanks," said I. "It dropped from my window last night while I was playing the disgraceful part of eavesdropper." I dare say she had expected anything but this candid confession. It was very cunning in me. She knew that I knew she knew. Had I lied I should have committed an irreparable blunder. As it was she lifted her chin and laughed.

"Will you forgive me?"

"Yes; for you certainly wasted your time."

"Yes, indeed; for I am just as much in the dark as ever."

"And will remain so."

"I hope so. A mystery is charming while it lasts. Really, Gretchen, I did not mean to play the listener, and I promise that from now on"—

"From now on!" cried Gretchen. "Does not herr leave today?"

"No; I am going to spend a whole week here."

There was a mixture of dismay and anger in her gaze.

"But, as I was going to say, I shall make no effort to pry into your affairs. Honestly, I am a gentleman."

"I shall try to believe you," said she, the corners of her mouth broadening into a smile.

She condescended to show me through the rose gardens and tell me what she knew about them. It was an interesting lecture. And in the evening she permitted me to row her about the river. We were getting on very well under the circumstances.

The week was soon gone, and Gretchen and I became very good friends. Often when she had nothing to do we would wander along the river through the forests, always, I noticed, by a route which took us away from the village. Each day I discovered some new accomplishment. Sometimes I would read Heine or Goethe to her, and she would grow rapt and silent. In the midst of some murmurous stanza I would suddenly stop, only to see her start and look at me as though I had committed a sacrilege, in that I had spoiled some dream of hers. Then again I myself would become lost in dreams, to be aroused by a soft voice saying, "Well, why do you not go on?" Two people of the opposite sexes reading poetry in the woods is a solemn matter. This is not appreciated at the time, however. It comes back afterward.

In all the week I had learned nothing except that Gretchen was not what she pretended to be. But I feared to ask questions. They might have spoiled all. And the life was so new to me, so quiet and peaceful, with the glamour of romance over it all, that I believe I could have staid on forever. And somehow Phyllis was fading away, slowly, but surely. The regret with which I had heretofore looked upon her portrait was lessening each day, from active to passive. And yet was it because Gretchen was Phyllis in the ideal? Was I falling in love with Gretchen because she was Gretchen, or was my love for Phyllis simply renewing itself in Gretchen? Was that the reason why the portrait of Phyllis grew less holding and interesting to me? It was a complex situation; one I frowned over when alone. It was becoming plainer to me every hour that I had a mystery all of my own to solve. And Gretchen was the only one to solve it.

I shall never forget that night under the chestnuts on the bank of the wide white river. The leaves were gossiping among themselves. They had so much to talk about, and then they knew so much! Had not they and their ancestors filtered the same moonbeams century on century? Had not their ancestors heard the tramp of the armies, the clash of the saber, the roar of the artillery? Had not the hand of autumn and the hand of death marked them with the crimson sign? Ah, the leaves! It is well to press them in books when they themselves have such fine stories to tell.

"Gretchen," said I, echoing my thoughts, "had I been born a hundred years ago I must have been a soldier under Napoleon. He was a great warrior."

"So was Blucher, since it was he who helped overcome the little Corsican."

The Germans will never forgive Napoleon.

"But war is a terrible thing," went on Gretchen.

"Yes, but it is a great educator. It teaches the vanquished how little they know."

"War is the offspring of pride. That is what makes it so abhorred."

"It is also the offspring of oppression. That is what makes it so great."

"Yes. When the people take up arms, it is well. War is the torch of liberty in the hands of the people. Oh, I envy the people, who are so strong, yet know it not. If I were a man, I would teach the people that a king has no divine right, save when it is conferred upon him by them."

"Gretchen, I'm afraid that you're a bit of a socialist."

"And who is not who has any love for humanity?"

"A beautiful woman who is a socialist, Gretchen, is a menace to the king. Sometimes he fears her. At large she is dangerous. He seeks her, and if he finds her he takes away her liberty." All this was said with a definite purpose. It was to let Gretchen know that I knew her secret. "Gretchen, you are an embryo socialist, a chrysalis, as it were."

"No, herr," sadly. "I am a butterfly whose wings have been clipped." I had not expected this admission.

"Never mind," said I. "Gretchen, I do not want you to call me herr; call me Jack."

"Jack!" she said. It became an uncommon name now.

"Whatever your true name may be, I shall never call you anything but Gretchen."

"Ah, Jack!" She laughed, and the lurking echoes clasped the music of that laughter in their wanton arms and hurried it across the river.

"Sing to me," said I.

Then imagine my surprise—I, who had heard nothing but German fall from her lips—when in a heavenly contralto she sang a chanson from "La Fille de Madame Angot," an opera forgotten these ten years!

"Elle est tellement innocente!"

She had risen, and she stood there before me with a halo of moonshine about her head. The hot blood rushed to my ears. Barmaid, socialist or whatever she might be, she was lovable. In a moment I was kissing her hand, the hand so small, so white and yet so firm. A thousand inarticulate words came to my lips, from my heart!

Did the hand tremble? I thought so. But swiftly she drew it from my clasp, all the joy and gladness gone from her face and eyes.

"No, no!" she cried. "This must not be! It must not be!"

"But I"— I began eagerly.

"You must not say it; I command you! If you speak, Gretchen will be Gretchen no more. Yes, the king seeks Gretchen, but will you drive her away from her only haven?" with a choking sound.

"Gretchen, trust me. Shall I go tomorrow? Shall I leave you in peace?" Somehow I believed myself to be in danger. "Speak!"

There was an interval of stillness, broken only by the beating of hearts. Then:

"Stay. But speak no word of love. It is not for such as I. Stay and be my friend, for I need one. Cannot a woman look with favor upon a man but he must needs become her lover? I shall trust you as I have trusted other men, and, though you fail me in the end, as others have done, still I shall trust you. Herr, I conspire against the king. For what? The possession of my heart. All my life I have stood alone—so alone!"

"I will be your friend, Gretchen. I will speak no word of love. Will that suffice?"

"It is all I ask, dear friend. And now will you leave me?"

"Leave you!" I cried. "I thought you bade me stay."

"Ah," putting out her hand, "you men do not understand! Sometimes a woman wishes to be alone when—when she feels that she—she cannot hold back her tears!"

Gravely I bent over her hand and kissed it. It seemed to me, as I let the hand fall, that I had never kissed a woman on the lips. I turned and went slowly down the path. Once I looked back. I saw something white lying at the foot of the tree. Heaven knows what a struggle it was, but I went on. I wanted to take her in my arms and tell her that I loved her. When I reached the inn, I turned again, but I saw nothing. I sat in my room a long time that night, smoking my pipe till the candle gasped feebly and died in the stick and the room was swallowed in darkness.

I did not know, I was not sure, but I thought that, so long as I might not love Phyllis, it would not be a very hard task to love her image, which was Gretchen. You see, Phyllis was so very far away, and Gretchen was so near!

CHAPTER X.

On the next afternoon I was sitting on the porch, with a glass of wine, when Gretchen came out of the inn. Just then, raising my eyes, I saw a group of horsemen approaching. I discerned them to be cavalrymen, petty officers. They were mounted on spirited horses.

"Gretchen," said I, "they are cavalrymen. They do not wear the Hohenphallan uniform. So perhaps it would be just as well for you to go to your room and remain there till they are gone. Ah," said I, elevating the glasses again, "they wear his majesty's colors. You had best retire."

Burlington Route

Canadian Excursions.

If you are going to Eastern Canada this winter, it will help you to read and act on this Important Information.

The Best Route for comfort and quick time is by way of St. Paul and Chicago—through the States.

The Best Railroad is the Burlington, because its accommodations are excellent, its tracks smooth and connections sure.

Reclining Chair Cars are run on all Burlington Route trains, and no extra charge is made for seats. They are more roomy and comfortable than similar cars on other lines. Uniformed porters are in attendance to insure the comfort of travelers.

Leaving St. Paul.—Burlington trains leave St. Paul at 8:15 a. m. except Sunday, and 8:05 p. m. daily, arriving at Chicago in ample time to connect with the most convenient trains for Canadian points.

The Cost.—The price of a ticket to Montreal—or any place west of that city—and return, will be only Forty Dollars.

Tickets can be purchased of your home ticket agent, who will cheerfully give rates and informations. Patrons should ask for and see that their tickets read via the Burlington Route, between St. Paul and Chicago.

Date of Sale.—December 3 to December 31, 1900.

Limit of Tickets.—Each ticket is good for return within three months from date of sale.

Extension of Time can be arranged for with the Canadian ticket agent at your destination, upon payment of a small extra charge.

East of Montreal, to points in Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, the rate will be something above $40.00. The extra rate can be ascertained by applying to your ticket agent.

Our Agent.—Mr. A. L. Eidemiller, our Traveling Passenger Agent, will be at the Clarendon Hotel, Winnipeg, or Hotel Dacotah, Grand Forks, N. D., until December 24th. Application can be made to him for any further information needed.

McKinley's plurality, according to the figures of the Times was 859,824. McKinley's majority was 468,055.

In addition there were votes returned in five states for the candidates of the national union reform party (Seth H. Ellis, of Ohio, for president, and Samuel T. Nicholson of Pennsylvania, for vice president) and in two states for the candidates of the united Christian party (J. F. R. Leonard of Iowa, for president, and John G. Woolley of Illinois, for vice president:) these votes heing as follows: National union reform: Arkansas, 341; Illinois, 672, Indiana, 254; Maryland, 147, and Ohio, 4,284; total, 5,698. United Christian: Illinois, 352; Iowa, 166; total 518.

EVERY DAY A LIFE.

A Happy New Year to all our readers; and as a basis for your New Year's resolution, we commend the following:

Let every dawn of morning be to you as the beginning of life, and every setting sun be to you as its close: let every one of these short lives leave its sure record of some kindly action done for others—some goodly strength or knowledge gathered for yourself: so from day to day, and strength to strength you shall build up indeed, hy art, by thought, and by just will, an Ecclesia, of which it shall not be said, "See what manner of stones are here," but "See what manner of men."

The official census of Grand Forks places the population at 7,652.

The average parent hegins to realize another blessing—the fact that he needs not fear the abduction of his child for purposes of blackmail.

It is said that Felsing & Gustafson, ot Maple Bay, are looking up a location for their straw stacker factory. This firm has a model plant at Maple Bay, equipped with every facility for doing fine work, and during the summer months forty-five men are employed. During the winter the force is reduced and the manufacture of washing machines and sleds occupies the time. It would not he a bad stroke for Red Lake Falls to secure this factory.

Minnesota butter makers won a great victory at the Paris Exposition, capturing the Grand Prix, three gold medals, five silver medals, and one bronze medal. This is the more surprising when it is rememhered that Northwestern creameries were here brought into direct competition with the leading hutter making countries of the world. Thus fresh laurels have been won hy the great North Star state. As a result there is likely to he an increased foreign demand for our butter, and this will necessitate more creameries. There should be a great development of the dairy industry in the Red River valley during the next ten years. It will help to diversify farming and make it more profitahle. We would like to see a creamery established in every township. The farmers in the southern part of the state have found the dairy industry profitable.

There are, probably, few other women in this country as busy as Mrs. S. T. Rorer, the famous cook, or few who earn as much money. Besides her editorial work for the Ladies Home Journal, which involves writing several thousand letters each year, she conducts a hig cooking school in Philadelphia, and lectures almost constantly during the season, traveling through all sections of the country. Mrs. Rorer has never had a headache, she is never ill, and, in her appearance, is certainly the best example one could have of her theories as to the right way to live.

Tom Reed's epigram, that congress is really nothing more than government by committee, is a mighty truth. It is verified every day. Under the present rules a committee report on any proposed legislation if favorable is adopted by the house. The real work is done by the important committees, like appropriations, military affairs, ways and means, naval, merchant marine and interstate, and foreign commerce, and rivers and harbors. Fortunate, indeed, is the state having representation on these committees, and Minnesota has a member on each one except naval affairs.

Vic's Letter.

Manila P. I. Nov. 6, 1900.

Editor Gazette:—

Matters have been very quiet here of late except for a few ladrones (robhers) and outlaws we could almost count this as one of the most peaceful months we have had.

The murder and robbery of A. B Wilson, superintendent of the Manila Water Works. Is one of the most shocking and hrutal known to the citizens and soldiers of Manila. It appears that early yesterday morning Mr. Wilson started out for the water works in company with a native assistant engineer to pay the workmen their wages and for this purpose he carried with him abuut $2,000. He had paid the natives at the Deposito and was on his way to the Santolan pumping station when he was waylaid on the road, evidently by a band of the notorious ladrones that infest that district, and shot, the motive being robbery. His body was discovered by the American patrol, (who had been nutified by the native assistant who accompanied Mr. Wilson) shortly hefore three o'clock yesterday. Eight bullet wounds were found on his body, which had been thrown into the paddy field by the side of the road.

He was shot from behind, first in the leg, inflicting a slight wound. Mr. Wilson then dismounted from his carrumata to protect himself. At the same time the cochero and his native assistant (who had been given Mr. Wilson's revolver) escaped, after which a volley was fired at Mr. Wilson, sevon shuts taking effect.

Two detachments of native police were next on the scene and at 5:30 p. m. troops I and F of the 4th Cavalry were scouring the country in hopes of running down the murderous gang, which is eight in number.

The native assistant who accompanied Mr. Wilson has heen arrested un suspicion of complicity in the crime.

This was the second ocassion on which Mr. Wilson had travelled uver this road without an escort. He was warned when he started out yesterduy to take a guard with him hut he replied that he thought he could make the journey safely.

Just hefore tho ludrones made their appearance a native cutting grass on the side of the road was seen to make a signal. Shots were afterwards fired from behind the carrumata, which has seven hullet marks in the back of it.

The sad news has cast quite a gloom in Manila. Mr. Wilson was one of the best known and most respected residents. He came to Manila in 1891 and has been the engineer in charge of the water-works for a number of years. He is a cousin of Fred Wilson, of Manila.

There are several hangings to take place soon and it is quite a usual thing for the carpenters of this company of engineers to be called upon to erect scaffolds. They are carefully planned, so that even the shrewest detective could not find out who pulled the trap or even tho men detailed to the work themselves do not know.

It is surprising how these natives took things at heart in the returns of the Presidential election. From the time that the first cablegram came to the Palace (the Gov. Gen. office) the natives crowded around the bulletin board. All were anxious to see for themselves. Great betting was done, for that is one thing that the average Philippinos will do. They will het or gamhle the last cent they have if they see any show to gain. It was astonishing to hear some shout out Hurrah for either Byran or McKinley and by a good many that could say no more then those few words in English.

I expept to he stationed out near Calamba a little station on the Lake of Bay about 35 miles from here. A few men leave tomorrow for that point on a map sketching trip of ahout three months, and I expect to go with them as one of the crew.

This is all for this time. I am as ever.

"Vic."

A HAPPY ⁂
⁂ NEW YEAR

I wish you all, and thank you for your patronage in the past and hope that I have merited a continuance of the same.

Now is the time for resolutions. Some may say, make no New Years' resolutions so you will have none to break, but I do not believe in that. I believe in making good resolutions and strictly adhering to them. For next year I resolve to treat my customers as well as we have in the past, and better, if possible; to sell goods as cheaply as they can be legitimately sold anywhere; not to be undersold by anyone; to keep our store up to standard in styles and fashions; to make it the best store in the city. If we fail in any of these resolutions, you will do us a favor to let us know wherein we fail.

This is the time of the year to TURN OVER A NEW LEAF.

If you are not entirely satisfied with your trading place why not try us? Give us a trial and see if you cannot improve on the old place. We say it, we mean it, we can prove it, that in many lines, our goods are distinctly superior to other lines. In Clothing, Shoes of all Kinds, Gents' Furnishings, Ladies' Gloves we are pre-eminent leaders. To sum up you better also make at least one good resolution, and let that be to trade with us.

Remember our free shoe offer to some lucky purchaser of a suit or overcoat. Somebody will be pleased. You may be the one.

Wm. Schaper is one of the progressive kind. He not only raises wheat, but is an enthusiastic advocate of diversified farming, and practices what he preaches. At present he is making an effort to get stocked up with fresh milch cows to be ready for the opening of the creamery in the spring. Among his other progressive ideas is that of paying for his local newspaper every year in advance.

Wiley Tindolph, the well known real estate dealer in Thief River Falls, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, and it opens one of the heaviest cases ever begun in the federal court in this district. Mr. Tindolph places his liabilities at $119,281.55 and his assets amount to $81,253.79 of which $153 is exempt. Mr. Tindolph has for years been engaged in business in Minneapolis in addition to his interests in Thief River.

Agent Thomas is always doing something to make someone happy. On Christmas he went at it on a large scale by entertaining at his cozy home the G. N. train crew. The dinner was so great that it was necessary to put an extra steam pressure to pull the puffed up train crew on the return trip. Mrs. Thomas gracefully and ably seconded her husband's generous efforts.

M. K. Wall, the Thief River Falls insurance and real estate hustler, was here Friday telling how he struck a rich lead at the opening of the four White Earth reservation townships, on December 4. His homestead contains 500,000 feet of pine and he has been offered $5 a thousand for it. Logging operations are going on all around it, and he considers that he has stepped into the band-wagon that leads the parade. Those who know Mike say he deserves it all and worse.

John Ford Jr., who has been ill with typhoid fever for several weeks past, died last night at the Palace hotel. He died the death of a martyr to duty and brotherly devotion, having contracted the disease while caring for his brother Steve, whom he faithfully nursed through a long siege of illness and Steve, who regained his health just in time, did not forget the debt of gratitude, remaining with his brother to the last. Deceased is a nephew of Mrs. Ed. Enright, and of Steve Roark, and a brother of Mrs. J. W. McGinty, of Lambert. The funeral service will be held tomorrow from St. Mary's church.

Misses Harriet Brown and Emily Benedict had an experience Friday last that they will not likely soon forget. Driving to Wylie to catch the train, upon their arrival at that point they made the startling discovery that their grips had been lost enroute. The loss of the grips was not in itself such a calamity, had it not been for the fact that in them were the ladies' tickets, and several hundred dollars in currency. The driver hastily going back over the road, soon found the coveted articles, and as fast as his horses could travel hurried back to Wylie, but not until five minutes after the train had pulled out, with the young ladies aboard. Returning to Red Lake Falls the funds were telegraphed them, and the grips dispatched by the next express.

Great Falls, Minn.

Silver Brothers, leading real estate agents of Bemidji, have been appointed local agents for the new townsite of Great Falls at the end of the Brainerd & Northern extension, now being built to the Canadian border. The first lots have been placed on the market and are selling for $200 or $300 a piece. All the homesteads near the prospective city have been taken up in the past six weeks. Tams Bixby and Harris Richardson, of St. Paul, are the heaviest owners in the new townsite. For years the water power of the Big Fork river has received the consideration of capitalists, and a railroad is all that is lacking to see it developed. Backus & Brooks, the lumbermen, intend to operate there the largest pulp mills in the country.

Cost nearly $100,000 to produce. Contains nearly 100 full page engravings of our Saviour and His Mother by the world's greatest painters. True copies of the greatest Masterpieces in the art galleries of Europe. Every picture is as beautiful as a sunrise over the hilltops. Contains decription of the paintings, biography of the painters, the names and locations of the galleries in Europe where the originals may be seen. Also contains a Child's Department, including a Child's Story of the Christ and His Mother, beautifully written, to fit each picture. This wonderful book, matchless in its purity and beauty, appeals to every mother's heart, and in every Christian home where there are children the book sells itself. Christian men and women are making money rapidly taking orders. A Christian man or woman can in this community soon make $1,000 taking orders for Christmas presents. Mrs. Waite, our agent in Massachusetts, has sold over $3,000 worth of the books in a very short time. Mrs. Sackett, our agent in New York, has sold over $1,500 worth of the books in a very short time. The book is printed on velvet-finished paper, beautifully bound in Cardinal Red and gold, and adorned with Golden Roses and Lilies. It is without doubt, the most beautiful book of this century. THE HOUSEHOLD.

Women and Bric-a-brac—Self Heating Hair Curler—Salted Almonds.

"There are no people on the face of the earth who litter up the rooms of their homes with so much useless and consequently bad furnishing as do the Americans," writes Edward Bok in The Ladies' Home Journal. "The curse of the American home today is useless bric-a-brac. A room in which we feel that we can freely breathe is so rare that we are instinctively surprised when we see one. It is the exception rather than the rule that we find a restful room. As a matter of fact, to this common error of overfurnishing so many of our homes are directly due many of the nervous breakdowns of our women. The average American woman is a perfect slave to the useless rubbish which she has in her rooms. This rubbish, of a costly nature where plenty exists and of a cheap and tawdry character in homes of moderate incomes, is making housekeeping a nerve racking burden. A serious phase of this furnishing is that hundreds of women believe these gimcracks ornament their rooms. They refuse to believe that useless ornamentation always disfigures and never ornaments. Simplicity is the only thing that ornaments. It does more; it dignifies. The most artistic rooms are made not by what is in them, but by what has been left out of them. One can never quarrel with simplicity, and nothing goes to make for perfect good taste so surely as a simple effect. A tasteful effect is generally reached by what has been left undone. And that is the lesson most needed in America today—not what we can put into a room, but what we can leave out of it."

Self Heating Hair Curler.

A flame to heat the hair curler is not always at hand, especially when traveling, and rather than ask for a light the hair is often allowed to remain in a disheveled state when a few minutes' work would greatly add to the neat appearance of the wearer. With the idea of providing an apparatus which will be ready for use in an instant Albert C. Moore has designed the combination lamp and curling iron here shown. The lamp is a small tube, with a wick at one end and a pronged support at the side, the tube being of the proper diameter to fit snugly inside the end of the handle, being held in place by a snap spring. The reservoir is provided with a screw cap to prevent leakage or evaporation of the alcohol or other liquid, and the supporting fork turns in against the side of the reservoir when not in use. To heat the iron the lamp is removed from the handle and ignited, when the fork is turned outward and the iron rested in the prongs until it becomes sufficiently heated for use.

Almonds as an Appetizer.

Salted almonds still hold the place of honor as an appetizer to serve at dinner with the cheese and crackers or at an afternoon tea. Purchased of first class confectioners they may be classed as luxuries. Prepared at home—and they are very little trouble—they are not at all expensive. Select the best Jordan almonds. These are not the expensive paper skinned nut, but a hard shelled sweet almond that retails at 25 cents per pound in the streets. Crack and blanch by pouring boiling water over them. Let them stand covered for five minutes, then rub off the skins of the nuts one by one with the finger and thumb. This is easily done if the water was actually boiling. Dry the blanched nuts with a coarse towel, then set in the warming oven until all the moisture is absorbed. Measure and allow two tablespoonfuls of the best olive oil or the same amount of melted butter to each pint. Toss the nuts in this until evenly and thoroughly coated and set back in the warming oven for a half hour or until the oil is partly absorbed. Spread the almonds on a dripping pan and sprinkle with two tablespoonfuls of fine salt, taking pains to distribute it evenly. Set in a moderately hot oven until crisp and slightly colored, stirring frequently. If temperature is right, it will not take over 10 or 12 minutes.

To Preserve Stale Bread.

When stale bread has become so hard that it cannot be eaten, it should be grated into a coarse powder and put into jars the same as those used for preserves. If kept well covered from the air and in a dry place, it will keep for a considerable time without becoming moldy or bad. It is not always convenient to obtain stale bread just when one wants it, and these powdered crumbs are very handy to have on such occasions as when a bread pudding is being made, when desired for fowl dressings or in forming meat balls, fish croquettes, etc.

Spiced Grapes.

A good recipe for spiced grapes is as follows: Put five pounds of grapes into a preserving kettle with four pounds of brown sugar, one pint of vinegar, a little pepper and one tablespoonful each of cloves and allspice. Place the kettle where it will be subject to a moderate heat and cook slowly for three or four hours.

BY VOTE OF 55 TO 18

HAY-PAUNCEFOTE TREATY RATIFIED BY THE SENATE.

Final Session Occupies Only an Hour and Ten Minutes—All Committee Amendments Are Adopted and the Others Rejected—Some Explanatory Speeches Made.

WASHINGTON, Dec 22.—After spending the greater part of the past fortnight in considering the Hay-Pauncefote treaty for the modification of the Clayton-Bulwer convention of 1850 the senate consumed only one hour and ten minutes in amending it and ratifying it as amended. During the time there were six roll calls and several viva voce votes. The first five of the roll calls were on amendments offered by individual senators and the last one on the resolution to ratify the treaty as amended. All the amendments except those offered by Senator Lodge and reported by the committee on foreign relations were voted down by majorities averaging about 10. The ratification resolution was adopted by a vote of 55 to 18.

The senate was in executive session for about an hour before the time for voting arrived listening to speeches by Senators Thurston, Gallinger, Wolcott and Bard explanatory of their attitude. Senator Lodge, who as a member of the committee on foreign relations, has since the death of Chairman Davis, lost no time in demanding that the voting begin when 3 o'clock arrived. The foreign relations committee amendments were read first. Senator Lodge himself suggested a verbal amendment to the first of these, adding the word "convention" after the word "which" so as to make the amendment read "which convention is hereby superseded." He explained that suggestion had been made that without the addition of the word the amendment might be construed as applying only to article 8 of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, whereas, he said, it was intended to apply to the entire treaty. The amendment was accepted, the two committee amendments then were both accepted without division.

Piloted the Treaty Through the Senate

All the amendments suggested having been acted upon and those of the committee adopted, Senator Allen asked for the reading of the treaty as amended. The request was complied with and the vote was taken upon the treaty itself, resulting in its ratification.

A NEW ARMY BILL.

Senate Committee Will Report a Substitute for the House Measure.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—The subcommittee of the senate committee on military affairs has completed its work on the army reorganization bill and will at once report the result of its labors to a full committee of the senate.

The sub-committee will report a complete substitute for the house bill and while much of the language is the same as that of the house measure, there are numerous changes.

Probably the most important change is in the provision regarding the artillery arm of the service. The subcommittee recommends the retention of the present regimental organization of the artillery and does not give its assent to the corps organization proposed by Secretary Root and accepted by the house. In the matter of appointment of staff officers, the bill follows largely the lines of the recommendation made by Secretary Root.

The house canteen provision was amended so as to permit the sale of beer at the canteens. This exception was made by omitting the word "beer" from the prohibited articles.

The maximum strength of the army is to be 100,000 men.

REPORTS SUBMITTED.

House Committee Badly Divided on the Reapportionment Bill.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—Representative Hopkins, chairman of the committee on census, has filed in the house the majority report on the reapportionment bill reported by his committee fixing the membership of the house for the next decade at 357. Representative Burleigh of Maine filed a minority report, signed by six members, in favor of a house to be composed of 386 members, and Representative Crumpacker of Indiana, who signed the Burleigh report, also submitted an independent report in favor of reducing the representation in the Southern states to the extent of the abridgment of the suffrage. His independent report favors a house composed of 374 members.

BY A VOTE OF 7 TO 6.

House Committee Agrees to Report Hopkins Reapportionment Measure.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—The house committee on census, by a vote of 7 to 6, has agreed to report the Hopkins reapportionment bill, leaving the total membership of the house at 357, as at present, and rearranging a number of state delegations. The bill will not be taken up until after the holidays.

THE POPULAR VOTE.

Nearly Fourteen Million Ballots Cast at the Recent Election.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—The Times publishes a table showing the popular vote for presidential electors in the recent election. The total vote, including 6,211 scattering, was 13,967,299. Of this McKinley received 7,217,677, and Bryan 6,357,853. Woolley, Prohibitionist, received, so far as reported, 207,368; Barker, Middle-of-the-Road Populist, 50,188; Debs, Social Democrat, 84,552, and Maloney, Social Labor, 33,450.

McKinley's plurality, according to the figures of The Times, was 859,824; McKinley's majority was 468,055.

THE OFFICIAL VOTE.

State Canvassing Board Tabulates the Returns.

The state canvassing board has completed the count of the vote at the last general election and has issued certificates to the successful candidates. The figures of the board on the vote of the election were officially certified as follows:

DECIDE NOT TO CONTEST.

Minnesota Democrats Will Make No Fight for the Governorship.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 25.—It has been decided at a meeting of the executive committee of the Democratic party of Minnesota that there will be no contest of the vote for governor. This action was taken after the most careful consideration of the entire subject. The contest would have entailed a financial burden of something like $25,000 or $35,000, and perhaps more. At least six months' time would be required to settle such a controversy and various other tedious obstacles would have presented themselves.

RATES ORDERED REDUCED.

Minnesota Railroad Commission After Ore-Carrying Roads.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 25.—The railroad commission has issued an order for the reduction of ore rates on two of the largest ore-carrying roads on the iron range—the Duluth, Missabe and Northern and the Duluth and Iron Range. In the case of the Duluth, Missabe and Northern an order was issued reducing the rate from 80 to 60 cents a ton. The Duluth and Iron Range has had a rate of 80 cents, 90 cents and $1. This rate was reduced to 60 cents, 70 cents and 80 cents respectively.

SUSTAINS MERCER.

Decision of Secretary Hitchcock as to Dead and Down Timber.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24.—Secretary of the Interior Hitchcock has made the following statement:

"After giving full hearings to all parties concerned, I have decided to sustain Captain Mercer, and to allow all contracts entered into by him to stand and be carried out, as related to dead and down timber."

This turns down the Weyerhaeuser offer of $2,000 more than the present price.

Fourth District for Clapp.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 21.—General Clapp is now the unanimous choice of the Fourth district legislators for the United States senatorship. At a meeting of that body at the Merchants hotel his candidacy was discussed and the entire membership of both house and senate decided to support him unqualifiedly when the time for the contest arrives. No other name was talked of at the meeting, the members signifying their enthusiastic support of the St. Paul man at the outset.

Child Burned to Death.

RED LAKE FALLS, Minn., Dec. 20.—The 2-year-old son of Joseph Ducharme, a prominent farmer living six miles south of the city, died from the effects of burns. His mother went out after a pail of water, and, returning five minutes later, was met by the child enveloped in flames and burned all over the body. The mother's hands were burned in tearing off the child's clothes.

Duluth Delegation for Evans.

DULUTH, Dec. 23.—At a caucus of the Republican senators and representatives of the Forty-ninth, Fiftieth and Fifty-first districts here, all of whom were present except Senator Hawkins, Robert G. Evans was unanimously endorsed to succeed the late Senator Davis. Senator Daugherty was chairman of the caucus and Representative George G. Mallory secretary.

Supreme Court Turns Him Down.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 22.—The supreme court has denied the application of ex-Alderman Bell of St. Paul for a writ of quo warranto to oust the city officials on the ground that the case was not properly in the supreme court's jurisdiction. The ex-alderman was told that if he thought himself entitled to his office he had a remedy in the Ramsey district court.

CONTROL RAILWAYS

STATE COMMISSION FAVORS GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP.

Fight Over Great Northern Telegraph Lines Decided in Favor of the Western Union—Boycott of the Chicago Great Western—Old Time St. Paul Printer Dead—State News in General.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 20.—The Minnesota railroad commission is on record as favoring government control of railroads. In a supplement to its report of a few days ago it says:

"We are convinced that the only remedy for those discriminations, from which the various business interests suffer, that will prove adequate and sufficient, at the same time that it will not prove burdensome to private property interests, is public ownership and operation of railroads. Whether this end should be sought within the limits and jurisdiction of the state is a question for future consideration, resting largely upon the action taken by our federal authorities.

"If the way opens to federal control, then the state might escape the duty of undertaking the enterprise for itself. On the other hand, if, as seems obvious, federal control is a remedy too remote to enter into immediate calculations, the question arises as to not only the powers, legal and practical, of the state, to engage in this public business on its own account, but also, of its duty to the varied interests of its citizens."

MILLIONS ARE AT STAKE.

Contest for Telegraph Lines of Great Northern Has Begun.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 20.—The most important case that has been before the United States circuit court in this city for many years has commenced before Judge Lochren. It is the long pending suit of the St. Paul and Manitoba Railway company (now the Great Northern) against the Western Union and Northwestern Telegraph companies. Stripped of legal verbiage the case involves the ownership and control of the telegraph lines along the right of way of the Great Northern Railway company from this city to the Pacific coast. The value of these lines is between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000.

The telegraph lines were built jointly by the railway company and the telegraph companies, under contracts specifying the rights of both parties for a period of 10 years. The agreements expired several years ago, and now the railway company claims that the ownership of the wires has reverted to it.

The telegraph companies have been offered reasonable compensation for any interest they may think they own in the lines, but they have refused to accept it, claiming that they are still part owners of the system of wires and poles.

A decision has been rendered in favor of the telegraph company.

LOOKS LIKE A BOYCOTT.

Western Roads Said to Have Placed Ban on Great Western.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 21.—The Globe says: From information that has reached this city it appears that the executive officials of the Chicago-Missouri river and the St. Paul-Chicago lines at their meeting at Chicago Monday were not quite as harmonious as reports first indicated. The meeting was secret and therefore what actually took place was at first impossible to get hold of. It is now reported that the Chicago Great Western road was boycotted at this meeting and that the offense which invited this stringent action was the persistent refusal of President Stickney to recede from his independent attitude on the rate proposition and agree to enter into pooling arrangements.

The boycott was intended to involve a cutting off of rates and divisions from the Great Western, a refusal to interchange through traffic with that road and declining to check or have any business relations whatever with that road.

The meeting was directed by the financial interests which control the Western roads, and the object of it was to restore harmonious relations among the roads, and arrange for the maintenance of the tariff rates after the first of the new year. All the roads were represented except the Chicago Great Western and in consequence the boycott action was taken.

OLD TIME PRINTER DEAD.

Michael Treacy of St. Paul a Victim of Blood Poisoning.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 19.—Michael Treacy of Brown, Treacy & Co. died at his home, 659 East Third street, at 3:30 o'clock p. m. About two weeks ago he began to suffer pain in the thumb of his right hand. He did not think it all serious at first, but soon was troubled so much that he consulted a physician. The physician saw at once that blood poisoning had set in and acquainted Mr. Treacy's family with the fact. He gradually grew worse until Sunday night. A marked change for the worse then took place and in a few hours he was unconscious.

Mr. Treacy had been identified with the printing business in St. Paul since 1858, and since 1882 had been connected with the firm of which he was a member at the time of his death.

Ireland Denies the Story.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 24.—Archbishop Ireland, who has just returned from Washington, denies the report that he is to go to Cuba as an appointee of President McKinley. He said he might go to that island in the near future but it will not be as an official representative of the present chief executive.

Pressfeeders Go on Strike.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 21.—The members of Pressfeeders' union No. 9 of St. Paul, about 100 in all, went on strike Wednesday morning. They demand $2.25 more a week and the employers say they will not grant the increased scale.

NORSEMEN AT ODDS.

THE PRINCE REGENT OF NORWAY AND SWEDEN IN TROUBLE.

Gustave Is Disliked by the Norwegians, Who Seek Separation—Plausibility of Sweden's Contention—Revival of an Old Quarrel.

The spirit of unrest that sent the Norsemen of old to the ends of the earth—some say to America itself—is again manifesting itself in the ancient kingdom of Norway. The hardy Norwegians, who draw the breath of freedom from their mountains and fiords, are again agitating the question of breaking their unwelcome yoke with Sweden, their sister country.

The present agitation is due to the fact that the king of the dual monarchy, Oscar II, a scholarly and mild mannered man, is ill, and his son, Prince Gustave, has assumed the regency. Gustave is extremely unpopular in the Norwegian moiety of his realm owing to his determined resistance to the demands of the Norwegians for more independence in foreign and other affairs. The Swedes, with Prince Gustave at their head, say that the Norwegians having obtained an ell in having their separate flag granted want a yard and desire the complete separation of the two kingdoms. This they are determined not to grant, for they contend, with great show of reason, that the union of the two kingdoms is all that prevents their sharing the fate of Finland, that of being gobbled up by the Russian bear.

KING OSCAR OF SWEDEN.

Norway and Denmark were united for many centuries as one kingdom until the early part of this century. Sweden was also at one time a part of the union. When the coalition was formed against Napoleon, one of the conditions was that in event of success Sweden and Norway should be united under one king. The Norwegians offered resistance to this plan and elected as king the heir of the old royal line of Sweden. He proved incompetent, and the Swedish king, who was formerly Napoleon's marshal, Bernadotte, became king as well of Norway. Each of the two halves of the monarchy retained its own constitution and was in fact autonomous. The union has not proved altogether a peaceable one, and there have been continual threats of secession on the part of the Norwegians. The present king, Oscar II, has been successful in conciliating his rebellious Norwegian subjects, but his heir apparent, Prince Gustave, is a firebrand to them. He has persistently and successfully opposed their desires for greater freedom in foreign affairs and for separation.

HOUSE WAGON AND HEALTH.

Trip of Three Thousand Miles Made by the Farnsworth Family.

Here is a consumptive who has recovered his health in a new way. A year ago when Mr. E. E. Farnsworth left Winfield, Kan., he could hardly walk owing to his weakness and emaciation, whereas now he is the picture of health, brown as an Indian and apparently cured of all his ailments. As a last resort, when he saw that the disease was getting the better of him, he decided to start off on a novel journey. A house wagon was built which for one year was his only home and that of his wife and her father. This was drawn by a pair of horses. The trip covered about 3,000 miles, traversed six states and even entered Mexico. They discovered and investigated some practically unknown cliff dwellings, and not a day's illness marred the success of their journey. When they found a particularly desirable spot, they would remain there until their provisions were exhausted and then move on leisurely.

HAPPY NEW YEAR.

As the Wylie Gazette makes its last visit to its readers, in 1900, it asks you all to accept its greeting—A Happy New Year! We stand ready to say our farewell to the old year. When we say farewell to a friend, what mean more than the words "I wish you success"? Certainly a happy new year is the best we can get. If we are happy we are content: if we are content, we have all we need.

As we look back over the past year, we say that some have been by nature's force, severely punished; all of us say that the year might have been better. Those that read this, have been more abundantly blessed with the necessaries of life than many around them. And those of you who lost your share entirely, are people who have fought through many hard life battles, never before gave up hope or courage, and will not do it now; belonging to people who knew nothing of defeat, and will surely not bury their precious inheritance. To you all a Happy New Year.

PEOPLE OF THE DAY.

Count Boni de Castellane has been legally restrained from squandering any more of the Gould millions, George Gould having been appointed by the French courts as trustee of the estate of his sister Anna, who a few years ago married the titled young spendthrift. The count is said to have spent in speculation and otherwise something like $5,000,000 of the money which his wife inherited from the great American railroad financier. The stories of the count's extravagance have surprised even Paris, while his antics in French politics and his opera bouffe duels have made him a laughing stock. The Count and the Countess de Castellane were in this country about a year ago, ostensibly on a visit to the countess' family, but really, it is asserted, to make further drafts on the Gould estate. It seems now that the count has been brought sternly to account and his supply of American dollars effectively shut off.

COUNT BONI DE CASTELLANE.

Victor Emmanuel III as a Coin Expert.

A correspondent writes: "It was my duty to accompany the present king of Italy, then Prince of Naples, throughout his first official visit to the queen. Nothing struck me so much as his perfect courtesy. Even at the Italian embassy, when he received a deputation of Italian bootmakers, who presented him with a pair of boots, he shook hands with all the order of St. Crispin. The boots, by the way, did not quite fit. At Oxford he surprised Professor Max Muller at the Bodleian library. If Oxford is proud of one thing, she is proud of her collection of ancient coins. In pride the professor brought the prince to the cases wherein these relics were exposed. To the consternation of many present, the then Prince of Naples showed an extraordinary knowledge of all the coins displayed. No one knew that he was a numismatist of the first rank and that his own collection was one of the greatest in Europe. It may be noted here that one denarius which Oxford boasted of was pointed out by the youthful prince to be wrongly classified."—London Chronicle.

Will Wed a Poor Man.

Miss Alta Rockefeller, daughter of John D. Rockefeller, has the distinction of being a great heiress who takes a poor man for her husband. He is Parmalee Prentice of Chicago and is reputed to be worth only $10,000. She is the second daughter of the Standard Oil magnate and an heiress to $50,000,000. She is not much of a society girl, but is devoted to church work and at one time was engaged to be married to a Cleveland minister. The engagement was broken off on account of the father's objections. She has an attractive face, is a talented musician and a fine horsewoman. Her trousseau is said to surpass in elegance and costliness that of Queen Wilhelmina, both of which are the product of the most fashionable Parisian modistes.

The Kaiser's Automobile Prize.

Kaiser William has offered $10,000 in prizes for an automobile race from Paris to Berlin. The Automobile club of France and the German Automobile club have combined for the purpose of conducting the race. The kaiser's offer was the result of the long distance road races that were conducted in France last summer. The possibilities of such contests were not known until these events. Since then the German emperor has become personally interested in automobiles and has conducted many experiments with them with a view to having the German army adopt them for war purposes. In the kaiser's race resistance, speed and the amount of fuel consumed will all be considered in awarding the prizes. It is probable that this country will be represented in the contest, as it is to be an open affair.

Cornell's Rowing Schedule.

The oarsmen of Cornell university are arranging an elaborate programme for the next season and Coach Courtney hopes to regain for Cornell her lost place at the head of the intercollegiate oarsmen. The first race that Cornell will take part in will be the second varsity race, which will be rowed on Cayuga lake on May 30. The competing crews will represent Cornell, the University of Pennsylvania, Harvard and, possibly Columbia. Cornell will enter eight oared crews in the varsity and freshman races at Poughkeepsie in June, and, besides that, three or four of the students will go in for the single scull events. A four oared crew will also be entered. Another event that is in prospect for Cornell is a race with the Francis Rowing club crews on Cayuga lake early in the season.

A Celestial Beauty.

Li Hung Chang's wife, the Marchioness Li, is reckoned a great beauty, and she is also one of the cleverest women in her country. She must be considerably over 50 or 60 years of age, but she looks scarcely a day over 35, and her toilets evoke the admiration of all who see them. Her garments are calculated to be no fewer in number than 3,000 or 4,000. Her fur robes are wonderfully beautiful and comprise 500 made from the finest skins. Not the least extraordinary and varied part of her toilet is her hairdressing, which can be accomplished in at least 50 modes.

Mike Johnson has finished threshing at Mr.Moe's farm—the grain that Mr Clelfgard did not sell with the farm.

County surveyor P. O. Hagglund has returned from his western trip to the Coast. He reports a good time, but he likes home the best.

When you need a soothing and healing antiseptic application for any purpose, use the original DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, a well known cure for piles and skin diseases. It heals sores without leaving a scar. Beware of counterfeits. W. A. Schreiter.

Equality.

Louis Sall is building a new barn.

John Hanson is pressing his hay this week.

A grand ball will be given after Christmas.

Christmas passed by and we hardly notice it.

A snow storm made things lively last Saturday.

Tom Sandbekken is here holding down his claim.

Sall Bros. will soon finish up threshing around here.

Gunstein Lundal is here looking over his claim.

Grundy Thompson went to McIntosh yesterday.

Peter Enseby came up from McIntosh last Wednesday.

George Walken made a business trip to Crookston last week.

Saavi Gunderson and Oscar Ligvold left for the woods last week.

Albert Sall went to St. Hilaire last Wednesday, with a load of wheat.

Ole Jore expects to leave soon on an extended trip to the old country.

I. White and H. Camp left Xmas morning for a pleasure trip out east, where the evergreen trees grow.

A. O. Pike has returned from Minto. He will remain here and act as operator for the Great Northern.

Dugdale is badly in need of a feed mill, as there are many farmers here who have considerable grinding to do.

Sam Felsin has returned from Crookston, where he was looking up a location for the Maple Bay blower factory

G. C. Omleges, day operator, has been transferred to Lengby. He was popular here, and we are sorry to see him leave.

When the stomach is tired out it must have a rest, but we cannot live without food. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure "digests what you eat," so that you can eat all the good food that you want while it is restoring your digestive organs to health. It is the only preparation that digests all kinds of food. W. A. Schreiter.

Emardville.

A Happy New Year to all readers of The Gazette.

Bernhard Lillemoe and Gustaf Ohslund are both on the sick list.

L. Lee went to Erskine Wednesday to meet his brother Gehelm Kolberg, who is coming here from Norway.

Rain Saturday morning made the ground slippery because it froze at once, but made sleighing so much better.

Some homesteaders on the North side went to Red Lake Falls last week to make application for final proof on their homesteads.

There was a basket-party at Sven Nilson's last Saturday. The proceeds go towards buying a bell for the school house in district No. 16.

Odelon Gonthiere has now laid up his steam threshing out-fit for this season. He made a very good run. His tread-power is still moving around to the smaller jobs.

Many persons have had the experience of Peter Sherman, of North Stratford, N. H., who says, "for years I suffered torture with chronic indigestion, but Kodol Dyspepsia Cure made a well man of me." It digests what you eat and is a sure cure for every form of stomach trouble. It gives relief at once even in the worst cases and can't help but do you good.—W. A. Schreiter.

A funny horse trade took place the other day between parties residing in the neighbor-hood. The first trade was a young horse against an old horse an a steer calf. This trade not proving satisfactory to the fellow who got the calf, he compelled the other fellow to make it over again. This time the old horse went for a second-hand mackintosh jacket and an old wornout pocket-knife, and there it stands now.

Cold Steel or Death.

"There is but one small chance to save your life and that is through an operation," was the awful prospect set before Mrs. I. B. Hunt, of Lime Ridge, Wis., by her doctor after vainly trying to cure her of a frightful case of stomach trouble and yellow jaundice. He didn't count on the marvellous power of Electric Bitters to cure Stomach and Liver troubles, but she heard of it, took seven bottles was wholly cured, avoided the surgeon's knife, now weighs more and feels better than ever. It's positively guaranteed to cure Stomach, Liver and Kidney troubles and never disappoints. Price 50c at W. A. Schreiter's drug store.
